U. S. Revises Beef Prices To Equalize Zone Supply

Beef Shortage Grows

By the Associated Press

In an attempt to remedy growing shortages of beef in many areas, the Office of Price Administration last night revamped wholesale price ceilings to permit "moderate" increases in some cases.

The order sets forth specific dollars-and-cents ceilings for meat packers in 10 zones. Generally speaking, the prices are arranged in an ascending scale according to the zones' distance from the basing point, Kansas City, Mo. Previously each packer's ceiling was his own highest March price.

Live-cattle prices, touching their highest level since August, 1919, and now 136 per cent of parity, still were left without price control.

Neither was the ceiling of the retail market affected. This now is pegged at each dealer's highest March price. However, OPA said changes in the retail ceiling might come later whenever and wherever necessary to prevent a profit squeeze on butcher shops. This order would specify a fixed margin over cost for retailers.

The new ceiling on beef carcasses and wholesale cuts, effective December 16 for civilian purchases, will give "a moderate rise" in certain instances over present wholesale maximums, OPA said. On an average, the price of good grade beef in Kansas City may rise about 1½ cents a pound.

Price Equalization

However, the prices of packers or wholesalers with abnormally high ceilings will be cut back to the arbitrary maximum, permitting packers with low ceilings to compete for live animals without the financial strain which has threatened to drive some out of business.

The order is expected to assure also a fairer distribution of supplies among retail stores. Each storekeeper will know, OPA said, that the maximum price of his wholesaler will be no higher for his competitor than for himself.

This will eliminate the recent practice of wholesalers selling to those retailers who had higher ceilings and, OPA added, "in general, shrugging off requests of larger volume operators with lower maximums, who therefore could secure only the cheapest cuts or none at all for their customers."

"Thus, many communities where consumers now are unable to secure beef may find their supply picture brighter in the near future."

Mine Blows Debris Over Hurley's Car

Moscow, Dec. 10 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, who returned two days ago from a long tour of the Russian front, was disclosed today to have come so close to hitting a land mine that his car was showered with parts of two trucks which did.

Hurley, United States Minister to New Zealand and one-time Secretary of War under President Hoover, was being driven along a newly captured road following two trucks. Both trucks hit the mine and blew up within his sight.

"Britain's Home Front" Now In Booklet Form

The interest aroused by Agnes E. Meyer's recent series of articles published in The Post was so great that they have been reprinted in booklet form. The articles deal on the social changes in Great Britain resulting from the war.

The booklets are now on sale at the counter in the lobby of The Post Building, 1337 E St. N.W. The cost is 5 cents per booklet at the counter or 10 cents if you want it mailed to you.

Jury Finds No One Balked Naval Inquiry

U. S. Commissioner, Censured for Charges, Alleges 'Whitewash'

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 10.—A Federal Grand Jury reported today it had found "wholly unwarranted and without any basis in fact" charges by United States Commissioner Sidney E. Friedman that Government agents were "hamstrung" in their investigation of reports of fraud and bribery at the $40,000,000 naval supply depot at nearby Mechanicsburg.

The depot is the chief supply base for ships operating on the East Coast and also for material designed for overseas shipment.

The jury, in a presentment to Judge Albert L. Watson, coupled its findings with a recommendation that "persons holding positions of public trust should be held fully accountable for irresponsible and unwarranted accusations that tend to disrupt and destroy national unity and to impair the confidence of the people in the impartial administration of justice."

No Indictments at Present

"In order not to handicap the investigation which is continuing," the jurors added, "no indictments are returned at the present time."

Judge Watson termed the presentment "very gratifying to the court" and dismissed the jurors until early in January.

The grand jury was convened Monday after Friedman, a United States commissioner for 11 years, made his accusation in a newspaper interview in which he also declared there was "a solid basis in fact" in reports of "wholesale theft, bribery and embezzlement" in the construction of the 800-acre project.

Bill to Curb Questionnaires Near Passage

Bureau of Budget Likely to Get Task Of Paring Quiz Forms

The House yesterday moved to within a step of final congressional approval legislation which would give the Bureau of the Budget full authority to weed out hundreds of questionnaires whose abundance has brought bitter complaints from businessmen and launched an investigation in Congress.

Amid tart comments from the floor on the information-seeking procedures of the Office of Price Administration and other Federal agencies, the House unanimously accepted a conference report on the bill which, in effect, would give congressional support to a plan, already instituted by the bureau, for telling the businessman when he may safely toss a Federal questionnaire into the waste basket and when he should fill it out.

Examination Underway

Largely by common consent of questionnaire-issuing agencies, most forms and question blanks are now being examined by the bureau and either approved, rejected or trimmed down. If approved, the forms are given an "approval number." It is intended that forms lacking such a number may be disregarded by businessmen after January 1.

If the Senate follows the House in accepting the conference report, waste-basket filing of unnumbered forms will be doubly safe—sanctioned not only by the executive branch but by Congress.

During discussion of the measure Representative Wolcott (Republican) of Michigan served notice that in the next Congress he would introduce legislation to strip

Questions and Answers on Draft

Registrants Passing Tests Can Choose Service Branch

The most frequent question posed to local draft boards is still: "When am I going to be called for induction into the Army?"

Prohibition by presidential order of enlistments of draft-age men in any branch of the armed forces has created some confusion and elicited hundreds of questions from men desirous of volunteering for various types of service. The Post conducted a survey yesterday of local boards and obtained answers to some of the questions.

A registrant wishing to serve with the Navy or Marine Corps, but who cannot enlist through recruiting stations, may go to his draft board and ask to be taken into these branches instead of the Army. In this way the quotas of the Navy and Marine Corps might be filled.

The local boards will allow the registrant to go into these forces provided he can pass the required tests. Enlistment of this kind, it was said, will assure the registrant of duty in a desired unit of the Navy or Marine Corps.

If the registrant does not pass the examinations of the Navy and Marine Corps he will be taken into the Army.

Questions and answers relative to the recent order placing men of 38-45 in 4-H and other draft affairs follow:

Q. Does the 4-H classification of 38 to 45 year old men mean that they will not be called for service at all?

A. No; 4-H is a deferred classification and means that for the time being they will not be called for service, but it does not mean a permanent deferment.

Q. Will men who will become 38 within a few months of the time they receive their induction notice be inducted before they reach 38 or will they be deferred?

A. Any man who would be 38

Leaders Hope To Adjourn By Tuesday

Last Obstacle Gone; House Is Ready To Quit, Question Left Up to Senate

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

House and Senate leaders strove for agreement to effect adjournment of the Seventy-seventh Congress next week.

"The question of adjournment is up to the Senate," said one of them. "The House is ready to quit any time."

It was his opinion that adjournment sine die of the Congress that has sat during the most momentous period of American history was "probable." The leaders, it was learned, were hoping for Senate and House approval of an adjournment resolution on Tuesday.

Last Obstacle Removed

The last obstacle to adjournment appeared to have been removed when the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday formally buried the third war powers bill, a measure anxiously sought by President Roosevelt. The measure, even after modification of the original White House bill to meet the most serious objections of its foes, has been dead, to all intents and purposes, for at least two weeks.

Marking the first substantial rebuff to the President since the November 3 election and portending more critical days for the Administration in the future, the Ways and Means Committee, in executive session, adopted unanimously a resolution to "postpone further consideration of this bill in this Congress."

Notified of Burial

A short time later, it was learned, House leaders formally notified President Roosevelt of the measure's burial and of the futility of hoping for resurrection before the new Congress meets after January 3.

Speaker Rayburn said an attempt probably would be made to restore life to the bill next year—"in some form." The Ways and Means Committee chairman, Representative Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, said that there was "no reasonable possibility" of passage of the bill this year. The measure was "passed over without prejudice for the new Congress to consider if it wants to," he added.

Another committee member, Representative Jenkins (Democrat) of Ohio, took a different view. He said: "I think the sentiment of the majority of the committee is against granting to the President the sweeping powers provided in this bill. I predict that it will not be revived next session but, if it is, it will be defeated."

In the form in which it was requested by the White House, the bill would have authorized the President to suspend tariff and immigration laws. Republicans and conservative Democrats in the House combined against the measure almost immediately, and a

Grade Students Get Smoking Room In Tennessee

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 10 (AP).—A special smoking room has been set up at a public grammar school in Shelby County for juvenile smokers.

After the noonday meal nine youngsters—their ages range from 12 to 14—saunter to the "smoker" at Frayser School for a cigarette.

Miss Esse Anderson, principal, said she started the custom recently after all remedies to break up campus smoking failed. She called the boys together:

"Bring me a note from your parents that it's all right for you to smoke and you can use this room to do your smoking." Nine notes trickled in, all for seventh and eighth graders.

Miss Anderson blames the war for the move. It has brought scores of new children to her territory, packing the school. "Our teachers have so many under their jurisdiction they just can't keep their eyes on all of them."

There's a third-grader who smokes, she said, but he can't join the school-approved club until he gets his parents' permission.

Miss Sue Powers, superintendent of county schools declared that she would ask tomorrow that the policy be discontinued.

Allied Planes Pour Into Tunisia; Reds Foil Nazi Counterattacks; Yanks, Aussies Clean Out Gona

Foe Loses 50 Tanks, 3500 Men During Savage Efforts To Smash Wedges

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Friday), Dec. 11.—Thousands of German troops supported by scores of tanks charged from their ice-covered fortifications yesterday in sustained counterattacks on the central and Stalingrad fronts, but the Russians said they destroyed at least 3500 Nazis and 50 tanks, and held firmly to the wedges they have driven into German positions.

"At the cost of heavy losses the enemy succeeded in advancing slightly" in an undisclosed sector on the central front, the midnight Russian communique conceded. But it added "all attempts by the Germans to develop their success were frustrated by our units.

"In these engagements the Germans suffered great losses in men and materiel. Forty crippled or burned out tanks were left by them on the battlefield. Nine German aircraft were shot down in air combats and two were destroyed by antiaircraft fire."

60 Tanks Used in Attack

The Germans used 60 tanks in this counterattack and lost two-thirds of them. Presumably this strong Nazi effort occurred somewhere between Rzhev and Velikie Luki, the two points northwest of Moscow where the heaviest fighting has been going on. Field dispatches earlier had reported a Russian advance of 7.2 miles and the capture of 13 villages, but did not give the length of time this advance took.

Russian communiques for several days have stressed the increasingly stubborn resistance the Red army is meeting both on the central front, and northwest and southwest of Stalingrad. Observers here said this was certain to occur as the Red army dug deeper into the bristling defenses the Nazis have erected at all rear line communication points.

The noon communique yesterday said these Nazi counterattacks and continued Red Army offensive operations had cost the Germans approximately 2000 dead, and the midnight bulletin increased that to 3500.

73 Transports Destroyed

In addition, the Russians said they had destroyed 73 big Nazi transport planes in three days in the Stalingrad area, where the enemy was trying to ferry supplies to troops menaced at the rear of Stalingrad between the Volga and Don Rivers.

The strongest Nazi counterblows aside from the central front were being delivered in this midrivers sector northwest of Stalingrad, the communique said, in acknowledging

First Lady Denies Revealing Losses At Pearl Harbor

New Bedford, Mass., Dec. 10 (AP). Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt flatly denied tonight that she had given any information about loss of battleships at Pearl Harbor to Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles.

"How could I have made such a statement," Mrs. Roosevelt asked, "when neither I nor anyone else at the White House knew the extent of the damage at that time?"

Mayor Bowron had said last night in a radio talk, that Mrs. Roosevelt told him "we had lost six battleships" at Pearl Harbor and that she made the statement two days after the Jap attack.

"I have not read Mr. Bowron's statement," Mrs. Roosevelt said, "but I understand he attributed specific information to me on battleship losses. I could not possibly have given him that information.

"I might possibly have given a warning to Mr. Bowron of the danger to the West Coast. I might possibly have told him the damage was more serious than we had thought."

MacArthur's Men Beat Back Desperate Jap Attack at Buna

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Friday), Dec. 11.—The collapse of a counterattack by Japanese ground troops trapped at Buna and confirmation of reports that the Allies have occupied all of Gona on northeast New Guinea's shore were announced today in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's noon communique.

Of Buna, where the Allies now are in position to throw strength hitherto divided between that point and Gona some 12 miles up the coast, the communique stated:

"A night counterattack by the enemy in the Buna area collapsed under our fire. Bitter hand to hand fighting ensued throughout the position in a struggle for pillbox-type enemy machinegun emplacements. Our Air Force continued in direct support of the action."

Of Gona, it said:

Japs' Disastrous Foray Nears Final Phase

By the Associated Press

Melbourne, Dec. 10.—Japan's disastrous foray into southern New Guinea as a preliminary to invasion of Australia neared its final phase today with the announcement that Allied jungle fighters under personal command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur had wiped out the stoutly defended enemy beachhold of Gona and were closing in on Buna to the south.

With the fall of Gona, announced by Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia, the surviving Japanese garrison of the ambitious force that in midsummer threatened the main Allied base of Port Moresby, on the south coast of New Guinea, was left holding only a few miles of bomb-torn ground at Buna

That Buna could hold out much longer against American forces already at its outskirts and fighting bitterly for possession of its airfield was doubtful. Dispatches from that sector said American troops were entrenched at two places at one end of the Buna landing field, with Japanese blazing away from the other end. Allied bombers were reported raking the narrow Japanese-held zone between the airfield and the sea.

Prior to Curtin's announcement that MacArthur's men had cleaned out the Gona sector, the regular communique from Allied headquarters had told of the smashing of a Japanese attempt to break out of the coastal trap under cover of darkness. Ninety-five of the enemy were reported killed and four captured, bringing to more than 400 the number of Japanese re-

Turin Blazes Under Another R.A.F. Smash

200 to 300 Bombers Cascade Explosives On Industrial City

By Alfred E. Wall
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 10.—A strong force of 200 to 300 big R. A. F. bombers cascaded explosives ranging up to 4-ton super block-busters on still-smoking Turin last night for the second successive knockdown blow and the sixth within a month on the northern Italian royal arsenal city.

The Italians again admitted that many buildings were damaged and fires were extensive. They said casualties for last night were still uncounted but that for the previous night's attack on Turin they were now shown to be 75 killed, 112 wounded.

In the latest one-two punch aimed at knocking out a great area of industrial northern Italy, the R. A. F. sent over a "force" on Tuesday night followed by last night's "strong force." The losses in British planes for the two nights were, respectively, one and three bombers, and last night a Lancaster's gunners bagged one Italian fighter.

All the evidence showed that the R. A. F. was implementing at an accelerated pace Prime Minister Churchill's promise to bomb Italy out of the war, for last night's strong force took 90 minutes to pass one coastal point as compared with an hour on Tuesday night.

There was no statement as to how the three bombers were lost on last night's repeat blow, but English coastal observers saw German batteries on the French coast

Hitler Names Nazi 'Gangster' To Head Army

Zeitzler, Political General, Chief of Staff; Friend to Himmler

By E. C. Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 10.—Gen. Kurt Zeitzler, a 47-year-old "political general" who until this year was only a colonel and a personal friend of Nazi Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler, has become Hitler's principal military aide, displacing Gen. Franz Halder as chief of the German general staff.

The official German news agency DNB announced the appointment today, confirming reports that have been current for some weeks.

The German radio later announced that with the appointment of General Zeitzler it became known that three men "of considerable youth" were directing the strategy of the German army, navy and air forces. Col. Gen. Hans Jesschonnek, 44-years-old today, is chief of the general staff of the air force and Admiral Fricke, age not given, is chief of the navy staff. Jesschonnek was described by the radio as the youngest colonel general in the German armed forces. These appointments, although apparently made some time ago, were news to London.

Continental reports reaching London have described Zeitzler as a "gangster" noted for his ruthlessness in the Balkan campaign in 1941 and for his knowledge of armored warfare.

The appointment constitutes a new recognition for the Nazi Party's own arm within the German army—the SS, which Hitler commands. These blackshirts have been strengthened as Hitler's breach

Keeping Pets in Apartment Not 'Frozen' Right, Court Rules

Keeping pets in a leased apartment is not a privilege protected by the District Emergency Rent Act, the Municipal Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The decision was handed down in the case of three tenants of the Marlyn Apartments, 3000 Thirty-ninth Street Northwest, who had sought reversal of a Municipal Court judgment upholding the landlord's right to evict them for violating a provision of their lease forbidding pets in the house.

Defendants in the case were Whitney P. Mee, Philip W. Copelin and Samuel L. Samuel, owners, respectively, of Tonia and Coffee, cocker spaniels, and Baibu, a dachshund.

Last May, Judge Armond W. Scott, sitting in the landlord and tenant branch of the lower court, ordered the defandants to vacate their apartments, following the complaint of the Marlyn Apartment Co. To give the tenants time to abide by the order or remove the dogs, Judge Scott ordered a stay of 30 days.

The case went to the appellate court during this grace period. It was heard by Chief Judge William E. Richardson and Associate Judges Nathan Cayton and Andrew M. Hood.

The tenants argued before the Court of Appeals that the District Rent Act had "frozen" their privilege to keep the dogs—despite a clause in their leases banning pets from the apartments, unless on the written consent of the landlord.

Included among services immune from abridgment, the law provided, were "light, heat, and any other privilege or facility connected with the use or occupancy of housing accommodations."

Written by Judge Cayton, the opinion held that this definition had not been intended to include the housing of dogs.

Air Reinforcements Reach Bases in Assembly Line Style; Rains Slow Activity

By James F. King
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 10.—Fighter planes urgently needed by the Allies to clear the skies for their final full-scale lunge against the Axis in Tunisia were reported pouring into advance bases in "assembly line style" today, but heavy rains created a temporary lull in ground fighting in that sector, broken only by jabbing patrol action.

Dispatches said downpours had turned the winding mountain roads west of Tunis and Bizerte into yellow streams of mud, miring motor vehicles and further complicating the Allies' heavy supply problems.

The Morocco radio reported that Allied forces had resumed the offensive in the Tebourba-Mateur sector, but there was no confirmation from Allied headquarters. Fighting patrols and parachute troops were reported to be busy around the clock, though, and one detachment of Allied parachutists was said to have cut Axis supply routes south of Tunis and to have carried out crippling demolitions within 10 miles of the capital city.

Nazis Claim Seaport

The Berlin radio, quoting "competent German military quarters," reported that Axis forces had occupied Tabarka, Tunisian seaport on the Mediterranean only 10 miles from the Algerian frontier and far into territory presumably controlled by the Allies.

Allied headquarters said they "hadn't heard anything about" the report. Informed military sources said if it were true the Axis would have had to land considerable forces by sea to make the occupation effective. To have reached Tabarka by land, they said, an Axis column would have had to fight its way through strong Allied forces, and no such engagement had been reported on the north coast of Tunisia.

The official German news agency, D. N. B., also made an unsupported claim that the Axis had captured an important pass southwest of Tebourba, as well as two more heights in the same area, and had destroyed 20 Allied tanks. It said all Allied counterattacks on Tebourba had collapsed in the face of strong antitank and ack-ack fire and dive-bomber resistance.

French headquarters in North Africa reported through the Morocco radio that its "offensive reconnaissance movement continued according to plan."

1 Cigarette an Hour Paid to Land Yank Supplies in Africa

The Navy yesterday told how an American officer solved his problem of speedily unloading Army supplies during the occupation of North Africa, November 8.

Ensign Stephen L. R. McNichols, United States Coast Guard Reserve of Denver, Colo., was aboard one of the two Coast Guard transports which landed American troops on a beach near Casablanca. After crews of the ships had successfully ferried the soldiers ashore, they set about the task of unloading supplies.

The work moved slowly, for the men were tired from hours of fighting the French and the surf, and they were bothered by scores of Arabs begging cigarettes. Then McNichols had an inspiration. He dickered with the Arabs and soon had organized a fresh labor battalion who took over the unloading job—at a fixed wage of one American cigarette an hour.

Crippled 'Fort' Blasts 5 Zeros Out of Sky

By Dean Schedler
Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in New Guinea, Dec. 10.—Shooting a way out through swarming Japanese Zeros, an American Flying Fortress limped safely back to its home airport at dusk tonight after destroying five enemy aircraft and probably two others.

The bullet punctured bomber, piloted by Lieut. Melville Ehlers of New Orleans, accounted for half of the ten Zeros announced shot down by Fortresses and Liberators in a savage battle off the coast of New Britain.

Attacking from different directions, and in pairs, the Japanese fighters "made it hot for everyone aboard our ship," Ehlers said.

"Every time one of our gunners halted to shove a fresh clip into a machine gun, another was firing hot and heavy at the attacking Japanese. None of our gunners was light on the trigger."

Zeros shot out Ehler's cable controls, but didn't damage any of the four engines. He landed the big plane as gently as possible and his crew announced, "this is one fight we'd like the folks back home to know about."

Officers with Ehlers were Lieut. Warren Briant, Billerica, Mass., the navigator, and Lieut. Tom Boren, co-pilot.

In one attack by Zeros at a medium height, Lieut. Jim Murphy, Roundup, Mont., shoved the stick forward and dived his Fortress almost into the water. As the Zeros flashed down from above, Murphy's gunners met them with a hail of bullets.

"The fight lasted 15 minutes and we fired 4000 rounds of ammunition, but we knocked out two Japs. We were plenty glad when the little show ended," Murphy said.

Murphy had one request—that the editor of the Salt Lake Tribune tell his girl that he was okay and looking for "those letters."

During the rest of the day's fighting, the following pilots were in bombers that accounted for one Japanese Zero each:

Capt. Kenneth McCullar, Batesville, Miss., who brought his plane home on three engines, with the tail and wings shot up.

Capt. Ed. Scott, Hollandale, Miss.

Lieut. Folmer Soggard, Solvang, Calif.

Scott's and Thomas' planes also had numerous bullet holes.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

OCCUPATION COMPLETE—The Gona area (1) of New Guinea has been completely occupied by Allied forces (arrow). Australian troops engaged in the Gona campaign are now in position to apply a pincer on Buna, which is besieged by American forces that came up from the south. firing on the homing bombers early this morning.

The Germans later reported all three of the downed British bombers fell in France and it was again apparent that the weak antiaircraft defenses in northern Italy had not been reinforced by Germany as promised by Premier Mussolini last week.

For an hour the assortment of Lancasters, Stirlings, Halifaxes and Wellingtons picked their objectives through wisps of smoke drifting from previously demolished structures and set fire and destruction that was visible and audible, like lightning and thunder, from points 90 miles away in Switzerland.

"Numerous fires were started and damage on the whole was great," the Italian high command stated.

The volcano-like columns of smoke rising from the objectives destroyed Tuesday night and the persistence of the attacks by Britain's grand fleet of the air indicated that the bomber command was engaged in systematic destruction of Turin, section by section.

It would thus knock out of the Axis war potential the great Fiat industries making steel and nonferrous metals, sheets and tubes, trucks, tanks, tractors, automobiles, airplane engines, locomotives, wagons and diesel engines. Other industrial targets there include Lancia, making trucks and tractors; Snia Vicosa, producing synthetic textiles, and Montecatini, manufacturing chemicals.

The returning bomber crews said that upon crossing the Alps they found Turin a beacon with fires still blazing from the night before, and coming home they looked back to see the peaks silhouetted in the light of flames leaping high above lakes of fire strewn in the city.

"It was a highly successful raid," said the captain of one four-engine bomber. "An enormous number of incendiaries and a great weight of explosives were dropped into the city."

Even Po Obscured

One Halifax crew member said the glare of the fires was so overpowering that during the height of the raid it was impossible to single out one object in the spreading pools of fire.

Even the river Po, a landmark of the raids on Turin, was obscured by the great merged glow.

The Vichy radio said British planes dropped more than 1000 incendiaries last night over the town and surrounding woods of Virieule-Petit, 30 miles southeast of Bourg, France, and on the airline from southern England to Turin.

Closer home, the R. A. F. made a sweep today over northern France and Belgium, bombing a number of freight trains and leaving a small merchant ship off the Belgian coast enveloped in smoke.

The air ministry said no Nazi planes were encountered on this foray.

gomery really let go "there will be no secret about it."

The Rome radio said the defending forces at El Agheila were awaiting the "zero hour."

DNB declared Stuka dive-bombers had "dispersed" a marching Anglo-American column in Tunisia and claimed that the Allies had been so weakened by what it termed their recent defeat at Tebourba that "they no longer are in position to bring large forces into action on that front."

Alan Humphreys, correspondent for Reuters, described in a dispatch today how a headlong attack by American infantry turned the tide of a violent clash between American and German forces near Tebourba last Sunday.

"The German Panzer units were brought to a standstill by a squall of American fire and were forced to withdraw after suffering heavy casualties," he wrote.

Humphreys said a Major Daniels, medical officer from Little Rock, Ark., estimated that 400 Germans were killed in the final round of the day-long battle. Many others were captured.

Allied air headquarters in Cairo reported that long-range fighters shot down two more big Junkers transport planes yesterday out of a flight of 30 intercepted flying north. The previous day three had been reported shot down and others badly damaged as the Axis persisted in its efforts to reinforce its troops in North Africa by air.

Reuters said Spitfires, Lockheed Lightnings and light bombers were overhead constantly in Tunisia and that the "R. A. F. has now completely caught up with the First Army." The Daily Mail said the veterans of Dunkerque had "weathered the crisis" in which they were expelled from Tebourba and Djeideda and expressed the opinion they now had sufficient air power to deal with the Germans when the front explodes again.

A German communique, noting that bad weather restricted action in Tunisia, said Allied tanks attacking southwest of Tebourba were "repulsed with bloody losses" and some set afire by planes.

The Italians said a "thrust by enemy armored cars were repulsed" west of Tebourba.

by the date of his induction will be deferred.

Q. When will married men in 3-A with no children be called?

A. These men will not be called until the supply of single men has been exhausted, but the elimination of the 38-to-45-year-old group has cut the supply and married men will probably be called in February.

Q. When will single men with dependents be called?

A. Those contributing $40 or less a month to the support of their dependent or dependents are being called now. Others will probably be called in the near future.

Q. Is it still possible for men in 3A to enlist in the Volunteer Officer Candidate program?

A. Yes. Yes, those not over 37.

Q. Is it still possible to obtain a commission direct from civil life?

A. Yes, if you are qualified.

Q. Will high school boys of 18 to 20 be drafted immediately or will they get deferments to finish their school year?

A. Boys of 18 to 20, upon written request, will be given deferments to complete the last half of their school year.

The popular question, "When will I be drafted?" is impossible to answer at present, the draft boards stated, because of the sudden changes.

Japanese Hold At Gona Wiped Out

ported slain in that area in recent weeks.

What appeared to be the imminent final destruction of the enemy's expedition into southern New Guinea, nearest the Australian mainland, did not mean that the Japanese would be entirely eliminated from the island, for they are established at several points farther north.

Yet it did mean that General MacArthur, undertaking his first important land offensive against the Japanese since his retreat from the Philippines, had been successful in throwing back the enemy's first thrust at the Australian mainland.

The Japanese made their initial landing at Gona last July 22, and from their Gona-Buna beachheads started an invasion drive which carried them across the towering Owen Stanley Mountains to within 32 miles of the important Allied base at Port Moresby. Then they were halted, and subsequently were forced to begin their first real retreat of the war back across the mountains, finally to be hemmed in on the narrow strip between Buna and Gona, and cut off from relief from the sea by American bombers and warships.

Curtin warned in his announcement that the Japanese had concentrated strong forces on the Island of Timor, to the northwest of Australia, and could be expected to launch heavy attacks from there.

There were no reports of additional enemy attempts to get seaborne rinforcement through either to Buna-Gona or Guadalcanal in recent days.

Reds Stand Firm In Fierce Attacks

"fierce enemy counterattacks" which, it was said, were repulsed. Ten of the 40 German tanks employed were declared to have been destroyed.

One Russian unit was credited with killing 300 Germans and capturing big stocks of booty including five guns, 19 machine guns, 13 mortars, eight trucks with ammunition, a radio transmitter, 3000 shells and 35,000 rounds of ammunition in the methodical effort to clean out the eastern Don bank.

Another 400 Germans were reported wiped out and 95 blockhouses demolished in the steady war of attrition southwest of Stalingrad.

Four enemy infantry companies also were reported wiped out in scattered fighting on terrain made difficult for both sides by heavy snowstorms.

Inside besieged Stalingrad itself the Russians said their troops still were making gains in the slow process of destroying German blockhouses and pillboxes built in the ruined walls of that city.

(The Germans said the Russians broke their lines between the Volga and Don but subsequently were encircled and annihilated. "Our own attack is being successfully continued" on the central front, the Berlin communique said.)

The Germans on the Velikie Luki-Rzhev sector, well entrenched, recently have been bolstered by numerous special troops including sappers generally middle-aged and some trained only 10 to 20 days, Red Star said. One troop train moving toward the Central Front west of Moscow was attacked by bombers in bad weather. The planes killed many and dispersed the others, dispatches said.

Hitler Names 'Gangster' Army Head

with officers of the Prussian tradition has widened.

Halder was reported offered command of the operational division of the general staff under Zeitzler, at least 10 years Halder's junior, but his decision was not known here.

At the time Halder was dismissed, the enraged Hitler was reported to have summoned him before the entire staff, bluntly expressed his displeasure that Halder was unable to carry out Hitler's ideas about the Russian campaign, and curtly told him "You may go."

Last month a responsible foreign diplomatic source in London said an important faction of aristocratic military leaders, including Halder and Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch, who was dismissed in 1941 as army commander in chief after advising against Hitler's campaign against Moscow, had become convinced that Hitler cannot win the war.

So, this source said, they had begun to "isolate" the Fuehrer to establish themselves favorably with the Allies in the event of a stalemate peace or defeat.

The breach is said to date back to the winter disasters of 1941 in Russia, which led the Fuehrer to substitute his 'intuition" for the judgment of professional army men.

Informed quarters here said they believed Zeitzler's general staff would not serve as a true army organization but merely as the instrument of Hitler's whims. He was believed to have been chosen as a "yes man" because of his youth, his devotion to nazism, and freedom from the Junkers tradition.

On the face of it, the appointment is not calculated to please the traditionalist, professional generals over whose heads the young parvenu was raised to the highest military post.

Coincident with DNB's announcement, the German radio took an unusual way of making the appointment public. It broadcast a Transocean agency dispatch which said that "for the first time the public has learned that infantry General Zeitzler is chief of the general staff of the army."

The dispatch added.

"Thursday's Berlin Nachtausgabe (newspaper) published a photo with the following caption:

"'The Fuehrer at a military demonstration in conversation with the chief of the general staff of the army, Infantry General Zeitzler.'

"This photo shows Hitler with nine officers, the Fuehrer in the foreground with General Zeitzler, a man of heavy build in the prime of life.

"For some time Berlin has spoken of General Zeitzler as one of the most ingenious German general staff officers, whose great efficiency has asserted itself since the campaign in the West (France and the lowlands) and who, therefore, was promoted rapidly."

Born in 1895 in Luckau, he volunteered for the army in 1914 and served throughout the First World War as a second lieutenant. He was discharged in 1918 as a first lieutenant and was called back in 1926 as a captain. He was promoted to major in 1934 and to colonel in 1935. He was attached to the general staff in Poland in 1939 and France in 1940. As chief of staff of a tank force he was awarded the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross.

He served in the Balkan Campaign in 1941 and was chief of staff of Field Marshal Ewald von Kleist's first panzer army in Russia in 1941.

He was said to have been responsible for general staff preparations for Kleist's drive into the eastern Caucasus this year—the offensive aimed toward Russia's oil fields but which has been stalled for more than three months in the Mozdok and Terek regions.

Demonstrations Grow Throughout Italy

London, Dec. 10 (INS).—Peace demonstrations are mounting throughout Italy as a result of the increasingly severe R. A. F. poundings of Italian industrial and war centers, according to reports reaching London tonight.

A large crowd of Italians demonstrated in front of St. Peter's Cathedral in Rome Tuesday after a Papal service comemmorating the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, the Swedish newspaper, Dagens Nyheter, reported. The crowds milled in front of the cathedral, shouting "long live peace," after Pope Pius XII read a prayer for world-wide peace.

Reports of such demonstrations have been increasing ever since the Allies began pounding cities in northern Italy, several of which are believed to be at least partially evacuated.

Widespread panic in northern sections continuously blasted by the Royal Air Force spread to the south Friday, when American planes raided Naples, the Daily Mail reported in an Istanbul dispatch.

Mass meetings demanding that defenses of the southern cities be strengthened were held in Naples, Brindisi and Reggio di Calabria, the Mail said. Italian troops had to be called out to disperse the crowds at Reggio di Calabria, and hundreds were reported arrested.

Abandon Darlan, De Gaulle Urges

Vichy Still Holding Thousands in Africa, Fighting French Say

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 10.—The Fighting French charged tonight that thousands of Frenchmen—possibly 25,000—have been imprisoned by Vichy as De Gaullists or as other foes of Vichy and still are held in North African jails and camps despite President Roosevelt's request of their liberation.

The general controversy over Admiral Jean Darlan's stewardship in Africa picked up further momentum when Gen. Charles de Gaulle allegorically urged the Allies to abandon Darlan as a "detour" no longer needed and Commons heard Prime Minister Churchill state Britain's attitude toward Darlan.

Recalling that President Roosevelt on November 17 requested the release of all political prisoners in North Africa, the Fighting French said their latest information indicated only one or perhaps two prisoners out of about 25,000 had been freed.

Number Held Not Known

The exact number held is not known, the Fighting French said. They added it is known that Vichy sent so many political prisoners to Morocco that the jails were overtaxed and concentration camps were built. Hundreds of army and navy officers were said to have been jailed in Dakar and Martinique for attempting to continue the war from those bases long before America entered the conflict.

General de Gaulle, not mentioning Darlan by name, asked this question during a speech here to the Anglo-American Press Association of Paris:

"If it happens that for a brief instant some obstacle leads a state to make some slight detour from her path, don't you think it essention that that state should abandon the detour as quickly as possible or risk permeating her effort with great moral anxiety?"

De Gaulle suggested the people and not armies largely fight modern war, and asked:

"Don't you think modern strategy should be inspired and directed by a policy sufficiently great and sufficiently human to reply to the wishes of the masses of people directly concerned?"

One of the largest crowds since the beginning of the war overflowed commons as Churchill made his statement respecting collaboration with Darlan.

Secret Session

It was believed in political quarters that the session was secret because some factual military and political information respecting the whole North African action would be divulged.

The Darlan issue has raised considerable public protest.

Before the House doors closed Foreign Secretary Eden again refused to make a public statement on Darlan's position as chief of the North African Civil Administration by agreement with Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Eden reiterated that "the matter is governed" by previous statements by himself and by President Roosevelt, chiefly to the effect that Darlan's position is temporary.

Sources familiar with the political situation in North Africa were doubtful that Darlan could be abruptly abandoned now without causing a complete breakdown of the civil administration, if not outright violence.

They pointed out that thousands of police officials, civil servants, mayors and even troops were supporting Darlan personally.

Likewise, they said, colonists and planters in North Africa, through Darlan, have been making considerable money since the armistice with the Germans and would not be willing to abandon Darlan now.

War Sidelights

Censorship Triumphs In War Film

London, Dec. 10 (AP).—British movie officials finally agreed today not to insist on American audiences hearing cusswords in the censored version of Noel Coward's war film, "In Which We Serve."

Filippo del Giudice, head of Two Cities Films, who had threatened earlier to cancel American showings although $400,000 had been paid for the rights, announced he had received assurances from Hollywood that, despite American censors' deletion of 4 feet of film containing the profanity, "everybody feels no harm has been done" the picture.

In New York Edward C. Raftery, of United Artists Corp. released a cable to Del Giudice which said the only eliminations of consequence were a word describing a person of illegitimate parentage and a "reference to Italians which United States Government officials requested be delected in international interest."

Arms Seized in India

Bombay, Dec. 10 (AP).—Thirty persons were arrested today in Poona and quantities of chemicals described as for the manufacture of bombs, and pistols and ammunition were seized as police raided a number of homes.

Yesterday marked the end of the fourth month of the detention of Mohandas K. Gandhi, Indian nationalist leader, and demonstrations occurred here and in Ahmedabad.

In the latter city police were reported to have wounded four persons when they fired on a demonstrating crowd.

Booty for Russia

Moscow, Dec. 10 (AP).—Russian booty in the recaptured area northwest of Stalingrad includes American-type automobiles, Norwegian canned goods and Greek cigarettes, dispatches from the front said today.

The motor cars taken as war trophies were used by German staff generals, the dispatches said. (It was not explained whether these were prewar models or military vehicles which the Germans had previously captured on the Russia or other fronts.)

You Bring the Duck

London, Dec. 10 (AP).—When American soldiers go out for Christmas dinner with British families they'll go well stocked.

So that the troops will not be a burden upon their hosts, the Army has arranged for each soldier to take along a food basket containing "more than any one man could eat." It will contain such delicacies as bacon, coffee, milk, fruit, tomato juice, butter, lard, tea and rice.

Iranian Mob Riots

Teheran, Iran, Dec. 8 (Delayed) (AP).—Iranian soldiers and police fired today on a rioting crowd, composed largely of students, outside the National Assembly building.

A few persons were arrested. There were no reports of any casualties from the shooting.

The trouble started when the students, later joined by loiterers, commenced a demonstration nominally against a bread shortage. Looting and rioting followed. While the situation was brought in hand, most shops remained closed.

Md. Railman to Serve On County Ration Board

Hagerstown, Dec. 10 (AP).—Charles W. Sullivan, Western Maryland Railroad employe, will serve on the Washington County war price and ration board, Chairman Franklin M. Thomas announced.

The new board member is an official of the Brotherhod of Railroad Conductors and Trainmen.

Industry Offers 1941 Use as Basis Of Newsprint Cut

The newspaper industry's advisory committee recommended yesterday that WPB's proposed newsprint curtailment for 1943 be based on each newspaper's consumption in 1941, with any necessary cuts being applied percentagewise to this 1941 base.

The recommendations, intended as a guide to WPB in imposing controls on print paper consumption, were made after Canadian and American Government officials had advised the committee to expect a sharp reduction in wood pulp production next year.

WPB has taken no final action, and there was no indication that the order recommended by the committee of newspaper executives would be the form ultimately approved.

Tokyo Raider Leads as Aces Batter Sfax

By the Associated Press

United States Twelfth Air Force Advance Operations Base (Delayed) Nov. 28.—Led by one of the heroes of Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's raid on Tokyo, medium bombers of the Twelfth Air Force battered docks, warehouses, railroad yards and oil storage tanks in a night raid on the Port of Sfax, in Tunisia, and then swooped to as low as 25 feet to machinegun their targets.

Fires visible for 75 miles were left burning among the oil tanks. Particularly heavy damage was reported done to the railroad yards and warehouses on the quays of this important communications port at the top of the Gulf of Gabes, 140 miles south of Tunis.

It was the first operational flight of this squadron and all of its planes came home safely.

The flight leader was Maj. David M. Jones of Winters, Tex., who won the distinguished flying cross for his role in the bombing of Tokyo. Another veteran of the Tokyo attack, Lieut. Richard Miller of Fort Wayne, Ind., also participated.

Major Jones reported after his return here "We sure plastered them, but never saw an enemy plane. We got some flak from the ground. We hit dock installations and started some good big fires.

"We got good hits on the railroad tracks," he said, "two or three of us went down as low as 25 to 50 feet, machinegunning the yards, and saw a lot of damage. After we dropped all of our bombs, there was nothing left to do but go down and shoot them up a bit."

Some of the crew members reported seeing German troops diving into trenches to avoid the strafing. Except for a few bursts from the planes' guns, the few small ships in the harbor were ignored and the fliers concentrated on the supply and communications facilities.

"We just about raised Hell," Miller said. "We gave them a little work to do before they can use the port again. I saw one warehouse simply go to pieces, but there were so many bombs going down I couldn't tell all we hit."

Corpl. Kenneth Daugherty, of Jamestown, N. Y., was probably the proudest man on the raid.

Participating in his first operational flight, he let his first bomb go and he said "it hit a big oil tank right in the middle. It seemed to go red all of a sudden, and appeared to be splitting on the sides. The second bomb hit railroad yards. Then we made our second run and dropped a whole string along the tracks."

The only antiaircraft hits were scored on the plane of which Sergt. Russell S. Riel of Franklin, N. H., was tail gunner.

"We came in low at more than 200 miles an hour," Riel said. "The flak began coming. The first shell hit just behind my armor plate and knocked off the wooden streamlining on the end of the plane."

The turret gunner on his plane was hit in a leg by a piece of antiaircraft shell. He was the only casualty of the raid.

Japan's Strategic Situation Guarantees Victory, Tojo Boasts on Axis Anniversary

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), Dec. 10.—Premier General Hideki Tojo declared today that Japan had established a strategic position which would enable her to win the Pacific war, however protracted, and contribute supplies to Germany and Italy to aid in the joint fight to establish the Axis world order.

(The premier did not touch upon current military developments, in the East or in the West.)

He spoke before a score of Axis correspondents at a press conference in observance of tomorrow's anniversary of the German and Italian declarations of war upon the United States.

"Within one year of the outbreak of the Greater East Asia war all American and British strongholds in East Asia were overthrown and nearly all regions of East Asia have been liberated from Anglo-American domination," he said, "while Japan has successfully established a strategic position which will enable her to win the war, no matter how it may be protracted."

The premier said Japan was proud of the role she was playing in the creation of new world history.

"Japan pays homage to the brilliant war results that have been achieved by the German and Italian nations and thanks them for their cooperation," he said. "At the same time Japan hopes that cooperation between Japan, Germany and Italy will be further enhanced, both spiritually and materially."

In response to questions, Tojo said relations among the Axis partners had been remarkably free of friction, in contrast to "the constant bickerings among enemy powers."

He reaffirmed these points as the basis of Axis war relations:

"First: Japan, Germany and Italy are to prosecute the war jointly until it ends in their victory.

"Second: The three powers will not conclude a separate peace.

"Third: The three powers, even after termination of the war in their victory, will cooperate for the completion of a new world order."

(A Rome dispatch broadcast by the Berlin radio said the message which Tojo sent the Italian people on the anniversary "was received throughout Italy, and particularly in political circles of Rome, with the deepest appreciation.")

Tojo said rich resources acquired by Japan in the southern areas—producers of rubber, petroleum, tin and drugs—were already being utilized by Japan for prosecution of the war.

"I think it a pleasure that we can contribute these resources to Germany and Italy, our allies," he said.

(The implication was that Japan is already supplying Germany and Italy with a share of her loot, but Allied advices indicate that any such inter-Axis commerce is a mere trickle of lightweight goods, such as quinine and instruments which could be freighted by submarine.)

Although oil field facilities were destroyed in some places under the Allied scorched earth policy, they were left untouched in others and Japan has "absolutely nothing to worry about" concerning the fuel, Tojo said.

Jury Finds Probe Was Unhampered

the charge ridiculous. Spokesmen for the Justice Department also denied Friedman's allegation that an investigation by the FBI and Naval Intelligence officers had been suppressed.

Instead, they said, the FBI-Naval Intelligence investigation had shown the case to be of such major importance that it was turned over to the War Frauds Unit of the Justice Department.

Friedman was a witness before the grand jury.

"The grand jurors find," the presentment said, "that the Office of Naval Intelligence and the Department of Justice with its investigating agency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, have acted in the closest cooperation in expeditiously conducting the investigation from its inception in September, 1942.

"The grand jurors feel that it is their duty to advise the public that the recent highly publicized accusation impugning the integrity of the Department of Justice, the Navy Department, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the United States Attorney's Office for the Middle District of Pennsylvania were wholly unwarranted and without any basis in fact.

"The grand jury has already taken action in a number of matters. In order not to handicap the investigation, which is continuing, no indictments are returned at the present time."

Friedman termed the grand jury's report "a hatchet attack on me and a whitewash of Washington."

"The FBI has had in its possession three confessions of guilt but has not indicated any of the guilty persons," the commissioner said. "The statement of the grand jury that it indicted nobody because it might hamper the investigation gives away the whole case for what it is.

"There is fraud, corruption and theft at the Mechanicsburg Naval Depot, Washington to the contrary notwithstanding and no amount of whitewash from Mr. Clark (Tom C. Clark, chief of the Justice Department's War Frauds Unit who is directing the investigation) can cover it up."

Island Natives Aid Marooned Yanks

(Editor's note — Charles McMurtry, Associated Press correspondent who was badly burned in a naval engagement off the Solomons several weeks ago, now is back in action and herewith provides an eye-witness description of the aid extended Americans by friendly natives.)

By Charles McMurtry

An Advance Base in the Southwest Pacific, Dec. 9 (Delayed) (AP).—A Marine private, thrown into the sea when a Jap torpedo struck his cruiser, awakened on a strange shore to find the hand of a grinning native outstretched in welcome.

On the native's chest was tattooed the word "John." But let the Marine, a 20-year-old private nicknamed "Phil" from Detoni, Ark., tell his own story.

It begins at 11:30 the night of November 30, includes an exhausting 4-hour swim to Savo Island near Guadalcanal, brief naps in shore-side bushes, and a rescue by a PT boat the afternoon of December 1.

Tossed Overboard

"I was tossed overboard entangled in cables but was jarred free—and luckily I had on a life jacket. I could see the Jap fire from a beach on Guadalcanal so I started toward an island to the north. As I swam I could feel explosions but I didn't know what they were. It felt like barbed wire snapping and like rifle bullets hitting nearby.

"I swam for an hour, and then began to hit 20 licks and rest 20 licks alternately. After two hours, the pitchblack night seemed lighter and I made out the island shore. (It was Savo).

"An oil-coated ladder drifted near just when I was ready to give up from exhaustion. I grabbed it and used it as a surfboard. The current was so swift I seemed to swim forward 10 feet and then drop back 10 feet, but eventually I could touch the bottom.

Greeted By Native

"I felt the island might be in Jap hands so I crawled into bushes to hide and rest. When I awoke I saw someone coming so I crawled deeper into the bushes because I didn't know whether it was a native or a Jap.

"He saw my tracks and wheeled toward the bushes. He discovered me and approached with outstretched hand, grinning a welcome. I saw he was a native, and I was then more anxious to shake hands than he was. I never was more glad to see anyone. He was about 18, very good looking, well-built, short, rather light-colored, wore only a blue breechcloth, and had 'John' tatooed on his chest.

"He grabbed my arm and led me to more natives, all of whom greeted me like a long-lost brother. I recalled I'd heard the Marines say the natives were friendly and I saw by the expression on their faces that they meant no harm.

"No Japs, No Americans"

"I asked, 'Where are the Japanese?'

"'No Jap,' they answered.

"Then I asked, 'Where are the Americans?'

"'No Americans.'

"I was then taken to a native hut and given a bath. I was so oil-covered and dirty and tired that I let them bathe me. They'd found a barrel of kerosene washed in from a sunken Japanese ship and bathed off every black, oily spot. They brought a galvanized vessel of some sort for me to bathe in boiled water. And they washed my clothes.

"Soon I saw a sailor from my own ship. He already was bathed. We tried to figure out what had happened to the ship and what to do. We both were so exhausted we decided to rest four or five hours.

(Their ship sank about 3 a. m.)

"I found then that the natives had brought a native doctor. He was very old and very respected. His word seemed to be law. He must have been the mayor. He treated my leg cuts with his own medicine, squeezed some kind of pulp on them that burned like fire. But I felt better and the medicine kept off the flies.

"For breakfast they brought out bananas, four boiled eggs and a potato that seemed like a cross between sweet and Irish. They served banked nuts of some kind as cereal. The eggs were fresh and delicious—the first I'd eaten in a long time.

"As soon as we'd eaten, the natives ganged around, and when we tried to let them know we were tired, they motioned toward a bamboo hut with a thatched roof. The beds were two layers of woven mats, hemp or bark laid on a table. The only thing civilized in the hut was a pillow in a pillowcase and there was only one of those.

"Outside, the only sign of civilization were chickens and a can that once held Australian biscuits. It was dated 1927.

"About 2:30 in the afternoon, a native boy awakened us and pointed out two PT boats approaching. A native crawled out on a log and signaled them with brushes but the signal went unnoticed.

"We then sighted an observation plane flying low, and I semaphored that a Marine and a sailor were stranded. The plane signaled the boats, which immediately came for us."

"I gave a native my Marine ring I'd seen him admiring and my clothes. The sailor gave a native his watch which had stopped because of its long soaking in salt water."

Nazis Bolster Atlantic Defenses, Fearing Allied Attack in West

Germany has begun widespread preparations to defend the west coast of Europe against a possible attack by the United Nations, the United Nations information office reported yesterday through the office of War Information.

In Norway, the report said, Quisling storm troopers are being trained in street fighting, with all German civilians in that country ordered to attend evening meetings to learn to handle weapons.

The information committee reported that the coastal zone of Holland had been declared a defense area to a depth at points of 30 miles, and block houses constructed, camouflaged batteries established and dunes mined.

The committee said several children already had been killed playing in the mined sand dunes.

Defense Area Divided

The defense area in Holland, which includes many important cities such as Amsterdam, The Hague and Rotterdam, has been divided into districts and each has an evacuation bureau.

On the Veluwe Plateau, east of Utrecht in the Netherlands, evacuation camps have been built, and all persons ordered removed except those necessary to keep essential services going.

For the first time since the occupation of Belgium, the Germans have executed hostages, the report continued. It said the German military commandant ordered eight Belgian hostages shot to avenge the death of the Rexist Burgomaster of Charleroi, Jean Teughels, who was shot to death more than a week ago.

The Prime Minister of the Belgian government in exile, Hubert Pierlot, issued a statement promising punishment for those responsible for the hostage slayings. During the last week, the committee said, 24 more Belgians were executed for sabotage or possession of arms, and 8000 to 10,000 patriots were imprisoned for sabotage and resisting German authority.

More Czechs Slain

A prohibited zone has been established along the Belgian coast, extending 15 miles inland, it said, and part of the population of Ostend had been evacuated, the streets cleared and walls erected at the entrance of the streets, obstruction their view toward the sea.

The committee said the wave of executions in Czecho-Slovakia continued, with 14 Czecho-Slovaks executed during the last week for sabotage or possessing arms, and eight others sentenced to death for similar offenses. This, the committee said, brought the number of Czecho-Slovaks executed since the beginning of November to 63.

Bomber Seals French Train In a Tunnel

London, Dec. 10 (AP).—An R. A. F. Mosquito bomber, shuttling between the entrances of a railroad tunnel 40 miles northwest of Paris in a dusk attack yesterday, apparently sealed a train inside, the Air Ministry said today.

The flier, it said, neatly laid one bomb at a mouth of the tunnel and then, noting that a train was entering from the other side, bombed that entrance also.

The Ministry said the train was bottled up, at least temporarily and did not appear from either end during the 10 minutes that the Mosquito hovered over the tunnel.

The flier said smoke poured from the first entrance bombed.

U. S. to Be Best Fed Nation, Says Wickard

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

America will continue to have the best fed people and soldiers in the world, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard said yesterday in his first statement as head of the wartime food administration set up by President Roosevelt this week.

Needs will be met, Wickard said, stressing that he was talking about military needs and that "we may go hungry for some things."

While the Secretary outlined his view of the prospects for next year, there were other important developments, which included:

Wickard put the Department of Agriculture on a wartime basis, regrouping its bureaus into three divisions.

The War Production Board

reserved about half of next year's output of canned fruit, vegetables and juices to feed the armed forces.

Wickard told a press conference—his first since he was placed in control of the Nation's food program—that the prospects for meeting all needs included exports.

Mum on Food Rationing

Although the United States has no huge reserves, he said, crops have been abundant and nobody will go hungry. Answering a question, he said he was not ready to discuss the extent of future rationing.

Also to be met, said the administrator, is a shortage of farm machinery, which is urgently needed for harvesting. He said on the Western trip, from which he had just returned, he saw soybeans rotting in the fields because there was no machinery to harvest them.

"We cannot go back to hand harvesting of these crops," he declared, "the manpower is lacking, and there is no point in raising crops and then losing them because they cannot be harvested.

Although there will be enough food, the administrator said, "we cannot afford to be wasteful of anything.

"Housewives could effect great savings, and I hope the newspapers will help get the message across to them."

Wickard said that a greater use of fresh foods, for example, would ease the demand for canned products needed for export and for military purposes.

Agency Heads Named

The administrator announced that he had streamlined the Department of Agriculture into administration of research, production and distribution.

The latter two are new agencies. Appointed to direct them are:

Production—Herbert W. Parisius, formerly associate director of the Office for Agricultural War Relations. His assistant will be Clifford M. Townsend, administrator of conservation and adjustment.

Distribution—Roy F. Hendrickson, who has been Administrator of the Agricultural Marketing Administration. His assistant will be Clarence W. Kitchen, associate director of the Marketing Administration.

Bureaus now operating in the Department of Agriculture were placed in the new administrations, according to whether their function concerned production or distribution. Other bureaus, which may be transferred from such agencies as the War Production Board or the Office of Price Administration, will be assigned in like manner.

during 1942 canners were required to put aside about 35 per cent of their pack for Government use. The WPB order issued yesterday increased this to from 50 to 55 per cent, on the average.

The proportions reserved ranged from 19 per cent of the canned grapefruit to 100 per cent of the blueberry, fig, carrot and blended fruit juice pack.

Besides canned goods, the order applied to frozen, dried, dehydrated, pickeled and other preserved products. Canned fish is covered by a similar order previously issued.

The proportions reserved by the Government, expressed in percentage of the total output this year, were:

Apples, 63; applesauce, 41; apricots, 66; blueberries, 100; cherries, R. S. P., 70; cherries, sweet, 65; figs, 100; fruit cocktail, 71; grapefruit segments, 19; grapefruit juice, 48; orange juice, 21; orange and grapefruit juice blended, 100; peaches, 63; pears, 65; pineapple, 70; pineapple juice, 26; asparagus, 49; beans, lima, 56; beans, snap, 58; beets, 84; carrots, 100; corn, sweet, 42; peas, 48; pumpkin or squash, 51; spinach, 48; tomatoes, 49; tomato catsup, 61; tomato juice, 43; tomato puree, 71; tomato paste, 40.

Police to Guard Brooklyn Teachers Against Attack

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—The president of the New York Teachers Guild said today police had promised to protect teachers against beatings by unruly pupils an intruders after she had cited a series of incidents "which vary in gravity from outright murder to mere threat."

The president, Mrs. Rebecca Simonson, said 40 police precinct captains had advised her they would send police by radio car upon receipt of a telephone call.

(A Broklyn junior high school teacher recently was shot to death by two former pu. s whom he reprimanded for smoking in the school building. The boys received long prison terms).

Some teachers have reported blackened eyes suffered in encounters with unruly pupils.

Ann Sheridan Sets Out for Divorce

Burbank, Calif., Dec. 10 (AP).—Red-haired Ann Sheridan, the film actress, left by airliner for Mexico City today to get a divorce from her screen star husband, George Brent.

Miss Sheridan had no comment except that she expected to return as soon as her objective was achieved.

She married Brent at Palm Beach, Fla., last January 5, and said shortly afterward that they had drawn a code for a long and happy married life. It apparently didn't work, however, and they separated September 29.

The actress is the former wife of Eddie Norris, also of the movies. Brent was married previously to Actresses Ruth Chatterton and Constance Worth.

Industry Told To Plan Now For Peacetime

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 10.—Business and industry were urged today by Frederick C. Crawford, president-elect of the National Association of Manufacturers, to start planning for the postwar period rather than leave such plans to the Government.

Crawford's first major address since his election, prepared for delivery before the Union League Club of New York, paralleled in many respects the postwar suggestions Shipbuilder Henry J. Kaiser gave the N. A. M.'s congress of American industry last week.

Insisting upon management's rights to make "hard-hitting constructive criticism," Crawford said this could be mixed judicially with whole-hearted coperation.

International Concept

Crawford called for an "international concept of economics" and said management men must become world traders, "just as our politicians will have to become world statesmen."

"These United States must either accept that world position politically, socially, commercially and militarily, or break faith with those who valiantly lead us to victory," he said.

In his outline of what he called "management's responsibility," Crawford declared the United States must help guarantee that there will not be another World War.

"If this means big nation policing, I am for it," the new head of the conservative N. A. M. said, "despite the economic burden it will require to maintain an international police force.

Economic Rehabilitation

"I believe that this Nation must participate as well in the economic rehabilitation of our sister nations after the war is over.

"This, however, is not a policing job to be done by Government but an opportunity and a job for private capital and initiative."

He said he believed business should start planning for the postwar period "right now, to the fullest extent possible without detracting from the war efford."

"Government, having no money of its own, can supply the capital needed for this tremendous reconstruction job only by a crushing tax burden which will impoverish our people.

"Despite the altruism of the American people, I do not believe they will allow themselves to be thus impoverished. Especially so when private capital can do the job to the benefit of those in foreign lands and with profit, through prosperity to every American citizen."

Crawford said he was convinced the American people "neither want a new form of government and society imposed upon them without their consent, nor do they wish to impose our form of government upon the reluctant citizens of other lands."

the OPA of powers granted it in the Price Control Act to obtain information necessary to the exercise of licensing authority also extended by the law.

Wolcott charge that OPA has "grossly abused its powers in seeking information." He explained later that he believed OPA to be using this authority to help it enforce rationing orders.

OPA, it was observed, is exceedingly unpopular in Congress, and any legislative move against it is almost certain to receive serious attention, probably involving committee hearings and a full-fledged public inquiry into all the agency's operations.

U. S. Revamps Beef Price Ceilings

pected, OPA added: Small packing houses in cities remote from major production centers can be maintained; and Army and Navy buying will be at the same price as civilian buying, thus eliminating the competitive advantage which has been enjoyed by big packers who were able to handle a large volume of war business.

The 22,000-word order carries, in addition to a map cutting the country in zones, two charts carving a beef carcass into carefully defined standard cuts.

Hereafter a side of beef must be cut to OPA specification, to give the ceilings the same meaning everywhere and to prevent evasion of the ceiling by "miscutting"—which means cutting a side of beef so that substantial quantities of meat from the lower-priced sections of the animal are included with a higher-priced cut.

To prevent "up-grading"—selling a lower grade meat at the ceiling of a better grade—all beef must be branded at the packing house by a Department of Agriculture grader. In the absence of an official grader, the packer may, as in the past, grade the meat himself, but OPA said the department now is prepared to handle all grading.

The regulations does not change the ceiling on veal or on such processed products as sausage. Veal therefore continues under the same wholesale ceiling as applied previously to both beef and veal, varying from packer to packer.

"Ceilings" Listed

The ceilings in the beef "surplus area" around Kansas City, taking in zones 3 and 4, are as follows for beef carcasses per 100 pounds:

Grade AA or choice, $22; grade A or good, $21; grade B or commercial $19; Grade C or utility $17; cutter and canner grade $15; Bulls $16.50.

Prices at Chicago which is in zone 5, are 50 cents higher in each class. Moving East, 25 cents is added for each zone line crossed. Zones, and the prices for each, include:

Zone 8: A step running next to the seaboard zone including parts of New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Maryland, Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Florida; base price plus $1.25.

Zone 9: The Eastern Seaboard except southern Florida; base price plus $1.50.

No cuts may be sold except the nine primary cuts specified by OPA and five additional "combination" cuts. An exception is made for those selling to restaurants, hotels and other purveyors of meals who require their meat cut into roasts, steaks and so on.

Kosher slaughtered beef is allowed a higher ceiling to compensate exactly for the higher cost of shipping live animals from the West and of processing these animals. This allowance is limited to sales to kosher dealers and kosher purveyors of meals.

First Lady Bans Male Membership In Press Group

The first and only man to apply for membership to Mrs. Roosevelt's Press Conference Association, without which it is impossible to attend her regular press conferences, was rejected, it was announced yesterday.

Gordon Cole, of PM's Washington Bureau, applied to the standing committee. The committee conferred with Mrs. Roosevelt on the question of opening membership to men. She replied that she "considers this a women's conference, dealing with questions of interest to women, from a woman's point of view."

The association was organized about a year ago, when White House secret service officials insisted on tightening up Mrs. Roosevelt's press conferences because of war conditions. Membership is restricted to full-time editorial representatives of daily newspapers, press associations, weekly newsmagazines and radio broadcasting companies.

Post Cameraman Will Be Sworn As Marine Today

Swelling the ranks of former Post employes in the armed services to 116, Henry W. Rohland, news photographer, will be sworn into the United States Marine Corps today.

compromsie version was drafted by a subcommittee to allow suspension of tariff laws and laws governing the movement of persons out of the country, but not into it.

A succession of Senate filibusters and the absence of a quorum in the House has tied up Congress for days. In the Senate, Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, has the legislative processes effectively jammed with a filibuster he is due to resume when the chamber convenes today.

The House cannot act without a quorum as, under its rules, a single objection is sufficient to block any bill under consideration with a quorum lacking.

An adjournment resolution would be subject to the same danger in the House, but leaders hope they will be able to dissuade any potential objector from preventing legislators from going home.

TAILORED TO FIT THE NEW MODEL!

America's Railroads are geared to fight today's War of Transportation... because far-sighted management made sure they would be ready.

Through 20 Years of Peace, the Railroads spent more than Ten Billion Dollars to fashion the United States with a modern armor of transportation... new and heavier rails, car equipment, bridges, towers, locomotives, signals, terminals ...the legion of things necessary for solid, rock-ribbed, transport efficiency.

That's why the Railroads were ready!

That's why, in America's crisis, the Railroads are coming through with the greatest mass-transport job in history. 8,000,000 troops moved since Pearl Harbor. Millions upon millions of tons of materials poured into industrial centers to keep production at top-speed. And finished fighting machines, food and equipment for Allied forces... delivered on schedule... smoothly and speedily... with but minor inconvenience to essential civilian service.

Yes, the Railroads were ready when war came... are ready to meet mounting needs as the war-tempo increases... determined to do whatever is necessary to WIN!

Wrath Over Italy

On Wednesday night, for the sixth time in less than a month, British heavy bombers flew over the Alps and dropped many hundreds of tons of bombs and incendiaries on Italy's great industrial center of Turin. An extremely successful raid was also carried out by American heavy bombers on the port of Naples. So Winston Churchill's warning to the Italians that unless they got out of the war their cities would be subjected to "prolonged, scientific and shattering air attack" is being fulfilled.

The special significance of the Naples raid was that it was based on Bengazi, which the British Eighth Army recently wrested from Marshal Rommel. Thus, even without the Tunisian springboard, the Allies are now in a position to carry out a two-way air attack on Italy. Mussolini recently promised his people that Germany would send in large numbers of antiaircraft guns. But the reports about these raids do not show that there has been any improvement in Italy's air defenses. Indeed, the cost of the Allied raids on Naples, Genoa, Turin, Milan and other Italian cities has so far been singularly slight. So, by the time Hitler gets around to protecting the Italian industrial centers and ports, it may be too late. Italy's vulnerability to air attack is certain to increase as the intensity of Allied bombing increases, regardless of anything Hitler may do about it.

No wonder, then, as Elmer Davis, head of the Office of War Information, has informed us, that the Italian people are in a state of active discontent and latent revolt. Whether they will go actively on the warpath against the men who have betrayed them and sold their nation to the Nazis is not certain. But it may not be very long at this rate before Italy has ceased to be a factor of any importance in the war.

Finish Fight

Between Bizerte in Tunisia and El Agheila in neighboring Tripolitania the distance is around 800 miles as the crow flies, well over 1000 miles if we follow the S-shaped coastline. That gap it is the purpose of current Allied operations in North Africa to remove. It will not be an easy task. But there is every confidence in Allied military circles that the job will be done.

In Tripolitania Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery is still biding his time before launching a frontal attack on what is left of the Afrika-Korps, now safe behind the bottleneck barrier of El Agheila. But a Cairo communique indicates that the British Eighth Army will not wait a minute longer than necessary. The enemy, says this communique, is to be allowed no rest. And in view of what happened in past campaigns, we can safely assume that when the British offensive is launched at El Agheila, it will be in sufficient force to carry through.

The key to the Tunisian picture is air power. So far our side has been unable effectively to crack the Axis defenses before Bizerte and Tunis because the enemy has enjoyed superiority in the air. Time was needed before our forward air bases could be put into shape. Time also was needed to bring up air reinforcements, and in this particular the enemy enjoyed the advantage of being close to his supply base in Sicily. But reports from Tunisia now state that the disadvantages our forces have operated under hitherto have been removed and that mastery of the air is now swinging in our direction. So a fight to the finish impends.

Darlan Policy

The relaxation of the British censorship on the deal with Darlan has proved helpful to sober discussion of the issues involved. We now see that both here and abroad the arrangement has caused profound disquiet. Nothing was more natural. For if the deal with Darlan proves to be an arrangement under which Darlan is able to consolidate his control over North Africa, it is obvious that we may be storing up a vast heap of trouble both for ourselves and for the French whose liberation we professedly seek. There is, in addition, the evil possibility that we may establish a precedent. In other words, wherever our conquering armies appear, we may find ourselves negotiating with reactionary opportunists who, having served our enemies, find it expedient to switch. What, if we contract a Darlan habit, becomes of our moral standing?

That the danger of going from precedent to precedent is real enough is indicated by more than the deal with Darlan. The casual and careless way in which, in unconscious unawareness of deep-rooted sentiments held by the Czechs, the Yugoslavs, the Poles and other Allied peoples, the War Department permitted a Hapsburg pretender to set up an Austrian legion shows what can happen and what does happen when we have no policy. It seems to us that our military leaders have their hands full enough in fighting the war. They should never be forced to make political decisions as well—political decisions which, in the circumstances, have to be improvised. But they will have no choice in the matter if our Government has no policy other than to leave all political matters for adjustment after the war. For war doesn't wait.

Whither Franco?

If Hitler should decide, or if he has already decided, to move against Gibraltar and the Allied rear in Northern Africa, his road would lie through Spain. That is what gives importance to General Franco's speech last Tuesday. That is why that speech is being so carefully studied for possible implications of what Franco would do if the German columns began to move across the Pyrenees. Its ideological content is important only in so far as it provides a clue to Franco's intention in such an event.

For nobody cares much whether Franco really believes that "the liberal world is going down, a victim of its own errors." All that worries us is whether such a statement means that Franco is still persuaded that the Axis will be victorious in Europe and whether his suggestion that Spain cannot separate itself from the destinies of Europe is a bid for a place in the new order slightly lower than Mussolini's and slightly higher than Laval's. Such an interpretation would be strengthened by his fulsome references to the National Socialist and Fascist revolutions and the analogies drawn between them and his own so-called national revolution in Spain. Two other references, however, suggest that all this may have been merely another gesture of appeasement paid in the only coin which the Caudillo of this bankrupt government has left to pay—words. Every other payment short of actual occupation of his country or an open declaration of war against the enemies of the Axis that Franco has been able to render to Hitler has already been rendered.

One such reference was to "our Catholic soul." The other was to the possible restoration of the monarchy at some future time. Now the significance here is that it is the disillusioned clerical and monarchical elements which have most strongly resisted the German domination of Spain, and which are lately said to have become bolder and bolder in their resistance. Thus it may have been that Franco considered that this gesture of internal appeasement would cancel the gestures toward Berlin and Rome. But the very necessity of such gestures well illustrates the weakness of Franco's whole position both in relation to the Axis and to his own countrymen.

One thing seems certain. Franco wants to remain technically neutral in this conflict if neutrality is in any way possible for him. Spain, her cities devastated, her economy ruined, her people half starving, is in a condition scarcely less pitiable than that of Italy or even of some of the occupied countries. It will take, at best, generations for Spain to recover from the recent terrible civil war. If Spain must again become a battleground, recovery will take centuries. No one knows this better than Franco. At the same time no one knows better than he that his regime could never survive an Axis defeat. He knows that he is caught between the horns of a terrible dilemma, and beneath the arrogance of his phrases it is possible to discern the note of desperation.

Misuse Of Censorship

It is not so much the principle of censorship as an overzealous and sometimes stupid application of that principle which has aroused the resentment of the people in Alaska. Some reports indicate that censorship has descended to the level of governmental snooping into wholly private affairs. One Alaskan describes the Office of Censorship as an American Gestapo. The contents of mail having no bearing upon the war are said to have been made available to the FBI and other governmental agencies. Some of the country's best newspapers and magazines have been subjected to severe pruning before being allowed to go to Alaska.

Abuses of this sort cannot be defended under the pretense of keeping information from the enemy. Indeed, it is difficult to see why there should be any censorship at all of mail going from the States to Alaska. That mail moves by boat or airplane from Seattle direct to our northern Territory. The chance of any of it falling into enemy hands is very small. Mail going out from Alaska is in a somewhat different category, since that Territory is a combat area. A question is being raised, however, about the necessity of maintaining combat-zone restrictions over the entire 2700 miles from Attu to Demarcation Bay in the Arctic Sea. There is no point, of course, in maintaining censorship over vast areas where it serves no real military purpose.

But elimination of the abuses of censorship is probably even more important than limiting its scope. Military necessity must not be used as an excuse for indiscriminate snooping. The American people will not condone Gestapo methods even where they are employed by inexperienced censors who have not yet learned the distinction between the interception of data that would be valuable to the enemy and unwarranted prying into personal affairs that have no bearing upon the war. If the Office of Censorship is well advised, it will hastily correct such misuse of its powers without any further prompting from either Congress or the President. Some steps in that direction have already been taken, but they have not yet gone far enough.

WLB Jurisdiction

The War Labor Board is asking for trouble when it attempts to intervene in a dispute between city officials and city employes. The very fact that it has conducted hearings on the petitions of city employes suggests a distorted idea of its assignment. Instead of rebuking Mayor LaGuardia for his refusal to send a representative to Washington to iron out the dispute between New York City and its transit employes, the WLB should apologize for butting into a dispute where it has no authority to act. It is true that the subways are operated by a city-owned corporation, but that does not, in our opinion, improve the case for WLB intervention.

To be sure, the board has not yet concluded that disputes between municipalities and their employes are within its jurisdiction. But a WLB panel asserted such jurisdiction several weeks ago. Apparently it acted out of fear that a strike of city workers might tie up transportation or other municipal services vital to the war effort. If such strikes should develop, they would certainly have to be dealt with promptly and vigorously. But that responsibility falls squarely upon the cities and States. For the Federal Government to intervene in such disputes before any municipal strike has caused serious difficulty, and before the local authorities have had an opportunity to meet the issue in their own way, would be an outrageous invasion of local rights.

The controlling factor in cases of this sort has been clearly stated by President Roosevelt. There can be no genuine collective bargaining between governments and their employes, he has said in effect, because those employes have no right to strike. Their relationship to their employer is governed by law, and law cannot be changed at the behest of public servants threatening to hold up the processes of government until their demands are met. Of course, organized public employes may petition officials for the elimination of grievances, for higher wages or for better working conditions. If their pleas go unheeded, the employes may resign or appeal to the public to elect more sympathetic officials at the next election. But no right to strike on their part can be recognized without jeopardizing the legal basis on which government rests.

In the New York case the representative of the employes appealing to the WLB admits that there is no question of a strike. The issue is whether the Federal Government shall step in and attempt to adjust subway workers' wages which are said to be substandard. By no stretch of the imagination can the wages paid by a city corporation be considered a Federal problem. And if the WLB should intervene, it would have no way of enforcing its ruling. Rulings against private employers may be enforced by taking over their plants, but the War Department could scarcely take over New York City or the subways. So the assertion of WLB jurisdiction in this field might easily result in a choice between leaving that agency in a position of ridiculous impotence and the smashing of local governmental powers. Either horn of the dilemma should be sufficient warning to the WLB to stay in the sphere where it is competent to act.

Santa Claus

Department stores report a dearth of Santa Clauses as a result of the drain of manpower into the armed services and war industry, and a few Eastern cities are bowing to the inevitable and installing a proxy in the form of Mrs. Claus. One feminine applicant for the job describes herself as having a "Santa Claus figure and complex." Of course, there should be as little difficulty in fitting out a woman as a man for the job of impersonating the benign gentleman who presides over Christmas. However, regardless of the fact that women are now replacing men in almost every profession, business and industry, the stores in Louisville have turned thumbs down on a feminine Kris Kringle. No reason for this taboo has been made public. Perhaps it's simply that Kentuckians, steeped in tradition and custom, cannot bear the idea of a substitute for such a time-honored figure as Santa Claus.

There is, of course, something to be said for Louisville's attitude in wishing to preserve a beloved symbol in its original form. But peace is not on earth this Christmas of 1942. Rather than disappoint the youngsters altogether, it seems better to have a feminine Santa than no Santa at all. Children, even as far back as 1897, when little Virginia O'Hanlon penned her famous query to the New York Sun, do not ask "Is Santa a man or a woman?" They merely ask if there really is a Santa Claus. And since Santa is, after all, only the spirit that "makes glad the heart of childhood," let us adults make as vigorous reply today to that plea for faith as did Frank P. Church back in 1897.

HE WHO HAS BEEN TO DERRY

"He who has been to Derry will always know peace," she said.
"He will not ever hunger,
or know what is dead.

"He who has been to Derry
will see what my eyes have seen, never know fear or hunger."

I have never been;

I have not been to Derry,
so hunger is meant for me;
I have not been to Derry.

"Neither have I," said she.

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, letters should be held to 300 words. Letters are subject to condensation.

Threadbare Arguments

As soon as someone suggests that we should have prohibition during the war, several letters appear containing the threadbare argument of the wets that more liquor was consumed during prohibition than before. Of course, they have no statistics to prove their point. As a matter of fact, the statistics on the consumption of distilled spirits before and after prohibition prove the falsity of this charge. Drew Pearson has recently pointed out that the annual consumption of distilled spirits reached a maximum of 167 million gallons in 1917 just before prohibition and then fell to 58 million gallons in 1933 just after prohibition. Prohibition is thus shown to have had the effect of reducing the consumption of liquor by almost one-third. Since then liquor consumption has rapidly increased.

Before prohibition it was not uncommon for factories to have from 10 to 25 per cent of their employes absent after every pay day and weekend owing to hangovers, even though they were working on war work. Prohibition reduced this absenteeism to a remarkable extent. At the present time conditions are almost as bad as they were before prohibition during the last war. The consumption of liquor has risen to an estimated 171 million gallons for 1942. Absenteeism is again seriously delaying our war effort. But in 1917 there was a spirit of sacrifice throughout the entire Nation and even the majority of drinkers were willing to forgo their liquors in order to win the war. But the "social gains" of the New Deal include giving labor all the liquor it wants to consume. And, of course, these social gains must now be retained.

Victory Building

If I may do so, I should like to suggest a change in the name of the Pentagon Building in Arlington, Va.

The organizations now occupying this building are engaged in activities calculated to aid in the ultimate achievement of victory in this war. Activities in this building are based on ideas, and some, as in every field, after a little experience or practice, prove to be of no value. In this war, as in any war, if an idea is applied conscientiously and sincerely, and produces results, we are making progress, but the degree of progress will vary with the persistence of incidental stimulance by other ideas.

I have in mind an idea that might be considered a persistent and incidental stimulant, and that is to change the name of the Pentagon Building to the "Victory Building." Could the name "Victory Building" produce psychological and tangible benefits? Could an individual strive harder in the Victory Building than in the Pentagon Building? Use of the name "Victory Building," thousands of times every day, should be of some value.

Please look at the floor plan of this building, and see dozens of "Vs," the symbol for the new name. I propose for the Pentagon Building the symbol of our goal in this war, in any war.

Let's call it the "Victory Building!"

Rationing Red Tape

Just after Pearl Harbor we were asked to cut down on the use of gasoline. Well, I did some cutting, as did many others. My average mileage, for six years, had been 1100 miles per month. I cut that to 600. From January 1, 1942, to the date of the first rationing, this 600-mile average included exactly 11 miles per week of nonessential driving; and you will recall that the "A" book was supposed to supply an average of 20 miles per week of nonessential driving.

But I had bought a house before rationing was inaugurated. It was just being finished. Its distance from work was a little over twice that of the prior location. On rationing day, I gave my then residence, but told the registration official, also the supervisor in the same room, also the reviewing board in the same building, that I was moving, and had already hired a van.

Nevertheless, rationing was on the basis of the old mileage. That made it tough, so I stopped going to the new home to save gas—result, a careless plumber or cleaner—the living room ceiling flooded.

It took five weeks to get the gas rationing adjusted—written statements were of no avail, even when sworn to—and, of course, gas was wasted trying to get to the rationing office. Finally, I took an hour's annual leave, and then nearly missed the attendant, although I had a definite appointment.

That was six months ago; but are things in less turmoil? Let's see. Holders of "A" books living within 1 or 2 miles of work, with excellent transportation facilities, are still able to use all of their allowance for pleasure—that's the ruling. But people who tell a straightforward story, without any stretching—and even put it under oath—are being "straight-jacketed" into an allowance that is more than one-third below essential requirements, without any nonessential to say nothing of pleasure driving.

Kinds Of Toys

Looking ahead, when there will be again peace on earth and good will, when many changes will come about, it seems to me that it may be necessary to change the style of toys also.

We give our youngsters warriors, pistols and guns for playthings. Perhaps it would be fitting in a peaceful beautiful world not to have warring toys, but instead toys representing the arts or sports. For example, toy musicians, their instruments and equipment, to form bands called the Kay Keyser, Benny Goodman, etc., or a baseball field with players representing Babe Ruth, DiMaggio, etc., etc.

It seems to me these kinds of toys would be lots of fun and at the same time instructive.

Peace Offensive

As we start on our second year of war, we might consider the possibility of starting a peace offensive of our own. What inducement would we be willing to offer to the people of Germany, Italy, and Japan to make peace now? How much would we be willing to offer them in the way of forgiveness and freedom from punishment, if they would surrender now and throw themselves on our mercy?

The Italian people may see before them only the firing squad or the concentration camp, if we win. Let us tell them now that there will be no mass murders, no huge concentration camps, no torture and starvation. We can surely be this humane. There would be no advantage for us to butcher thousands of helpless men and women and children just to get revenge. We will gain nothing by "outfascisting" the Fascists in cruelty and brutality.

If these people could know now, that if we conquer them, we will not be as brutal as their own masters, they would have little heart to keep up the fight. If they knew that food and freedom awaited them, and peace and happiness, they would have no incentive to continue the war. If they knew that their lot, instead of being 10 times worse if we won, would be ten times better, they surely would not stand in their own light and refuse this generous offer.

Let us let them know, that they have everything to gain and nothing to lose by accepting our peace terms now, that we are the friend of all humanity and not the enemy of any race, color, or creed. I believe that such a peace offensive would do much to shorten the war, for most people are war weary now, and are willing to cry enough, if they can save their face. The Japanese people would do a lot to save face, and we could go along with them in this, for we would have nothing to gain by humiliating them.

"Marine Hymn" Theme

In reference to H. M. Ward's published discussion of the origin of the "Marine Hymn" and my recent letter to you on this subject:

I have definitely located the musical theme of the "hymn" in Mozart's "Sinfonia Concertante in E Flat Major" for wind instruments and orchestra which was written in Paris in the spring of 1778. The theme is first introduced in the latter portion of the first movement and reappears with variations throughout the work.

M. B. H., Jr.

Warrenton, Va., Dec. 7.

After reading the letter from your correspondent who attributed the music of the "Marine Hymn" to Schubert, I hummed the melody and discovered it was from Mozart and intended writing you. To my surprise I read the letter in today's Post from M. R. H., jr., who had reached the same conclusion but could not place the opus. In my opinion the melody is identically the same as the minuet from "Don Juan" with the exception of a slight rhythmic alteration.

The Post Impressionist

Minnie Heffelfinger's Hour

We got a letter from the Suburban Little Theater League, saying further productions would be impossible "until happier days." That, of course, is another phrase for "because of war conditions."

What particular distresses for light, heat, fuel or manpower drove the faithful to such a decision, I do not know. But I can remember another war, one in which there was no surrender for the drama.

Circumstances, it is true, are vastly different. This time, fuel oil is limited. Gasoline is rationed. The all-important bulbs and wiring are restricted. Army and factory and officers already have made more serious demands on men and women than in the breathless years of 1917 and 1918, and a grimmer and more practical civilian defense takes the time of a greater army at home.

Even so, these are only surface reasons. The real reason is under the surface. The same influence that broke up the adult game of touch football in the vacant lot, the same influence that abolished the community sing in favor of the radio, dictates a personal appearance by Greer Garson instead of a local pageant to sell war bonds. Nor is there much sense in blaming the desk strategists in Washington who have decided to fight the home front's battles that way. Perhaps they could turn back fashion if they thought best; but they have been carried along the same way as the rest of us, and after all they are only trying to give us what promises the greatest response.

No, something has happened to us as a people. Back in 1917, what we lacked in facilities didn't bother us. If we hadn't an automobile, we walked to the auditorium. When the lights went out, we put lanterns on the stage. We didn't know so much about technique and that removed some of our handicaps. Maybe we were doing a lot of things wrong but we did them, we did them together and we did them with an enthusiasm which is something to remember in itself.

We had a club called the Clara Barton Band, and everybody from the first graders to the Commonwealth's attorney belonged. Mother was treasurer and Parson McCullough directed all enterprises, especially drama. We gave one pageant that had everything in it. Sister was Canada and Miss Thatcher, the Seventh Grade teacher, was Australia. Mr. Payne, the County Clerk, was an Aged Frenchman and I was a Wounded Sailor and smoked a piece of chalk.

Everybody came to rehearsals. Miss Thatcher graded her papers from 3:30 to 6 so she could be there. Mother gave us a cold supper and we didn't kick. Elmo Ricer carpentered all day at the naval proving ground but he showed up each night at the parish hall to put on his mustache and be a German Soldier.

Practice went on till everything was right, too. Parson saw to that. Minnie Heffelfinger was chosen to be a Belgian Woman because she looked sort of thin and delicate. Elmo had to throw her down and put his foot on her, and Elmo was bashful and besides he was too good a fellow to kick anybody around. Parson stepped right in and showed him how to do it. He threw Minnie down till she was blue in the face but she never complained. Every rehearsal, Elmo threw Minnie down easy and then Parson threw her down hard and then Elmo tried it again. And on the night of the pageant, when the Hun threw Minnie down and she got up again, every man in the audience rose to his feet and cheered. I don't know anything that haopened to Minnie after that hour, but if she never did another thing the rest of her days, she lived a lifetime for her country in the autumn of 1917 and she got her reward.

It would take a corps of sociologists to confuse us sufficiently about what has happened to the spirit of Minnie Heffelfinger. The experts call it the Shift to Spectator Sports, and if you want a name for it I guess that will do as well as anything else. Neither that nor any other phrase will explain it. Probably we Have Become More Civilized, which means that we are more inhibited and more afraid of making ourselves ridiculous by showing some fervor about something. This is one war, however, which is going to be hard to win without fervor. There is a lot of it on the other side—about as much, I should judge, as we had in 1917. I don't know what to do about it, but I do know that a little flame of real enthusiasm, if it catches on just right, can kindle and grow into a raging fire.

Congressional Privilege

Here's a congressional record for you. First, "pensions for Congressmen"; next, "C" books for "essential driving, and, now, off for the holidays, December 14 ("essential travel"—wouldn't you say?).

What I'd like to know is on what basis does this group of 6-hour-a-day, "politics as usual" characters enjoy the special privilege of a trip home and a Christmas vacation several weeks long, while other Government employes follow proper wartime restrictions on travel and length of holiday (Christmas Day only)?

Perhaps it all brings on the question of whether or not Congressmen are to be considered Government workers.

Our African Policy

By Ernest Lindley

With The Aid Of Darlan

THERE IS good reason to think that the British government has a sounder appreciation of the political arrangements made in French North and West Africa than would be suspected from the comments in Parliament and in the British press which have been forwarded to this country, or from the statements made by Fighting French leaders in London.

LINDLEY

In his address at Baltimore Monday night, Lord Halifax took occasion to commend the State Department, "whose policy during recent months has so largely contributed to the whole project of these military operations in North Africa." This indorsement referred to the political preparations made before the occupation—in short, to the Vichy and North African policies for which the American Government long had to bear uninformed criticism. The British Ambassador made no reference to the political arrangements made following the invasion, which arose from the circumstance that Admiral Darlan was in Algiers when the American forces landed and that he proved unexpectedly willing to associate himself with the Allied cause.

But the omission does not imply that the British government disagrees with the political steps taken by General Eisenhower, presumably with the advice of Robert Murphy, the State Department representative who skillfully handled this Government's North African policy in the field for almost two years before the Anglo-American force arrived. For the British authorities understand quite as well as our own the vital importance of a secure base and line of communications through Morocco and Algeria. These were two of the immediate practical advantages of obtaining, with the aid of Darlan, the cooperation of the French military and civilian authorities throughout French North Africa.

THE BRITISH First Army, some American and French units cooperating, is the spearhead of the attack on the Axis forces in the Tunis-Bizerte sector. The lives of British as well as American troops depend upon the solidity of Algeria and Morocco. The British government must be credited also with appreciating quite as much as the American Government the value of the accession of all of French West Africa.

In appraising the criticism which comes from various British sources, two factors must be kept in mind. The first is that to the British, Darlan is more than an unprincipled opportunist. He is even more than a French official who ordered the French to resist at all costs British incursions into Vichy-controlled territory. He is peculiarly, almost pathologically, anti-British. Apart from all other considerations, the prospect of having a violent Anglophobe at the helm of a liberated France would naturally arouse deep and well-founded opposition in Great Britain. At the same time, the British are particularly bound to the Fighting French, who carried on when others lost faith. Apart from whatever specific commitments they have made, the British have a moral debt to the Fighting French which they doubtless are eager to discharge.

BUT, at the same time, during most of the last two years the British and American governments have had a closer understanding as to French policy than appeared on the surface. There have been disagreements, but informed British authorities have not been blind to the advantages of the contacts which the American Government was able to maintain with various French leaders and groups who were beyong the reach of the British and Fighting French. For a long period, there appeared to be a mutual understanding that the British and American governments would work separate sides of the street.

The practical gains from working with Admiral Darlan have been so immense that they overwhelm criticisms based on ideological grounds. The weakness of most of the objections made was implicit in the speech of General Catroux, a stout and able Fighting French leader. Catroux attacked on the only valid ground—asserting that the arrangements with Darlan jeopardize instead of secure the base and communications lines in Algeria and Morocco. He intimated that Darlan and his followers would swing to the Axis side if the Germans came down through Spain. That, indeed, would be a catastrophe. But General Eisenhower, with his advisers on the spot—including General Giraud—should be in a better position to judge.

At the same time, as Secretary Hull has reminded representatives of the Fighting French, Darlan's position in Africa does not establish him as the heir to the government of France. There are fewer than three million Frenchmen in all French North and West Africa.

The time is getting near when it would be helpful to have a fusion of all French leaders working for French liberation, or at least an understanding among them. But the African campaign has not ended. On the contrary, it is approaching another critical point. The only purposes which should be considered now are the success of the campaign and conserving the lives of the men—British and French, as well as American—who are fighting it.

French Face Starvation

No Food From Africa

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 10 (AP).—France, whose multiple political problems are beginning to be overshadowed by the sharper need to supply the people with daily bread, is establishing community kitchens in an effort to meet the rapidly worsening food situation.

The other countries of Europe at the same time are doing their utmost to feed their people as winter again sets in.

The seriousness of the French food situation was underlined this week when the food ministry declared the future was "somber" and that the difficult situation "has become formidable since the events of North Africa."

The loss of this territory cost France a further decrease in fats, meats, grains and vegetables, in addition to some 4,700,000 hectoliters (124,164,600 gallons) of wine, with the certainty that officials would be compelled to reduce the already scanty rations.

Prisoners to Suffer

The difficulty in distributing what food is available prompted the establishment of the community kitchens where meals will cost from eight to 16 francs, based on monthly incomes, with the meals the same for all comers.

The loss of the African supplies also will be felt by French prisoners in Germany who have been receiving millions of food packages which one Vichy correspondent described as "absolutely indispensable" for their nourishment.

What the loss of the African supplies mean to the French can be seen from the fact that this year Algeria sent 400,000 quintals (44,092 tons) of flour to France. France also will be deprived of 200,000 tons of phosphates much needed for its impoverished soil. The wheat loss, it has been estimated, would be sufficient to have fed France for 45 days, while the wine loss is equal to three months' consumption.

Morocco had announced it would send France 153,000 quintals (about 16,865 tons) of dried vegetables, and about 15,000 tons of seeds, while from North Africa the country had expected to receive about 1100 tons of dried figs, 66,000 tons of prepared fish, and 77,000 tons of oranges and other citrus fruits.

From Tunisia, the French had expected 16,000 tons of olive oil and from French West Africa 200,000 tons of oil-producing nuts which would have gone a long way to help meet the deficiency in fats. Last year French North Africa sent France 300,000 live sheep, 80,000 frozen carcasses, about 165,345 tons of eggs and two and a half times that tonnage in dried vegetables.

Better Than 1917-18

When the occupation troops overran the former free zone in France, they were told they would have to pay in French money for supplies and that they could purchase only amounts specified in the ration cards.

In Nazi Germany while there is almost no food now not rationed, the situation at the beginning of the fourth war year is considered by neutral writers to be generally better than in 1917-1918.

In contrast to this, however, according to Der Bund, a Bern newspaper, the demands on the workers' nerves is incomparably higher and despite all preparations the people live from hand to mouth while Goering tries to raise their hopes with promises of increased production next year. Small extra rations have been ordered for Christmas.

The bread ration, exceptionally low in Europe, was raised slightly in Italy last month, but the fat problem remains knotty.

New clothing and shoe cards were issued last month and further cut the amounts of these essentials, while the coal ration also was cut.

Finland is an agricultural liability for the Nazis, who had to send them grain and other foodstuffs, but even so there have been food demonstrations, especially in the cities.

In Norway the Nazis instituted new measures, calling for the slaughter of 200,000 cattle. The country is facing real hunger.

Politics And War

By Paul Schubert

The Problem Of Darlan

DAKAR is "ours." For months this fortified harbor and airdrome on the Atlantic coast of French West Africa has signified potential threat—has been spoken of as an Axis U-boat base, an Axis air base, a mustering place for Axis strength aimed at the South Atlantic and at South America. Dakar is only 1620 miles from Natal at the northeast tip of Brazil.

SCHUBERT

But now Dakar is beyond the realm of Axis influence. More, Dakar has definitely passed into the realm of United Nations influence as a very real military asset.

We've probably picked up some French allies at Dakar, too, to fight beside us in battle—perhaps some French naval craft and aircraft, and some officers and men of the French army who will be glad of a fresh chance to face the Boche and the Fascisti.

All this was at stake in the dealings between General Eisenhower and French Admiral Darlan. And more.

DARLAN, it appears, was the go-between, the man able to influence the French local commanders at places like Dakar, able to arrange cooperation between French forces and the United Nations.

On occasion after occasion Darlan has delivered. The things he has delivered are very important—valuable strategic objects. It would have cost the British and ourselves a great deal of time, blood and expense to take these objectives in a military way. And some of them were objectives that we had to have. If we didn't get them peaceably, we should have had to fight for them. They are part of the structure of our strategic position in North Africa and the Mediterranean area.

Small wonder that General Eisenhower negotiated with Admiral Darlan—and that on the whole, this country, which has no great respect for Darlan, approaches the situation which has made it possible to take what this man has to deliver, as a short-cut in preference to getting the same things in a harder way.

This country views Darlan with the suspicion reserved for any turncoat. The man in the American street doesn't trust Darlan any further than the length of a little finger—it would take the admiral a long, long time and much very extraordinary performance to win the trust of America's citizens.

Nor has the average American the slightest illusion as to why Darlan is doing what he does. Darlan is motivated neither by the interests of the United States nor those of the United Nations, except insofar as our interests further his own. Darlan acts like a man who recently believed the Axis was going to win the war, who then regulated his conduct according to that belief, but who now has changed his mind and is stringing along with the new "winner." Darlan acts like a man with French political ambitions, who realizes that France is now weak to the point of pathos, that the only strength in the world after this war will be the strength of the winning side. Darlan acts like a man who wants the winning side to be indebted to him—and as a reward hopes to be steered into a position of authority in the new postwar French state, as one who "delivers" and will go on delivering.

Perhaps he does all this for reasons of patriotism. Perhaps not. That is beside the point. The point is, he does it. And General Eisenhower, fighting an important campaign, has dealt with him.

Our President has told us that our relation with Admiral Darlan is temporary—a relation of expediency. That agrees exactly with the attitude of the American citizen. We haven't the slightest desire or intention to go into the French King-making business, or even to influence French domestic politics. Our feeling is that the political structure of the French state after the war will be exclusively a problem for the French people to solve, so long as they do so in accordance with international interest and their world responsibilities.

The interpretation of this last phrase is the joker in the French political deck.

In dealing with Darlan, we have unavoidably and unwillingly become a factor in French domestic politics, notoriously a hot-bed of partisan feeling, intrigue, bad will and violent animosity.

A FRENCH faction most bitterly arrayed against the Darlan group is the Fighting French group whose figurehead is General de Gaulle, and whose political philosophy is at opposite poles from the Darlan philosophy. Unfortunately, the Fighting French were unable to "deliver" in North Africa, and as such have few bargaining points in practical politics. They have, however, a very strong moral argument, and one of particular effect upon British political sensibilities. And Fighting French headquarters is in London.

To the Briton in the street, an American general named Eisenhower has dealt with a French turncoat named Darlan. And the fact that Eisenhower happens to command British troops in North Africa makes the entire business strangely personal and curiously unpalatable. This raises a nice problem in "unity" of command, for the British reaction might be entirely different had a British general in command of the same force, done the same thing.

At this moment the French could make a vast contribution to the winning of the war if they could find it possible to bury the French domestic political hatchet. It's too much to expect them to do this. The British and ourselves will have to be realists—go on and win the war, and let post-war domestic French politics become a post-war problem, with as little influence upon our present job and upon our working alliance as possible.

The Once Over

Dear Oscar:

I guess you read about that recent sensation among the WAACS where one of the girls went A. W. O. L. and performed as a strip teaser. We were all upset, of course, and most of the girls were very critical, but I must say I could make allowances and in a way understand. I think she just got so tired of taking orders about what to wear and how to wear it that this, coupled with the fact no girl ever feels quite natural in uniform, just unbalanced her a little.

It is an odd life for a girl and has a strong effect on some. We lost two WAACS from our outfit last month who kept coming out for drill in kimonos and put up a fight, insisting that they were on special duty and that kimonos were fatigue uniforms. It was plain to be seen that their minds had become a little warped by the sharp change to Army life.

Another girl disappeared and when found she was riding the flying horses in an amusement park that had been closed for the winter. The flying horses were not running, of course, but she was sitting on one and yelling that she was Joan of Arc. She was wearing high-heeled shoes and a new hat that was right out of a milliner's window. She had on the regular WAAC coat but was wearing silk pajama pants. She had just succumbed to a mania to be free from restraint, style dictation, lectures and too many regulations.

So, if you read of curious things happening among us girls in uniform, be broadminded and understanding. Don't misunderstand me, Oscar, my dear. I feel all right personally. My reactions are all normal, in fact, I like being in the WAACS very much and do not even mind inoculations, drills and regular hours any more.

Sometimes I wish I had waited and joined the WAVES. Especially when I pick up the paper every day and read that they are down at Daytona Beach, a famous winter resort which they have almost captured and now own outright. I was there once for a few days and it is a lovely place to serve your country if you can do it in that kind of atmosphere.

I suppose you read about Paul McNutt being named in charge of all manpower problems in the United States. Isn't he handsome? If he is also named head of all womanpower it is all right with me. Just in fun, Oscar. I am only joking, of course. (You are really better looking than he is and anyhow I think his hair must be artificial.)

There is not much to say now except to say I love you, miss you terribly and wish you would go out and capture Mussolini and Hitler and end the whole business like you promised.

Boy, how good it will seem when we girls can get back into frilly things, have breakfast in bed, keep up to date on perfumes and just say "No" when a voice on the telephone asks "Are you doing anything tonight, honey?"

All my love, HARRIET.

Power Of The Chief

The Montgomery Ward Case

THE FACTS of the Montgomery Ward case can be made clear. But as in many situations, the facts, standing alone, are not enough. The case must be read in the light of attendant circumstances and background. On its higher plane, the case goes to the heart of public policy. On its lower plane, it goes to the heart of politics. But first the facts:

SULLIVAN

A. C. I. O. union made demands upon Montgomery Ward (nothing to do with wages).

The dispute went before the War Labor Board.

The board ordered—the board's word is "directed"—Montgomery Ward to sign a contract with the union. The board said the contract must contain certain provisions which the board wrote out and included in its order. One provision was for "maintenance of union membership"—meaning that after a fixed date Montgomery Ward must discharge any worker who fails to keep up his union membership.

MONTGOMERY WARD declined to comply with the board's order, basing its declination mainly on the "maintenance of membership" clause.

A member of the board, Mr. Wayne L. Morse, said the board would use "whatever forces of government are necessary to compel compliance."

The board turned the case over to President Roosevelt. The President issued an order: "I direct Montgomery Ward & Co. to comply without further delay." The President gave as his authority that he was acting as "Commander in Chief in time of war."

Montgomery Ward wrote the President: "Your order of November 18 has been received and will be promptly obeyed."

At this point arose the latest stage of the story. Montgomery Ward, in signing the contract, said it must include a statement saying: "The following provisions are not voluntarily agreed to by the company . . . and are incorporated herein . . . under duress; and only because the President of the United States as Commander in Chief in time of war has expressly ordered that they be included."

The C. I. O. union objected to inclusion of this statement in the contract. The union went back to the War Labor Board. The board proposed a softened modification—dropping out the words "under duress" and substituting "after protest."

Montgomery Ward said this was unsatisfactory, insisted upon its own wording.

The War Labor Board directed Montgomery Ward to sign "forthwith."

There the case stands at this writing. The next step, presumably, would be action by the President. If he orders Montgomery Ward to sign, and they decline, there will arise the question: what will Mr. Roosevelt do? A common surmise is that he might order the Army to take over.

So much for the immediate facts of the case. But the background and atmosphere include some material conditions. One is a widespread feeling that President Roosevelt and his Administration are not impartial on matters affecting labor and labor leaders—that the Administration is tied up with the labor leaders and unions as a political movement. This feeling is so general as to be commonplace—it is expressed not only by critics of the Administration but by friends and members of it.

BECAUSE of this feeling, any action taken by the President in the Montgomery Ward case will stir Congress. In Congress, over and over, a start has been made to enact legislation about labor policy—legislation which, if enacted, would have covered the present case. On several occasions the President has intervened, sometimes personally, sometimes through members of his Administration, to prevent such legislation—in one case, after the House had passed such a measure by more than two to one. The inference has been that the President wished to keep labor matters in the hands of himself and subordinates appointed by him, such as the War Labor Board, in the present case.

Very material is the question what power the President has as Commander in Chief in time of war. A general feeling is that, by common consent, regardless of law or formal authority, practically any citizen ought to agree to any order or request made by the President in time of war. However, this feeling assumes that such request is a matter between the citizen and the country—that the citizen is asked to give up something to the Government, to do something for the benefit of the country. But in the present case, one group of private citizens is asked to give up something for another group of private citizens—the employer company is asked to give up something for the labor unions and leaders. Any citizen would give up his automobile or typewriter to the Government—but might hesitate to give it up to C. I. O. or John L. Lewis.

Very material is the fact that Montgomery Ward can not be considered a war industry. If the President can successfully make this demand on Montgomery Ward, he can make it on any citizen or group.

LaGuardia Calls WLB Summons In Jurisdiction Row 'Hammish'

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 10.—Mayor La Guardia replied sharply today to criticism of him by two members of the War Labor Board for failing to send representatives to a hearing to consider the board's jurisdiction over labor disputes between a municipality and its employes.

"The position of the City of New York and that of numerous other cities was known to the chairman of the War Labor Board on November 17, 1942," LaGuardia said in a statement. "The same position was made known to the President of the United States. Therefore, the props, lines and staging yesterday were not even clever acting. It was hammish."

When no New York City representatives appeared at the Washington hearing in a case involving a disagreement between the New York City transportation board and the Transport Workers of America (C. I. O.), WLB Board Member Wayne L. Morse commented:

"The failure of the city to cooperate does not build up or contribute to that kind of domestic morale necessary to win the war. In my opinion, the action of the mayor of the City of New York in not sending a representative to this meeting was not even clever gymnastics, but was a bad slip."

Board Chairman William M. Davis said he associated himself with Morse's remarks.

LaGuardia released on Tuesday a statement signed by the mayors or city managers of 79 cities saying that they had "respectfully and publicly" notified the WLB "that we cannot at any time submit to its jurisdiction any alleged dispute with city employes."

Hope Again Wins Poll's Top Honors

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—Motion Picture Daily announced today that Bob Hope, comedian, had won top honors for the second successive year in its seventh annual radio poll of more than 600 radio editors and columnists of the United States and Canada.

Hope was named champion of champions and also won first place in the comedian group. Fred Allen was second to him as champion of champions and Jack Benny was second as comedian.

Dinah Shore was voted the year's outstanding new star, succeeding Red Skelton, who placed third this year. Zero Mostel was second.

Herb Shriner was voted most promising star of tomorrow, a new classification. Other top honors were won by Fibber McGee and Molly, Bing Crosby, Fanny Brice, Madeleine Carroll and Raymond Gram Swing.

11,000 Bengalese Die In 2-Day Cyclone

London, Dec. 10 (AP).—A cyclone in the Midnapore District of Bengal, October 15 and 16, killed 11,000 persons, it was disclosed today.

The report said relief measures were hindered by the civil disobedience campaign in the area, which is a stronghold of Mohandas K. Gandhi's All-India Congress Party.

The Gallup Poll

Overwhelming Majority of British Public Favors Launching of Social Security Plan

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 10.—The British people are overwhelmingly in favor of a social security program similar to that embodied in the widely heralded Beveridge Plan.

Approval of the British public on the question comes some six years after a majority of the American people had approved the social security program of the United States.

Hailed by many as the most revolutionary program in British history, the Beveridge Plan would require weekly payments by employers and employes to provide social security benefits which in cases of sickness or unemployment would amount to approximately $8 per week (2 pounds) so long as unemployment or disability lasted.

70 Per Cent Approve Plan

The British Institute of Public Opinion, an affiliate of the American Institute, questioned Britons in all walks of life on what they thought of the proposal for a state-controlled insurance plan to which they and their employers would contribute and which would guarantee all sick and unemployed adults 2 pounds per week.

On this question, British people interviewed voted as follows:

In favor of insurance plan	70%
Opposed	16
Without opinions	14

Half of the 16 per cent who did not favor the plan said they felt their incomes were too small to permit larger contributions called for by this plan. Employe contributions under the Beveridge Plan would total about 86 cents per week. Payments to a married man with two children would, under the Beveridge Plan, amount to about $11.20 per week, as compared to the $7.20 unemployment benefits at present.

Others opposed to increasing payments said they were afraid such a plan might encourage loafing.

On the other hand, field reporters for the British Institute reported that many showed high enthusiasm for the scheme and dissatisfaction with what they termed the present inadequate unemployment and sickness benefits. Also prevailing is the view that the plan for social security benefits is "long overdue."

Covers Wider Range

The Beveridge Plan is more sweeping in its provisions than United States Social Security. It provides for every man, woman and child against every form of want or insecurity. It provides unemployment, sickness, medical, even funeral benefits. And it compels the worker and the employer to share the burden.

The differences in the standard of living in England and the United States is reflected in the average amounts provided in this country and in the proposed Beveridge Plan. In the United States, on the basis of Institute studies made before the war, the majority of Americans regarded $30 as the amount necessary to maintain a family of four at a minimum standard of decency. In England, a survey of an exactly comparable cross-section showed the British public regarded $16 per week as a minimum standard.

Bears Take Defensive Record Into 'Skin Game

Backs Averaged Only 1.8 Yards Each Try Against Burly Chicago Forwards

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Each opposing back who hit the Chicago line this year averaged 1.8 yards per crack. You can't go far at that pace and that's just it. Nobody went very far against the Bears.

The championship Chicagoans will throw a first string line averaging 227 pounds against the Redskins Sunday afternoon in Griffith Stadium with the National Pro League championship at stake. All veterans of at least three years.

In allowing only 519 yards rushing this year the Bear line, and reserves, set a league record. Typical of the Bear line was the figures on the Chicago Cardinal game of last Sunday. "Opponents' yards gained rushing, minus 27."

Danny Fortmann, who is a cinch to be named to the official all-league team this year, is one of the outstanding guards in the history of the pro game. Another year as all-league will just make five for the 210-pound Colgate graduate, a hospital interne in the off season. Danny is the lightest man between the ends.

A Veteran All-Leaguer

Joe Stydahar, the 6-foot-4, 200-pound ex-West Virginia University tackle, is a four-time veteran of the all-league team, and it might be five, but injuries kept Stydahar on the reserve list during the latter part of the season.

The guards and ends turn the backs loose and the Bear backs of this year set a league mark for yards gained, second only to that great machine of the last two years, which included George McAfee and Norm Standlee.

At center the Bears have the first man to unseat the great and now retired Mel Hein in nine years at the all-league post. That would be Bulldog Turner, the Hardin Simmons product who again this year was the league's outstanding snapper-back.

When Dick Plasman and Ken Kavanaugh entered the services the Bears were supposed to be hard up for ends. But George Wilson, Hampton Pool and Bob Nowaskey came up with their best years at the same time. Nowaskey, the George Washington product, has been starting the last several games.

Strong Supporting Cast

Supporting Stydahar at tackle is Lee Artoe, a former guard, who has already gained the Associated Press All-league team and when Stydahar was out with injuries Ed Kolman took over, and capably. Al Hoptowit, the Indian tackle, lends reserve strength.

Ray Bray, who will be second only to the Redskins' Willie Wilkin in poundage, carrying 245, is Fortmann's running mate at guard.

George Musso, all-league guard in 1935 and '37, is in his tenth year as a Bear lineman and he looks like he could stand 10 more.

The Bear line, while running up its defensive record, has not been pulling any punches. They have hit hard enough to have most of the Bears' 910 yards in penalties charged against them. They're just a string of big, rough, capable fellows who haven't lost a game all season. Thus far an unbeatable unit.

Bears Vote 32 Players Full Shares of Pool

Showing no fear of "internal dissention" before Sunday's championship playoff game, the Chicago Bears yesterday announced a generous distribution of the players' pool, voting 36 full shares and additional cash bonuses.

The Redskins, who were reported to be a house divided when they voted on the 1940 players' pool, have not yet voted and may wait until after the game.

The winning team figures to draw approximately $900 a man and the losers about $600.

The Bears voted full shares for the 32 players, Lieut. Comdr. George Halas, and Coaches Hunk Anderson Luke Johnsos and Paddy Driscoll. Halas has always turned his share back into the pool.

Half-shares were voted Andy Lotshaw and Joe Dollar, trainers. The clubhouse attendant was voted $50 and 17 Wrigley Field groundkeepers $20 each.

Each player's share will be assessed $10 for a purse for John L. Federovitch, former Bear tackle who is in a West Virginia hospital.

Georgetown's 105 Points Smash Scoring Records

WASHINGTON, DEC. 11, 1942

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Pro football has come a long way since its plug-ugly days when it was something of a flop-house haven for the maladjusted tramp athletes who eked out coffee and cakes from the game.

As late as 1926, when Red Grange upped and joined the pros, Bob Zuppke, his Illionis coach, was considerably pained. Grange was pictured as a wayward sort, profaning all the noble purposes of his college football training by putting in with the pros. He was trading his campus fame for the promise of big dough.

POVICH

Professional football was regarded with suspicion. Such bald-faced commercialism of a game whose glories were supposed to lie in the musty traditions of alma mater sickened the old grads and the pedagogues. Playing the game for pay was unthinkable, although a few misguided athletes were trying it. It was fly-by-night stuff for the most part. Sometimes the players got five bucks a game, sometimes more, sometimes nothing.

Red Grange lifted the whole pro football business out of bush-league era. Not instantaneously, but it was from the date of his entrance into pro ranks that the upsurge began. Particularly did Grange start an influx of college stars into the pro league. When Grange cast his lot with the pros, it wiped out some of the prejudices. The game, with the ready cash it offered to campus stars owning little else than a diploma, began to look attractive.

Until Grange came along, pro football was struggling along without much success in the big cities. Only in the provinces was the game cutting much of a swath. The pros were starving in Chicago, Cleveland and New York. They were doing best in Pottsville, Canton, Frankford and Providence. They were pretending to be a big league, but they were playing in such whistle-stops as Racine, Duluth, Dayton and Rock Island.

In 1929, the pros cracked Boston. In 1931, they moved into Philadelphia and Brooklyn. By that time New York was in the league to stay. Big names of college football were beginning to flow into the league in the years after Grange joined up. League franchises which were selling for as little as $50 in the late twenties, started to take on value. In 1939, the Detroit franchise brought $200,000 on the market.

The pros began to prove that their game incorporated most of the lofty ideals of college football. Today their loyalty to their pro coaches is as fierce as any college coach could desire. Winning football games is not merely a matter of a day's work for the pros. It is a matter of pride. The smart coaches play on that pride.

Riley Smith, the old Redskin quarterback of 1937 once told us, "You've got to love this game to play it as a pro. You've got to love it more than you did in college. The bumps and knocks we take in the pro league isn't worth the money we get, but for me pro football has been more fun than college football. You meet the best, and it's a challenge. And you don't get the hokum they used to feed you in the colleges."

When the Redskins and Bears trot onto the field Sunday for their title play-off game, professional football will be presenting two shining examples of the spirit their game has produced. When the two squads come out of the dressing room, ready for the battle, the dough they know they'll get will be a comparatively trifling item. Their determination to win the ball game will shame that of a college team. We've seen 'em come out, sober, grim-faced and restless for the battle.

The Chicago Bears, particularly, are Exhibit A in the job a pro coach can do on a bunch of hard-bitten pro players who supposedly are in the game for dough. For years, fans around the league have been mistakingly regarding the Bears as a bunch of big, bruisers incapable, perhaps, of some of the loftier sentiments. That's not true.

The Bears have a zest for the game that is wonderful to see. We asked one of the Bears' assistant coaches recently if the Bears would beat the Redskins. "Yes," he said. "By how much?" we asked him. "By just as much as they can to make George Halas happy. That's what they'll be thinking about when they go out there against the Redskins, making enough touchdowns to show Halas they're not letting him down. Those big bruisers love that guy."

Harlow, Ex-Virginia Ring Ace, In U. S. After Battling Japs

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 9.—Capt. H. Maynard (Bull) Harlow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Harlow, of Ivy Road, and former boxing star at the University of Virginia, is now confined to a Salt Lake City hospital, with a recurrence of malaria which he originally contracted in a jungle island of the Pacific.

The captain had been visiting his brothers, Sec. Lieut. Bernard C. and James E. Harlow, who are bombardiers stationed at the Salt Lake Air Base. When he is released from the hospital, it is expected that he will visit his home here before going to his new station.

Has been Jap Fighter

The one-time intercollegiate boxing champ has been a Jap-fighter in New Guinea and Australia since last February, and was once lost in the wilds of New Guinea. He was co-pilot of a plane over New Guinea when it ran out of gas and was forced to make a landing. They chose what appeared to be a grassy field for the landing, but it turned out to be a swamp. The nine members of the crew were forced to cut the thick grass every inch of the way in order to get out. They were in the wet swamp four days and three nights, during which time all the members contracted malaria.

American U. Five Victim By 105-39

Mahnken, 6-Foot-8 Center, Leads Rout; Five Iron Men Play Full Game for A. U.

Embarking upon an unbelievable scoring streak, Georgetown University's court smoothies smashed all previous District scoring records last night and buried American University under a 105-to-39 score on the Eagles' court.

Whipping the ball around the baffled but battling Eagles in sensational fashion and feeding it to Freshman John Mahnken and Andy Kostecka under the basket for tap-in two pointers, the Hoyas wrote a new meaning to the court term of "a hot club."

During a 13-minute period in the second half Georgetown's first stringer rolled up 49 points and left the court in a group with five minutes to play, with the score 89 to 35. Second and third stringers maintained the pace and passed the century mark with two minutes to play.

Spectators were packed 10 deep in the entrance of the small gymnasium. It was Georgetown's home game and the fans made such a din when the Hoyas pased 100 points, a first time feat for local college clubs, that the officials called time out. Their whistles were useless.

Eagles in Early Threat

Mahnken, the 6-foot-8-inch center from west New York, who scored 1650 points in his high school carreer, wound up with 29 points and Kostecka, the high scorer of Georgetown's marvelous frosh club of last year was next with 22.

Billy Hassett and Danny Kraus whose cutting, faking and passing helped feed the ball to Mahnken and Kostecka for the 51-point total of the two tall boys were aided by Lloyd Pottolichio and Meigs Reilly, the latter a 5-foot-6 forward whose speed helps make up for his lack of height.

American University's starting five played the entire game. This club which beat Baltimore by a 69-43 count the previous night made it interesting with their zone defense and fast break in the first half. They cut the early Georgetown lead to 10-9 and with 10 minutes played the Hoyas were ahead only 16-12.

The Hoyas gradually worked under the basket, however, took a 10-point lead at 29-19 and were out in front, 40-24 at halftime.

The second half started slowly but suddenly the Hoyas clicked. Hassett and Kraus, who scored 10 and 14 points in addition to their fancy floor game, fed the ball to Mahnken, who stood under the basket and out of a maze of arms under the basket the big center would grab the ball, hold it high and toss it in the cords. Mahnken has a world of ability in addition to his height, however.

First Team Stays In

With eight minutes of the second half played the score was 65-30 and four minutes later 79-32. Ripley, anxious to give his starting club a competitive workout before their big game with Aberdeen Proving Grounds Monday night, left them in for 15 minutes, until the score was 89-35.

Sylvester Goedde, a half-inch taller than Mahnken, put the Hoyas over the 100-mark with a follow-up shot and sub Bill Fenney finally concluded the scoring at 105 just seconds before the final gun.

George Zuras, who was plugging all the way, managed to toss in 17 points for American and Bart Fugler made 14. The Eagles were driving and defending as though a point meant the game all the way, but with the basket seemingly drawing the Hoya shots home they could do nothing about it.

4 More Husker Coaches Due To Join Navy

Lincoln, Nebr., Dec. 10 (AP).—The University of Nabraska athletic department may lose the major portion of its coaching staff to the Navy.

Football Coach Glenn Presnell has passed his physical examination in connection with his application for a Navy commission, the Omaha recruiting office announced today. His papers have been sent to Washington, and if his application is accepted he is expected to be assigned to the new physical education training program for college reserves.

A. J. "Lew" Lewandowski, head basketball coach and assistant grid mentor, has applied for a commission in the Navy preflight physical training setup, and freshman football coach Bill Pfeiff reports for active duty with the Navy by January 1.

Line Coach Elmer Holm has sought to have his commission in the Army Reserve reinstated.

Nebraska has already lost former Head Coach Col. Lawrence "Biff" Jones, Lieut. Col. Harold Browne and Maj. Harold Petz to the Army.

Mauriello Favored Over Nova Tonight

Winner of Madison Square Garden Slated To Get Fight Bivins for 'Duration' Title

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 10.—Lou Nova, the California laughing boy whose chief claim to fistic fame up to now has been undisputed "champion of Max Baer," gets what amounts to his last chance tomorrow night to hit the heavyweight jackpot.

He makes an appearance in Madison Square Garden in a 10-rounder with Tami Mauriello, the young Bronx belter, and the winner probably will be paired with Jimmy Bivins, the Cleveland clouter, in a bout that would have a direct bearing on the much-billed "duration heavyweight title." And Tami is a 2-to-5 betting choice right now to finish on top.

No one knows better than Lou that it's a case of "produce—or else" this time. He's so convinced of it, as a matter of fact, that he has discarded all his theories of Yogi fisticuffing, the cosmic punch and the dynamic stance with which he confused just about everyone—including himself, some of the time—in his last turn around the big apple.

Of course, the right-hand punch with which Joe Louis rocked Lou to sleep a year ago, also probably had something to do with knocking these ideas out of his head. Even Lou admits that shot on the whiskers helped.

Since then, Nova also was given a good going over by Lee Savold, who can hardly be placed in Louis' league as a larruper. In fact, after the waltz Savold and Bivins put on in the Garden a few weeks ago, the fistic faithful have their own idea about what league the boys belong in.

With tomorrow's tussle, Nova gets to the "tthree—and out" point in his career. Twice before, he was charging up toward the throne, only to have the roof fall in. Once Tony Galento sidetracked him and last fall, Louis turned the trick with that one shot. So, if Lou wants to add some fistic luster to his self-acclaimed record as a championship horseshoe heaver and soft ball pitcher, he has to go back to his two victories over Baer.

Wm. & Mary Line Coach Joins Service

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Dec. 10.—Albert H. (Pop) Werner, who turned out one of the best football lines in the Nation at the College of William and Mary this year, has joined the procession of coaches moving into the Navy's physical fitness program.

He has been commissioned a junior lieutenant in the Naval Reserve and has been ordered to report for duty at the Chapel Hill (N. C.) Preflight School on January 7.

Werner has been at William and Mary ever since Carl Voyles went there in 1939 to be director of athletics and head coach.

Now 34, he began football in his home town of Lykens, Pa., and then switched to the Kiski Preparatory School before going to Duke. At Durham he played under Coach Jimmy DeHart and then Wallace Wade.

After graduation from Duke he coached for four years in two North Carolina high schools and then went to Morris Harvey College as assistant football coach and basketball coach for two years before joining Voyles' staff.

Leafs' Inspired Hockey Wins

International News Service Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 10.—Toronto's Maple Leafs moved into a three-cornered tie for first place in the National Hockey League tonight when they beat Chicago's fast moving Hawks, 7 to 2.

Lacking the services of Schriner, Apps and Copp, the Leafs played an inspired game, making every move count, but Chicago succeeded in banging home the first counter as a result of a heat combination play. Hamill had the final jab, with Carse and March getting credit as the helpers.

Throughout the entire second and third periods, the Leafs played like Supermen, banging home four goals in the second and adding three more in the final game.

Goal getters for the Leafs were, Carr, Hamilton, Hill, McLean, Taylor and Stewart. The second Chicago goal, earned in the last period, came on a breakaway by Dahlstrom and did the trick on a solo effort.

Stanford and Illinois Meet on Court Jan. 2

Young Calls Commission On Carpet

City Fathers to Hear Details of Trouble Preceding Ahearn's Fights Tuesday Night

By Al Costello

Post Staff Writer

Sweeping changes in the District boxing picture, from the commissioners right down to the pettiest of officials, were promised yesterday by District Commissioner J. Russell Young, if the inquiry which starts today at 11 a. m. in his office reveals them as necessary.

Young, at whose request the District boxing commissioners were summoned to appear before the Board of Commissioners today, intends to "get to the bottom" of the controversy which now has reached a head after weeks of festering, and which was culminated Tuesday night at Uline Arena when Owner Migiel J. Uline and Promoter Goldie Ahearn announced they would enter separate suits testing the Boxing Commission's powers, which they allege has reached a point of virtual dictatorship.

Young's Statement

Commissioner Young said:

"There is definitely something wrong with boxing here in the District. I am intensely interested and mean to get to the bottom of the picture. I have summoned the three District Boxing Commissioners to appear before the Board of District Commissioners Friday at 11 a. m. for a first hand report. In time, others closely connected with the sport will be summoned. I can assure you we not only will get to the bottom of the situation but we will take steps to correct anything wrong, even if we have to dismiss persons from the top right down the line. We shall spare no feelings and let nothing hinder us in getting to the bottom of this mess."

Mr. Young said he tentatively planned to hear the Boxing Commission's side of the story today and later planned to call in sports writers for an "off the record" discussion before summoning Promoter Goldie Ahearn, Arena Owner Mike Uline, and Promoter Joe Turner, who promotes at Turner's Arena and who has, so far, steered clear of any outward discussion of the situation. Later, Mr. Young hinted, everyone may be called in for a summation.

Plenty of Fireworks

That fireworks may be expected aplenty is assured.

Uline and Ahearn have instructed their respective attorneys, Denny Hughes and Fred Ball, of Pierson & Ball, to proceed with separate suits against the boxing

Fort Meade Is Opponent Tomorrow

Gallagher, Gustafson Pace Well-Rounded Club; Coach Zahn Preps for Aggies

George Washington University Basketball Coach Arthur Zahn has selected a starting lineup for tomorrow night's opening game with Fort Meade in the Tech High gym with only Joe Gallagher and Ed Gustafson from last year's first team named to the 1942-43 edition.

Ted Reichwein, Jim Rausch and Bob Groetzinger are the newcomers to the opening whistle, although they all played in reserve roles last year. They replace Matt Zunic, Bobby Gilham and Roy McNeil.

Reichwein and Gustafson give the Colonials' starting lineup height but in all it shapes up as a well-rounded club. The first team places are by no means secure, however, for at least four other members of the 16-man squad are bidding for the varsity.

Little is known of the Fort Meade Club except that the lineup will include former college courtmen, mostly from the East.

Zahn will use the game to get a line on his talent for the invasion of the Oklahoma Aggies next Wednesday. The Aggies will be the only Midwestern club to play here this year and hold a string of victories over the Colonials.

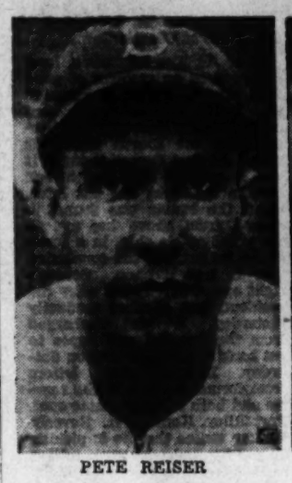
Dodgers' Pete Reiser Gets 1-A Draft Rating



PETE REISER

FRED FITZSIMMONS

Star Outfielder Reclassified; Brooklyn To Retain Fitzsimmons as Hurler, Coach

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 10.—Pete Reiser, star centerfielder of the Brooklyn Dodgers has been reclassified 1-A and probably will be called to the Army in January it was learned today at the same time that Branch Rickey announced Fred Fitzsimmons would be back with the club as a combination coach and pitcher.

Reiser, a resident of St. Louis, who registered with a draft board in Brooklyn, came here last week for a physical examination and was immediately pegged 1-A. Although he married last spring, Reiser had been classified 3-A originally because he contributed to the support of his family.

He is 23 years old and has been a star for the Dodgers for two years, winning the National League batting championship as a rookie in 1941 when Brooklyn captured the pennant.

The fact that Reiser had been here while all the baseball people were attending the winter meetings in Chicago was disclosed as a passing incident in the press conference at which Rickey made known the return of the veteran Fitzsimmons.

In announcing that "Fat Freddie," 41 years old, would try to pitch again next season as well as coach, Rickey asserted, "I took a lickin' on this one."

He had tried to get Fitzsimmons to accept the managership of the Dodgers' Montreal farm in the International League but the portly pitcher wanted to remain in the big leagues, partly because he owns a bowling alley near Ebbets Field in Brooklyn.

Rickey said: "Leo Durocher wants to retain him and because of the general player situation I have agreed. He says his arm hurts when he throws, but believes he still can pitch in relief. Just exactly what his duties will be, how much he will coach and how much he will pitch, will be for him and Durocher to work out."

Rickey said that he had taken the travel curtailment suggestions of Defense Transportation Director Joseph Eastman seriously and that he was considering the possibility of finding a training site for the Dodgers closer than Florida.

However, he explained that he had no definite alternatives in mind and that for the present the Dodgers' base still was West Palm Beach. In any case, he said, Brooklyn would not make a contemplated trip to Florida's West Coast for exhibition games.

He also disclosed the Dodgers had formed a working agreement with New Orleans of the Southern Association, adding the Pelicans to a chain which now includes Montreal, Durham, Johnstown (Pa.) Olean (N. Y.), Valdosta (Ga.) and possibly Dayton (Ohio).

Four Colonial Officials at S. C. Meeting

Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University; John Baker, football coach; John Busick, director of athletics, and his predecessor, Max Farrington, will make up the Colonial representation in the Southern Conference meeting today in Richmond.

The G. W. delegation will advocate the use of freshmen in varsity competition, although whether sports will be possible next year in any form is the major problem of the athletic heads.

The official meeting is a one-day affair but G. W. officials will remain over tomorrow morning for schedule-making purposes, etc.

Ortiz, Salica Title Fight Is Canceled

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 10.—Notice of cancellation of the January 1 bantamweight championship fight in Mexico City between Manuel Ortiz of Los Angeles, N. B. A. recognized champion, and Lou Salica, approved titleholder of the New York Athletic Commission, was received today by Willie Ketchum, manager of Salica.

Ketchum was notified that the bout was off in a letter from Baldomero Romero, promoter of the international sporting enterprises in Mexico City. Romero wrote that: "The bout is off because the manager of Ortiz wants the promoters to pay all taxes, including the 15 per cent Government tax," according to Ketchum.

Waterfield-McCardle Duel To Feature 'Bowl' Battle

Former Will Attempt to Pass Foe Dizzy, Latters Relies on Speed in Coast Game

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Dec. 10.—Will Waterfield outpass U. S. C., or will McCardle outspeed U. C. L. A.?

On the answer may hinge the outcome of Saturday's clash for the right to represent the West in Pasadena's Rose Bowl football game on New Year's Day.

They call Georgia, the Eastern bowl nominee, Sinkwich & Co., after fleet-footed Frankie. But the fans, who love nothing better than to single out one man and credit him with much of a team's accomplishments, have had an almost impossible job in these parts this fall.

Duel May Decide Issue

There isn't a player on either side in this cross-town classic who will get much of a tumble from the All-America pickers. Nonetheless, the performances of a couple of local products, Mickey McCardle, Troy's mighty mite, and Bullet Bob Waterfield of the Bruins, may well decide the issue. Both were easy selections on this year's Associated Press all-coast eleven.

McCardle is 20, a sophomore, weighs 165 and stands 5 feet 11 inches. As Troy's leading ballpacker, he has a season average of 3.55 yards per play. He's scored 25 points and passed to four touchdowns.

Waterfield, a 22-year-old janitor, weighs 190, has done almost all of U. C. L. A.'s passing and punting. Yet, despite being the target of charging opposition forwards all season, he has completed 51 out of 119 passes for a total of 979 yards. He's tossed to 11 touchdowns and tallied one himself. Although he's carried the ball only 21 times all season on running plays, his yardage average is 3.28. On 59 kicks, he has averaged 38.01 yards.

Trojans Are Favored

The Trojans, as of today, were 2-to-3 favorites—a state of affairs which has Troy Coach Jeff Cravath almost in tears.

"Why," he announces mournfully, "I say sincerely that Waterfield is just as good a passer as Angelo Bertelli, of Notre Dame, and look how he ruined us."

"I think one running attack is strong enough to score on the Bruins, but I'm equally certain that our pass defense cannot possibly stop them from scoring on us."

Many of the so-called experts, who have been wrong before and could be again, are giving U. C. L. A. a shade the best of it, figuring that the Bruins' chance against Troy's ground game is probably better than the Trojan pass defense.

On the S. C. side of the ledger is the indisputable fact that U. C. L. A. has never beaten U. S. C., and the cash customers are always inclined to string with the champ.

Yale Planning Grid Invasion Of Virginia

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 10 (AP).—Yale University's football team will make its second trip below the Mason-Dixon line in Yale history next year if negotiations between the Elis and the University of Virginia are completed.

Capt. Norton G. Pritchett, Cavalier athletic director, said yesterday that a tentative date had been arranged for Yale to play Virginia here in 1943—subject to war conditions.

Pritchett said that negotiations now under way with Ogden Miller, Yale athletic director, "permit announcement of the game."

"We have hopes," the Virginia official added, "and expectations that Yale will be able to play in Charlottesville next year. The game is still pending, however."

A Yale regulation bans long football trips for the Elis. Yale played Georgia at Athens, Ga., several years ago, helping the University of Georgia to dedicate its new stadium.

If played, the game will be the third in recent years between the Elis and the Cavaliers. Two years ago Bill Dudley, then a junior, led the Cavaliers to a 19-14 win over Yale, but last year Virginia bowed, 21 to 19, after leading, 19 to 0, at half-time. The teams did not meet this year.

Captain Pritchett said Virginia's grid schedule was nearing completion and would be announced "within the next 30 days."

bosses individually and as a group, charging the commission exceeded its powers to the extent of hurting their enterprises, last Tuesday night when Uline, Ahearn, Uline Arena Manager Lee J. Approximately $900 were returned in refunds, as a result of the confusion, Perrin estimated.

Compromise Reached

The commission previously had threatened to revoke Ahearn's permit for the show unless he increase his planned price of $1.80 ringside to the customary $2.40 and that the ice be removed entirely from the arena floor. The Boxing Commission Thursday waived the $2.40 ringside price demand but stuck to its ice removal demand until only last Saturday, when the compromise was agreed upon to leave the ice on the floor but that no seats over the ice were to be sold.

Agnew and Morgan insisted three rows of ringside seats were not necessary and demanded their removal. Perrin and Ahearn, and later Uline, refused to move them. The fights finally were presented almost an hour and a half late and after many spectators had either left or demanded return of their money.

Ahearn and Uline, in their respective suits, plan to question the commission's authority in trying to establish prices as well as charge "discrimination and loss of revenue." Uline also plans to question the "health" measure angle the commission used in ist announced decision to revoke Ahearn's permit unless the ice was removed, and which it later rescinded with the understanding no seats on the floor over the ice be sold.

Racing Gives $131,000 to Relief Fund

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Dec. 10.—Almost one-half of the total sum raised for Army emergency relief in the Third Service Command area this year has been contributed by the managements of the nine race tracks of Maryland, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, announced today.

Starting in April, when the management of the Havre de Grace track gave $6000 of the proceeds of its spring meeting to Army relief, contributions from the tracks mounted steadily. By the end of the fall season contributions totaled more than $131,000.

"These figures, together with those representing the generosity of the baseball and motion picture industries, should demonstrate how quick these managements are to assume a real patriotic responsibility," General Reckord declared.

4 Schoolboy Court Games Slated Today

Three of the District's scholastic basketball teams get their first action for the season today in a four-game high school schedule.

The headliner finds Roosevelt, interhigh champion in 1940-41, taking on Bethesda-Chevy Chase at the Rider court at 3:45. Against the Bethesdans, who already boast a 41-21 margin over National Training, Roosevelt will toss a veteran lineup, headed by Charley Howard. Other last year's players are Billy Garner, Pret Wannan, Ollie Kennedy and Bunny Citrenbaum.

Montgomery Blair High, in an 8 p. m. clash, plays host in its opener to Briarley Military Academy. In two alumni encounters Calvin Coolidge, preparing for its second year in the interhigh series, starts its season and Gonzaga plays its second game after beating N. T. S., 41-20.

Yellow Mask Features Next Week's Mat Card

The Yellow Mask has made a big impression not only on the public but on Promoter Joe Turner, for yesterday he was signed to headline next Wednesday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

It will be the hooded grappler's first headline shot, and comes after a month of villainous wrestling by the yellow one.

The Mask's latest performance was the other night, when he held Johnny Long, the Baltimore shipyard worker, to a 30-minute draw. It was one of those give-and-take duels, with the Mask almost within sight of victory when the 30 minutes ended.

'Bottle Pool' Meet Planned for Press

The pool and billiard committee of the National Press Club yesterday announced a bottle-pool tournament, play to begin after closing of the entries December 20. The tournament is open only to members of the club.

Entries may be filled with the club office with a fee of $1. Contestants will play three games, each entrant to play every other entrant. Among the prizes will be the new book, "Principles and Practice of Bottle Pool" by Coleman Barrett.

Try Flying Scores Again in Feature Race at Charles Town

Weatherite Runs Second To Fleet Ace

Victor All But Sews Up Speed Honors at Meet; Sorgho Takes Down Show Money

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 10.—Try Flying, a fleet son of Flying Heels and Try Come, just about clinched the speed championship of the meeting when he won the sixth race today, the feature of the Thursday program. Owned and conditioned by Mrs. Arthur Bevans, Try Flying scored his second victory over the four and a half-furlong route and sent into defeat, among others, his old rival, P. H. Faulconer's Roman Boy. In fact, Roman Boy was a beaten-off fourth in the field of seven.

Mrs. G. O. Russell's Weatherite was second, beaten a length and a quarter. Four lengths farther back came H. G. Bedwell's Sorgho to be third in the abbreviated sprint. The winner, successful in 11 of his 21 starts this year, was a heavily-backed favorite and returned a $4 mutuel.

Victor Gets Strong Ride

Jockey W. Cornay, who has been gaining friends among local fans, put up a strong ride on Try Flying He had the 4-year-old off alertly along with Roman Boy. Try Flying shook off the latter leaving the backstretch and drew out to what appeared to be a comfortable lead. Weatherite was within striking distance and rallied under Apprentice Vincent Bracciale's handling in the stretch. Cornay had to place Try Flying to a drive to stave off the bid of the Prince of Wales filly.

The first event brought a thrilling photo finish in which Mrs. H. S. Horkheimer's Satchel was a neck winner over Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's Hand Me Down. Two and a half lengths behind the keen battle for first money came Mrs. Irene E. Fleischer's Light Vale to be third.

Jockey Herb Claggett, Florida boy who was riding well here before being taken ill, returned to the saddle for the first time in several days and piloted Satchel. The winner paid $9.60 and was clocked in 0:51.

A Three-Nose Finish

A three-nose finish marked the second race and the camera called them in the following order: W. J. McCune's Truda, K. McLaughlin's Bullet B, and Vernon Arthur's Real Boy. Trade, an invader from the Middle West, came up on the outside to take the decision in the last jump. With Pavilion a dull-running favorite, Truda paid a $27.40 mutuel and completed a $198.80 daily double. Jockey S. Austin rode the 4-year-old filly the about seven furlongs in 1:30 3-5.

Jockey Herb Claggett rode his second winner of the afternoon aboard the Prospect Hill Farm's Jack Horner, a $5.20 favorite in the third event. Forced wide at the first turn, obtained racing room on the inside on backstretch to get to front and drew out to win easily. H. Donovan's Vindicator was second and a neck in front of H. T. Rorabaugh's Part One. The winner stepped the mile and a sixteenth in 1:53.

The Shenandoah Stable's Court Blenheim took command early and was a galloping winner of the fifth race under Jockey Martin Bletzacker's handling. The 4-year-colt won by seven lengths. R. J. Hall's Residue closed boldly along the rail to be second a half length in advance of the Inwood Stable's Avesta. The winner paid $7 and stepped the route in 1:52.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRUDA, $27.40, $14.80, $4.60; BULLET B., $3.80, $2.80; REAL BOY, $2.60.

TRUDA, sluggish early, worked way to contention on outside, responded gamely when placed to drive and was up in final jump. BULLET B. was steadied early, moved up leaving backstretch and fought it out with good energy. REAL BOY was closest to pace of FREETONE early, saved ground and came willingly at close. FREETONE saved ground while setting pace and faltered through stretch. SEPLIN closed willingly. MOODY was through early. PAVILION was rushed at first turn to reach serious contention, flattened out when shaken up and was tiring at close.

Daily Double—SATCHEL and TRUDA, paid $198.80

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:30. Off at 2:31. Winner, Prospect Hill Farm's b. g. Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al: The horseshoe, long regarded as an emblem of good luck, may have been the cause of the freak accident that sent Jockey Danny Scocca to the hospital for the fourth time this year. At first Scocca thought it was a clod of dirt that struck him in the right eye but later, when the bruise was found to extend from above the eye to the point of his chin, in a semi-circle, he came to the conclusion that it was a shoe. Scocca's right eye, swollen shut after the accident, was opening gradually yesterday. He was discharged from the hospital and hopes to get back in saddle action on Saturday. Received two letters from former jockeys in the service and both from the same spot, Fort Riley, Kans. Pvt. Beverly Hacker writes that he is picking up some spare change selling candy bars. Pvt. Chester Walters writes that he likes the Army. I wonder if the two boys have met. Hacker says former Jockey Ralph Neves is there and also Pep Proctor, former jockey agent for Paul Keiper. From Fort White, Oreg., former Trainer F. Simms writes that there are scores of former race-trackers stationed at that base. E. C. Allnutt, owner of the Cedar Hill Farm, near Rockville, Md., was a visitor here yesterday. Allnut, who has always raced a modest stable, is still striving to breed a Derby winner, watched Gay Boo finish out of the money and then in his own inimitable fashion told of the best thoroughbred he ever owned. Allnut speaking: "Bud (J. H.) Stotler and I were in our 'teens and touring the bushes. I had picked up a thoroughbred, bred by the late J. B. Haggin, named Chaplain, in 1909, and we headed for the Frederick Fair, the best of the bushes in those days. I rode the horse from Cedar Hill to Frederick, about 25 miles, and the next day won two races. Won four in three days and scratched out of one race to let Bud win one. Had a little money, so let the groom ride Chaplain back to the farm. Horses were tough in those days and I'm still trying for another Chaplain." See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—LINDEN GIRL has speed and probably is best of those gathered for the day's opener. CITY BRED breaks from the rail and is dangerous. BIG SNEEZE was a winner here last summer.

Second race—CAVU closed full of run in a previous effort and I'm going to string along with this one. KAPTIME has been racing well hereabouts and belongs in the first flight. APPREHEND will favor the soft track.

Third race—DURABLE and TANTRUM appear best of those assured post positions in this sprint. I prefer them in the order named. NOT ALONE and CANTER UP are dangerous horses on the reserve list.

Fourth race—FLYING WEST failed to get away alertly last out. With better racing luck, this one should take the chief end of this purse. ODDREE ran a promising race recently and is a threat. NEVER HOME to take care of the others.

Fifth race—THE MALAHAT, a recent surprise winner, appears well placed in this distance affair and I see no reason for mistakes. GRAND VENTURE and DIN may fill out the money bracket.

Sixth race—DARBY DALLAS and MARANDAN, a pair of doubtful starters, will be right there if taken off the "also eligible" list. STEADY ON and McHENRY will battle it out if the other pair fail to get in.

Seventh race—INDIAN SEA has the speed to take the top and may lead all the way in this test. GOLD JACK turned in a good effort last out and will be a dangerous contender. SUMMER STOCK will be right there if taken to the front early.

Eighth race—BURNER, DREAMING TIME, WILD IRISH and FIELDFARE all won races over this oval and I prefer them in the order named.

Best bet—THE MALAHAT.

CLOCKER MIKE AT CHARLES TOWN

Puerto Rican Named to Sub For Hanbury

Aponti Torres, a Puerto Rican fighting out of Philadelphia, will replace Lew Hanbury in the 10-round feature bout with Willie Pep, featherweight champion, on Monday night's boxing card at Turner's Arena, it was announced last night.

Hanbury was forced to withdraw from the non-title scrap when he fractured several knuckles on his right hand while sparring with Johnny Atchison. The injury will keep the local featherweight idle for several weeks, it was estimated.

In his latest effort, the new opponent for Pep pounded out a 6-round decision over one Manuel Flores in Madison Square Garden. He is handled by Charley Bennett, a well-known manager, and has been highly recommended.

Meanwhile a second heavyweight scrap has been arranged for the preliminaries. Client Conway, Golden Gloves champion of Newark, N. J., will meet Joe Carilli of Hartford in a 6-rounder. A previously signed 6-round bout sends Paul (Buddy) Komar of McKeesport, Pa., against Leo Matriaccini.

Dodgers Arrange N. O. Agreement

New Orleans, Dec. 10 (AP).—Charles Hurth, business manager of the New Orleans Pelicans of the Southern Association, today announced a working agreement had been reached between his club and the Brooklyn Dodgers, effective at the start of the 1943 baseball season.

The arrangement was completed after termination of an agreement for the past three years with the St. Louis Cardinals, formerly under Branch Rickey, who has left the Cardinals to become general manager for Brooklyn.

Whirly Expected to Break 26-Year-Old Fairgrounds Mark

'Big Tail' Should Ruin N. O. Record

Eads Will Ride Big Horse in Louisiana Handicap Saturday; Brownie Runs Also

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Dec. 10.—Whirlaway won't put a lot of blue chips on his record money winning stack here Saturday if he takes the $15,000 Added Louisiana Handicap, but he should be forced by a field of sharp competitors to break the 26-year-old mile and a quarter Fair Grounds mark.

"Mr. Big Tail" stepped that distance in 2.03 2-5 in the Washington Handicap at Laurel in October. If the track is fast, the Calumet Farm's champion, or his conqueror, should shatter the record of 2:04 3-5 set by Brynlaimah at the Fair Grounds in 1916.

Warren Wright's charger, carrying top weight of 130 pounds, is expected to find the medium-length Fair Grounds stretch to his liking and add about $12,000 to his already bulging bankroll of $548,461.

Jockey Wendell Eads has reported to Trainer Ben Jones here and will be aboard when the large field of lighter weight horses take after Whirly.

Sharpest of his competitors appears to be Joe W. Brown's 3-year-old Brownie, a triple Fair Grounds winner, followed closely by Louisiana Farms' Riverland and Coward & Dupuy's Marriage, both conquerors of Alsab this fall.

Browne scored in a 5½-furlong feature Thanksgiving Day, came back last Saturday to win at three-quarters and then bested Hugh S. Nesbitt's Copperman and A. Pelleteri's Bay View, two other Saturday eligibles, in Tuesday's distance trial at a mile and a sixteenth.

Marriage ran third to Mrs. H. P. Bonner's Heartman, another Louisiana contender, in Tuesday's 6-furlong spring trial. Mrs. M. Evans' Shot Put and the Greentree Stables' Corydon, both Fair Grounds winners, are eligible along with Nesbitt's Staretor.

2 Boston College Players Placed On All-America

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 10.—Boston College, beaten only by Holy Cross in its final game of the season, placed two men on Collier's All-America football team announced today.

The team:

Ends—Don Currivan, Boston College, and David Schreiner, Wisconsin.

Tackles, Richard Wildung, Minnesota, and Robin Olds, Army.

Center, Joseph Domnanovich, Alabama.

Quarterback, William Hillenbrand, Indiana.

Halfbacks, Frank Sinkwich, Georgia, and Paul Governali, Columbia.

Fullback, Michael Holovak, Boston College.

Harlow Returns After Battling Japs

Harlow, in a letter to his mother, "there was a pilot officer among the crew, a first lieutenant, who was acting as navigator of the ship, whose will, courage and indomitable spirit provided inspiration to the entire group. His personality helped us push ahead.

"After emerging from the swamp, some natives took us in a canoe to Buna, on the northeast coast of New Guinea, later taken by the Japanese. We met an Australian magistrate on the sea coast. He cared for us for a couple of weeks and obtained transportation for us to our base.

"In a heavy bomber, we had a 45-minute combat with eight Zeros which proved to be highly exciting. We couldn't tell for sure, but it appeared that we shot down three. You really get some thrills from exchanging tracer bullets."

Harlow stated that while the tracer bullets don't scare you, you do get "a little concerned when you watch them coming in your direction, and experience a really new sensation to see the bullets come in and hear them rip into your plane."

Trainer Ben Jones thinks he is holding the reins of Whirlaway's successor in this photo. The yearling, now stabled at Warren Wright's Calumet Farm, was born on New Year's Day. Named Pensive, it has yet to run a race but is being readied by Trainer Jones

Georgia Eleven To Leave for Bowl Dec. 18

By the Associated Press

Athens, Ga., Dec. 10.—The University of Georgia football squad will leave December 18 for their New Year's Day engagement in the Rose Bowl, Coach Wally Butts announced today.

The Bulldogs will travel without a stop to Tucson, Ariz., reaching there December 20 and continue their trip to the Coast. They will return January 3 and arrive back on the campus January 7.

The trip to Tucson, starting at 5:30 a. m. (E. W. T.), will be by way of Atlanta, Birmingham and Memphis. The return trip will bring the Bulldogs through Salt Lake City, Denver, Kansas City, Birmingham and Atlanta.

Informal practice sessions continued today despite the absence of Butts. The Bulldogs plan to get down to rough work when he returns Monday.

The Bulldogs will likely be in perfect shape for the Rose Bowl game with all ailing squad members back in form. Dick McPhee, handicapped in the last part of the season with a bad knee, is expected to be entirely ready to take over his spot again as regular fullback.

Purdue Five Defeats Wabash Outfit, 43-28

Lafayette, Ind., Dec. 10 (AP).—Purdue's basketball squad opened its season tonight by rolling to a 43-to-28 victory over a scrappy Wabash five.

With three sophomores going most of the way and Capt. Al Menke, the only holdover regular in the line-up, Purdue had trouble getting started and was trailing, 10 to 3 midway in the first half. Then the Boilermakers rushed ahead 11 to 10 and were on top 19 to 14 at the half.

Two Years Without Defeat, Delaware Demands Attention

1940, Following Lean Years on Gridiron Bill Murray's Eleven Unbeaten Since October,

Special Dispatch to The Post

Newark, Del., Dec. 11.—When you're talking about current collegiate gridiron records, don't overlook that University of Delaware team—for the Blue Hen gridders have just completed their second consecutive undefeated season.

And even that isn't all, for Delaware's football aggregation has bounded into National prominence as a result of its record of 21 games without a defeat—a record which is believed to be tops in college pigskin ranks today.

Not since mid-October, 1940, has an opponent beaten the Delaware team coached by W. D. (Silent Bill) Murray, and his assistants, Emory (Knocker) Adkins and W. S. (Shack) Martin, all former Duke athletic luminaries.

But "the Delaware story" really begins in 1939. In that year the blue and gold football players could smile only once—when the Blue Hens won the last game on an eight-game schedule.

The following spring Bill Murray, then coaching in Winston-Salem, N. C., was named to take over the Delaware grid coaching reins. Bill said little, refused to prophesy—but silently made his plans.

In early October the 1940 season opened—and Delaware lost, 7-0. On the following Saturday, Delaware lost again, 6-0.

The next Saturday was Alumni Homecoming Day. A few hundred of the loyal, hopeful, "it's got to change sometime" alumni were on hand—only to see the Hens trounced 25-0, by a team that failed to win another game that season.

That night Bill Murray stood before a melancholy, discouraged group of alumni and said, "All this team needs is a few touchdowns. We'll get them. No team I ever coached lost more than three games in a row. This team will not let me down."

Came the next game—and a new dawn in Delaware football. They got touchdowns—three of them, and won 19-0. Murray's newly installed double wing-back system, needing perfect timing, began to click. It's been clicking ever since. Greater precision soon developed power—and the power has developed into a football juggernaut.

Since that long-awaited 19-0 victory in October, 1940, the Blue Hens have played 20 games. Except for a tie in the 1941 opener, each game has been a victory.

Defensively, as well as offensively, Delaware has been a great team. The last 21 opponents have scored an aggregate of only 10 touchdowns.

Star-Studded Belvoir Five To Face Bears

When the Lichtman Bears take on the Fort Belvoir Post quint Sunday afternoon at Turner's Arena they will be up against a formidable array of former pro cagers who definitely should prove to be plenty of trouble for the local tossers.

Heading an imposing lineup will be Corpl. Petey Rosenberg, former mainstay of the Philadelphia Sphas, and generally rated as one of the outstanding pro basketball players in the country today. Then there's Sergeant Hopkins and Corporal Shirk, both of whom made the All-Penn State pro team for three consecutive years. Also there is Sergeant Roberts from Scranton College, Pa., and Pvt. Ben Goron of the National Y. M. H. A.

Last, but by no means least, is Lieut. John Jerrabech, former captain of Rutgers University, and leading scorer of the Eastern Intercollegiate League last season.

Ruth McClintic Sets Pin Records

Ruth McClintic, star of the interior team in the Ladies Federal Bowling League at Arcadia, last night rolled with a hot hand and established two new season records with her 159 single and 377 set, each of which added 7 pins to the old highs. Mrs. McClintic's Interior girls came through and posted team highs of the night, a 541 game and 1535 set, to take three in a row from Agriculture No. 1.

Thompson Best In Pin League

Billy Thompson, Steve's Barbers, led the Georgia Avenue Bowling League at the Silver Spring drives last night for the second consecutive week with his 156 game and 385 set, his quintet winning the odd game from National Electrical Machine and also totaling 591-1692 for team highs, although Arbaugh's Restaurant tied the latter figure.

All-Pacific Grid Team Is Selected

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Dec. 10.—Fast, charging linemen and a combination of speed and power backs make up the Associated Press' eighteenth annual All-Pacific Coast football team, released today.

The 1942 all-star eleven was selected in a consensus vote by sports writers, officials and coaches throughout the Far West. Both conference players and those with independent colleges were eligible.

Santa Clara, Stanford and the University of California at Los Angeles each placed two men on the first team. California, Washington State, Southern California, Washington and University of San Francisco each landed one player on the squad.

The 1942 All-Pacific Coast teams:

End—Alyn Beals, Santa Clara.
End—John Ferguson, California.
Tackle—John Sanchez, U. S. F.
Tackle—Ed Stamm, Stanford.
Guard—Charles Taylor, Stanford.
Guard—Jack Descoulie, U. C. L. A.

Back—Robt. Kennedy, W. S. C.

Second Team:

End—Nick Suesoff, W. S. C.
End—Ralph Heywood, U. S. C.
Tackle—Charles Fears, U. C. L. A.
Tackle—Bruno Banducci, Stanford.
Guard—Al Schiro, Santa Clara.
Guard—Bill Seizas, U. S. C.
Center—Al Santucci, Santa Clara.
Back—Jim Jurkovich, California.
Back—Al Solari, U. C. L. A.
Back—Vince Pacewic, Loyola.
Back—Tom Roblin, Oregon.

McCosky Becomes Naval Air Cadet

Detroit, Dec. 10 (AP).—Barney McCosky, 24-year-old Detroit Tiger outfielder, was sworn in today as a naval aviation cadet, and selection board officials said he would be called up for preliminary training within two months. He is the fifteenth Detroit baseball player to enter the armed service.

Lieut. Comdr. Harry Kipke, former University of Michigan football coach, inducted McCosky. After the ceremony McCosky disclosed his engagement to wed Alice Brady, Detroit student nurse.

Seniors Make Debut Tonight In Four Bouts

Seniors take a bow in the tenth annual Golden Gloves boxing tournament tonight when second-round activity is opened with a series of 12 novice and four senior bouts at Turner's Arena, 8:30 o'clock.

Novices will be fighting to qualify for the quarterfinals, while seniors, selected from a list of 38, are to step out in first-round warfare.

In one of the 126-pound senior features, Jack Wadsworth, a Golden Gloves champion at 118 pounds two years ago, has been paired with Kenny Vann of the United States Naval Reserve.

Wadsworth is a good boxer and punishing puncher. Vann, a protege of Jack Quigley—the former lightweight professional star—is numbered among the best looking prospects in the tournament.

In the other 126-pound event, respected veterans square off when Charley Pullman, representing the Apollo A. C., mixes with George De Zerne, who is unattached.

One of the most interesting novice rivalries is offered at 135 pounds where Georgetown University's Joe Sullivan faces the Merrick Club's John L. Sullivan.

John L. Sullivan is one of the favorites to take down the Congressman Fred A. Hartley Trophy, awarded annually to the outstanding novice. Joe Sullivan, however, scored convincingly over Frankie Jenkins while flooring him for a nine count last Friday, and is conceded an excellent chance of coming through.

PAIRINGS FOR TONIGHT

Novice Division

112-POUND CLASS—Billy Kergee (unattached) vs. Donald Carter (Washington Boys Club).

118-POUND CLASS—Jack Golumb (Jewish Community Center) vs. David Staples (Merrick Club), Hubert Hanning (National Training School) vs. Eddie Funk (Washington Boys Club), Charles Fowler (Washington Boys Club) vs. Dominick Ortiz (National Training School).

135-POUND CLASS—Joe Sullivan (unattached) vs. John L. Sullivan (Merrick Club), David Smith (Torpedo Station) vs. James Asiup (National Training School), Boyd Sondheimer (Washington Boys Club) vs. George Atkinson (Merrick Club).

147-POUND CLASS—Allan Thrift (Merrick Club) vs. Bobby Lynch (United States Naval Reserve), Frankie Jenkins (National Training School) vs. Buddy Milstead (Naval Air Base).

Old Tar Finds Navy Psychology Brings Results

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Dec. 10.—Joseph Bauers, secretary of the Virginia Boxing and Wrestling Commission, chuckled to think today that he still has the knack of getting work out of a sailor—even a commissioned one.

Bauers, who retired as a chief petty officer after 30 years' service in the Navy, has a commissioned officer—he declined to tell his name—working off some excess poundage by digging a cellar in the Bauers home on University Heights.

Joe helped the young ensign as he sought his commission and told him the ways of the Navy after the commission came through. The newly commissioned officer went to a school of indoctrination and in two months picked up some 15 pounds in weight.

When the ensign returned on leave, Bauers suggested that he work off the extra weight with a pick and shovel in Bauers basement. As a result, the basement grows in size as the girth of the ensign decreases.

A.A.U. to Discuss Physical Fitness, Morale and War

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 10. — Delegates from all sections of the country will assemble here tomorrow for the opening of the 54th annual meeting, National Amateur Athletic Union, which will continue through Sunday.

In addition to the awarding of championships, approving records and considering legislative changes, decisions will be made pertaining to the part of the organization in promotion of physical fitness and morale for the war effort.

Lieut. Col. E. W. (Bernie) Bierman, USMCR, athletic director at the Naval pre-flight school, Iowa City, Iowa, will be the principal speaker at the opening session tomorrow.

New Ft. Eustis Court Team Enters League

By the Associated Press

Fort Eustis, Va., Dec. 10.—A basketball team representing this post has been selected as a member of the newly formed Capitol City Basketball League in Richmond, and will play its initial contest with the Richmond Air Base five next Sunday afternoon.

This will mark the first time since this Antiaircraft Replacement Training Center was reactivated nearly two years ago that an athletic team representing the post has engaged in competition with an outside opponent.

The new league will have five members, with Camp Lee, Camp Pickett, and Antiaircraft Command being represented in addition to Fort Eustis, and Richmond Air Base. Initial contest this Sunday will see Camp Lee facing Antiaircraft Command at 2:30, with the Fort Eustis-Richmond Air Base contest following immediately.

The Fort Eustis five will be coached temporarily by Lieut. Alexander Timme, formerly of the University of Delaware.

The WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

The Willkie Banquet in Moscow

HERE IS THE INSIDE STORY of what happened at the famous banquet tendered Wendell Willkie in Moscow, at which Stalin criticized the British in the presence of the British Ambassador.

DREW PEARSON

Like most Moscow banquets for foreign dignitaries, the dinner was followed by a long series of toasts. The speakers were introduced by Foreign Minister Molotov, four interpreters scribbled in notebooks, later translated into Russian or English.

The thirtieth toast that evening fell to Joe Barnes, former newspaper correspondent in Russia, now with the Office of War Information, and one of Willkie's advisers on the trip. The toasts had been long and were dragging. Barnes decided it was time to wake people up.

So he spoke in Russian. It was the first time in the history of these formal banquets that a visiting American or Englishman had replied in Russian, and it brought down the house. Stalin himself led the applause.

Then Barnes turned to the interpreters and signaled for them to interpret in English. They were confused. So Stalin suggested that Barnes translate his own speech into his native tongue, which was naturally easy for him, and he did.

Greatest Man in World

NEXT SPEAKER introduced by Foreign Minister Molotov was Gardner "Mike" Cowles, associate publisher of the Des Moines Register-Tribune and Look Magazine. Barnes had set the pace and Cowles faced the problem of outdoing him. He began nobly.

"I propose a toast," he said, "to the greatest man living in the world today."

The interpreters translated into Russian. The whole table held its breath. Was Cowles going to toast Stalin as the greatest man in the world? The Russians looked pleased. Others looked at the British Ambassador. Would he accept Stalin as greater than Churchill? Or would Cowles toast Roosevelt? Or was it Willkie?

Cowles enjoyed the suspense for a moment, then continued:

"I toast the unknown Russian soldier who is winning this war!"

Stalin Speaks

THIRTY-SECOND and next toast of the evening was that of Maj. Grant Mason. Mason is a former director of Pan-American Airways, former member of the Civil Aeronautics Board, and a crack flier. He does not, however, pretend to be a speaker, and little did he dream that his speech was to have the most startling reverberations of the evening. Mason's toast consisted of a straightforward tribute to Russian and Allied pilots who "dare in the air which they share."

The interpreters complained that they couldn't translate this into Russian and make it rhyme. But it rhymed with Stalin.

For after the champagne glasses clicked in honor of Allied and Russian fliers and the company started to sit down, suddenly they discovered that they could not sit down. For Josef Stalin, head of all Russia, was speaking.

He agreed with the tribute to the fliers. But he went on to say that many Russian fliers were flying with cast-off equipment, with planes the Allies did not want. With the British Ambassador listening, Stalin bluntly told how, when the United States finally did send some of the latest airplane models, they had been taken off the ship in Scotland. Russia never got them.

Stalin finished. There was painful silence. Suddenly the deep voice of Wendell Willkie boomed forth in a soothing, diplomatic speech on the importance of being frank among ourselves. Good Allies must be frank, he said, but there was also the danger that differences might pull the Allies apart. This, he said, was what Hitler wanted most.

Later the British Ambassador made a brief speech in which he gave a complimentary appraisal of Stalin, his leadership and all of the things he had done for his country.

That ended probably the most historic Moscow dinner ever held in honor of a visiting dignitary.

NOTE: Stalin was quite correct that first class American planes were taken off a Russian-bound ship by the British. But he did not know that General Eisenhower, preparing for an African front, and knowing that Airacobras were on the ships, went to Prime Minister Churchill personally and demanded the planes. Churchill finally gave them to him.

Democratic Revolt

SMOULDERING resentment inside the Democratic Party has flared out against its present leadership and has culminated in the call for a meeting of Midwest Democratic leaders at Omaha Saturday.

At the meeting will be the Democratic State chairmen or other leaders from Iowa, Kansas, Colorado, Missouri, Minnesota, Nebraska, North and South Dakota and Wyoming.

It will be a rump conference, held without official sanction of Washington, but nevertheless with the tacit approval of some bigwigs inside the Democratic National Committee.

Purpose of the Omaha meeting is to form a bloc or coalition to "salvage the remnants of the Democratic Party." This is strong language, in any party, especially when the head of the party sits in the White House. But there is growing dissatisfaction with the President himself in regard to party leadership, particularly the fact that he has given no cue for building up leadership for 1944.

Another resentment sure to flare up at the Omaha meeting is against the chief whipping boy of the Roosevelt Administration, Leon Henderson.

Probable plan is to form a working agreement between Mid-Western leaders and certain leaders inside Congress to take more and more play away from the President and put it back in the hands of the party.

A growing underground movement has also started to make sure that when the Democratic National Committee meets, the new chairman will be the choice of party leaders, not be hand-picked by F. D. R. personally.

Merry-Go-Round

The United States Navy pays tribute to the expert gunnery of the Frency navy, also their courage. When the French battleship Jean Bart opened fire at Casablanca, she was inside the harbor, but her first shot struck so close to a United States warship that it blew one United States landing boat out of the water. The landing boat had just been lowered . . . California gossips have been predicting that defeated Governor Olson would retire in favor of Lieutenant Governor Patterson, then have Patterson appoint him to the California Supreme Court. This, however, is doubtful because Olson doesn't trust Patterson any further than he can throw an elephant . . . How doubtful it is, was confirmed when Governor Olson turned up in Washington the other day to persuade Roosevelt to appoint him to Justice Byrnes' vacancy on the United States Supreme Court.

U. S. Pilot Bags 27 Jap Planes To Lead Aces

By the United Press

Guadalcanal, Nov. 22 (Delayed). Aces are a dime a dozen on Guadalcanal and the champ of them all is Capt. Joe Foss, 27, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

He has shot down 22 of the 450 Japanese planes bagged by this front line base, the largest total credited to any American pilot in the whole Pacific theater.

Sixteen of Foss's bag were Zeros including eight shot down in two days. He knocked down three in a single flight.

Runners-up to Foss on Guadalcanal are Maj. J. L. Smith, Lexington, Okla., credited with 19; Maj. R. E. Galer, Seattle, Wash., and Capt. M. E. Carl, Woodburn, Oreg., 12 each, and Lieut. Col. H. W. Bauer, Coronado, Calif., 10.

The slogan for the fliers here is "seven to one"—roughly the ratio of enemy planes destroyed to American fighters lost in the three and a half months since the United States Marines swarmed ashore on this island.

Foss is executive officer of a Marine fighter squadron that has shot down 105 Japanese planes in six weeks. The commanding officer is Maj. Duke Davis, 29, of Chicago and even he has managed to get into the air enough to bag the minimum five.

The other aces in the squadron include Second Lieut. Thomas H. Mann, Terre Haute, Ind., who has downed nine and a half (the half is an assist); Second Lieut. William G. Marontale, Seattle, Wash., nine; Second Lieut. Joel Narr, Kansas City, Mo., seven, and First Lieut. Gregory K. Loesch, Colorado Springs, six and a half.

Japanese personnel losses are even higher in ratio than their plane losses, officers believe. Though there is no way of determining accurately how many enemy fliers die in their planes, best official estimates place the Japanese-American ratio at 100 to 1.

Medical Academy Calls Horse Meat Suitable as Food

New York, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—There's nothing wrong with horse meat but the idea.

Americans, if rationing drives them to it, can eat their horse-burgers and choice cuts off Old Dobbin secure in the knowledge that as a body builder horse meat is just as good as pork, beef or poultry.

The 30,000 pounds of horse meat sold by one butcher in Boston in 48 hours may be the forerunner of general acceptance of this as the share-the-meat program depletes the supply of steaks and chops. Horse meat was considered a likelier substitute than other flesh which has served man in times of stress, such as water buffalo, seal or whale.

The New York Academy of Medicine pointed out that studies made of the nutritive value of horse meat indicate "there is no reason but personal taste" for not eating it.

Investigations showed its chemical composition is similar to that of beef, pork and poultry and that its chemicals are just as readily assimilated by the body.

10,000 More Serbs Slain by Nazis, Cairo Hears

Cairo, Dec. 10 (AP).—Nearly 10,000 Serbs were killed in Slavonia and three villages near Belgrade were destroyed in recent weeks in a new German drive "to restore peace," said authoritative reports received here today.

Col. Gen. Alexander Loehr, the German commander, was reported to have threatened deportation of all males between the ages of 17 and 50 to Germany or Poland unless peace and order are restored in Yugoslavia.

The economic situation of the Axis-occupied country was described as desperate.

Dr. Hubert Work Is Seriously Ill

Denver, Dec. 10 (AP).—Dr. Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior during the Harding and Coolidge Administrations, was reported seriously ill tonight, following a heart attack.

Dr. Work, 82, was Postmaster General for a year under President Harding.

POSTLUDE

Arts Club Hears Promising Voice of Catharine Latta

Arts Club of Washington presents Catherine Latta in a song recital on Thursday night with Madame Blanca Renard as assisting artist. Program of songs by Handel, Veracini, Brahms, Richard Strauss, Debussy, Chausson, Grieg, Lie, Henry, La Forge, Bridge and McGimsey.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Members and guests of the Arts Club enjoyed last evening a song recital by Catharine Latta, a young and very promising mezzo-soprano, who is at present affiliated with the Philadelphia Opera. While it was her local debut as a singer, she is not a stranger in Washington, for she was formerly a student at Arlington Hall, where her teacher of piano was Madame Blanca Renard, who honored her on this occasion by being her accompanist. The combination of vocal neophyte and experienced artist was a delightful one.

BROWN

In range, variety of color and command of dynamics, Miss Latta's voice is one upon which to attach high hopes. She is musically sensitive and her readings show an intelligent attitude toward the problems of phrasing, accentuation, diction and breath control. She has warmth of temperament, a good dramatic sense and the ability to communicate to her listeners the emotion of a song. Her command of tonal volume is excellent and she passes easily from a powerful resonance to a tender clarity. Her tone is well sustained on the breath, and she has either a sure instinct or a carefully acquired skill in applying the right kind of tone at the proper moment.

Nervousness may have been the cause of the marked vibrato in her opening number, an aria from Handel's "Radamisto." It is to be hoped that it was only trepidation and not deliberate choice, for vibrato is a difficult habit to break and one that invariably leads to deterioration of the voice. She can and does emit a smooth and powerful tone which needs no artificial tremor.

Lieder by Brahms and Strauss disclosed her artistic understanding, her ease in shifting moods and her poetic perception. The ready transition from "Feldeinsamkeit" to "Meine Liebe ist gruen" showed a fine appreciation of the differences in attack and phrasing which these songs require. In the matter of tonal delicacy and nuance in shading, one compliments her on her readings of two songs most difficult to sustain on that level: Debussy's "Beau Soir" and Lie's "Soft-footed Snow."

With so admirable an equipment, Miss Latta does not need to rely as strongly as she does on the standard repertoire. Much of her program was in itself uninteresting because of its exceeding familiarity. She should devote herself at once to building a personal repertoire from the thousands of neglected songs waiting to be sung by so personable and so persuasive an interpreter. She is not yet a perfect singer, but she has the foundation for presumptive artistry.

Engagement Ring Given to Bride By Soldier's Dad

Braddock, Pa., Dec. 10 (U.P.). Nellie L. Lowden was making plans today to marry Lieut. Ellis J. Allen of Camp Thalia, Va., after her prospective father-in-law nervously placed an engagement ring on her finger while the bridegroom-to-be listened at the other end of a long distance telephone connection.

Allen had asked Miss Lowden to go to his parents' home at Turtle Creek, Pa. She went and found the soldier's father, Chester P. Allen, nervously pacing the floor.

Finally, the telephone rang, and Allen told Miss Lowden his father had "something" for her. With an appropriate little speech, the elder Allen placed the engagement ring on her finger and, to make it complete, gave the bride-to-be a kiss.

The wedding will be January 1.

Yanks 'Eat Up' First Edition In North Africa

Algiers, Dec. 9 (Delayed) (AP).—The first African edition of Stars and Stripes, the United States Doughboy's newspaper, hit the street today and the soldiers, weary of trying to make sense out of the local French press, gobbled up the copies.

There was the news they had been waiting for—old perhaps to the folks at home but new here—such as Ohio State winning the Big Ten football championship and Navy trouncing Army.

More important, there was a full report of the recent fighting in Tunisia. Strangely enough the Doughboys, who are only a short way from the battlefront, know less about the progress of the battle there than any casual headline reader at home.

There was a picture of the film actress, Maria Monte, for the soldiers who are tired of trying to peek behind Arab veils.

And there was even a "Poets' Corner" for service rhymsters.

Probably the most eagerly scanned feature was a brief lexicon of French with phonetical pronunciation. It told the troops how to carry on the following discourse:

"You are very pretty."
"Matches please."
"I want my clothes washed."
"Wait a minute."
"It's too expensive."
"Bring me coffee."
"I don't understand."

That gives a pretty good idea of what the Yankee in Algeria is up against.

The paper is beginning as a weekly but its editor, Staff Sergt. Robert Neville of New York City, hopes to make it a semiweekly or a daily.

Deputy Reappointed

Hugh F. O'Donnell has been reappointed a deputy sheriff for Montgomery County by the county's new sheriff, Robert W. Farmer, and has qualified before Clayton K. Watkins, clerk of the Circuit Court at Rockville, Md. It is understood Sheriff Farmer will reappoint H. Windsor Adams a deputy sheriff for the magistrate's trial court at Bethesda.

Fifth District Bond Sales at $213,344,020

By S. Oliver Goodman

Subscriptions in the Fifth Federal Reserve District to the Government's Victory Loan drive aggregate $213,344,020, Hugh Leach, president of the Richmond Federal Reserve Bank and chairman of the area victory fund committee, announced yesterday.

This amount included $118,948,020 sold to investors other than commercial banks and $94,396,000 allotted to banks on the 1¾ per cent Treasury bond subscriptions.

Leach also announced a breakdown by States in the district of the $118,948,020 sold to investors as follows:

District of Columbia, $16,274,971.50; Maryland, $52,664,904.50; Virginia, $22,835,532.50; West Virginia, $9,501,480.00; North Carolina, $14,447,536.50; South Carolina, $3,124,564.50, and miscellaneous, $99,030.50.

Second District Tops 3 Billion in Sales

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Victory Fund Committee of the Second Federal Reserve District announced today its sales drive for the Treasury's nine-billion-dollar loan reached a total of $3,014,231,500 as of noon today.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Bank Votes Extra. Bonus

Directors of the Bank of Commerce & Savings have declared an extra dividend of $7.50 a share on capital stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share, both payable December 31 to shareholders of record December 21.

In June the board voted an extra dividend of $2.50 a share which, with the $7.50 anounced yesterday, will make a total of $10 in extra dividends and $10 in regular dividends. A similar amount was disbursed last year.

President Thomas J. Groom also reported that directors had authorized a bonus of a month's salary to members of the bank's operating staff employed prior to July 1, 1942, ad half a month's salary to employes hired since.

Another Bank Dividend

Directors of the National Savings & Trust Co. have declared a dividend of $1 a share on capital stock, payable February 1, 1943, to stockholders of record January 23, 1943.

Controllers to Meet Tuesday

Herbert S. Wood, of the technical staff of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, will address a dinner meeting of the local chapter of the Controllers Institute of America Tuesday night in the Carlton Hotel. His subject will be "Relief Provisions of the Excess Profits Tax."

Members of the Baltimore chapter have been invited to attend, according to Secretary F. Charles Brown.

T. W. A. Official Called by Navy

Paul E. Richter, executive vice president of Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., and a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve was called to active duty in the Navy yesterday.

Richter will report to Washington January 4 for assignment in the Naval Air Transport Service.

Jack Frye, president of the Airline, said the board of directors had elected E. Lee Talman, vice president and treasurer to Richter's post during his absence.

T W. A. Net Profit Rises to $1,531,665

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., today reported net profit of $1,531,665 after taxes, or $1.61 a share, for the nine months ended September 30, compared with net loss of $49,204 in the like 1941 period.

T. B. Butler Is Elected Baltimore Bank Head

Baltimore, Dec. 10 (AP).—The board directors of the Safe Deposit & Trust Co. today elected Thomas B. Butler president. George C. Cutler will continue as chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the company, the directors announced.

Butler has been with the company for 27 years.

Colgate Votes Extra

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co. today declared an extra dividend of 75 cents a share on the common stock, payable December 23 to stock of record December 15. At this time last year an extra of $1 a share was ordered.

Axis Defeat Held Key to Freedom

Taking Part in Plans for Just Peace Imperative Church Task, Prelate Says

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Dec. 10.—Freedom cannot "be achieved by war alone," but "without war today and without victory for the United Nations human freedom would be lostt," declared Dr. Luther A. Weigle today in his presidential address before the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

"Victory for the United Nations will keep open the possibility of achieving a more free, more just and more Christian civilization."

Victory for the Axis powers would end freedom of religion, he said.

There is no more imperative duty of the churches, he said, "as they prepare to participate in the establishment of a just and enduring peace, than to reach a common understanding as to what sort of measure of religious freedom they are ready to claim and grant."

Received into full membership in the council were three communions, the Presbyterian Church in the United States, the Church of the Brethren and the Ukrainian Orthodox Church, raising the total to 13.

As other Protestant interdenominational agencies held separate meetings, they considered a plan for effecting some sort of Christian unity between the Protestant churches of the United States and Canada. They began working toward this goal two years ago.

The Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church, was elected president of the council.

It was the first time a council president had been chosen from the Episcopal communion. The Episcopal Church became a member of the council in 1940. Bishop Tucker succeeds Dr. Luther A. Weigle of Yale University and will serve two years.

Formerly a Missionary

Bishop Tucker who is also Bishop of Virginia, began his church career as a missionary to Japan. In 1912, after six years as president of St. Paul's University, Tokyo, he was elected to the office of missionary bishop, and consecrated in Kyota. When America entered the first World War, Bishop Tucker volunteered for service, serving with a major's rank in charge of civilian refugee work in Siberia under the American Red Cross.

Returning to America in 1923 because of ill health, he later became professor of pastoral theology at the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Alexandria, Va. He was elected Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Virginia in 1926, and named bishop a year later. He became presiding bishop in 1937, and will serve in that post until 1943.

Installed in 1941

Bishop Tucker was installed in his presiding bishop's seat here on October 19, 1941. The event marked the first time in the history of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America that seat has been set aside for the presiding bishop by virtue of his office.

The prelate has five brothers in the service of the church. They are the Rev. Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Church, Georgetown; the Right Rev. Beverly D. Tucker, Bishop of Ohio; the Rev. Herbert Tucker, rector of St. Paul's Church, Suffolk, Va.; Dr. Augustine W. Tucker, head of St. Luke's Hospital, Shanghai, China, and Ellis N. Tucker, professor of mathematics at St. John's University, Shanghai.

Plight of Jews Horrifying, Polish Government Says

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 10.—The Polish government in exile declared today in a note to "all civilized nations" that fully authenticated information from Poland showed that the Germans had killed many hundreds of thousands of Jews there and that of 3,130,000 Jews in Poland before the war, more than one-third had perished in the last three years.

The note declared that new methods of extermination have been applied since Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler called by decree last March for wiping out of 50 per cent of the Polish Jews by the end of 1942. It said the Jewish position now presents "a horrifying picture."

The Polish population itself is suffering, the note said. Many millions have either been deported to Germany as slave labor or evicted from their homes. Leaders were declared to have been "cruelly murdered by the Germans." The note added:

"The Polish government considers it their duty to address themselves to the governments of the United Nations in confident belief that they will share the opinion of the necessity of not only condemning the crimes committed by the Germans and punishing the criminals, but also of finding means offering hope that Germany might be effectively restrained from continuing to apply methods of mass extermination."

Purge of Jews Reported in France

London, Dec. 10 (INS).—A Nazi-inspired purge of pro-Allied sympathizers and French Jews was reported under way throughout France today as Marshal Henri Philippe Petain met with Hitler's agent, Field Marshal Carl Rudolph Gerd von Rundstedt, in Vichy.

Petain and Von Rundstedt, said the Vichy radio, discussed problems connected with the complete demobilization of the French army—the last vestige of French autonomy. Pierre Laval was represented as merely "sitting in" on the meeting.

The Tribune de Geneve, a Geneva newspaper, was quoted by Reuter's as reporting that the France-wide purge had resulted in numerous arrests and the deportation of additional French workers to Germany.

German radio confirmed reports of the new anti-Jewish campaign in France when it announced that "all Jews of foreign origin between 18 and 55 years of age were arrested yesterday in Clermont-Ferrand and taken to a labor camp."

Admitting that the roundup of Jews in Clermont-Ferrand, central France, was not an isolated instance, the German radio added that "similar measures are expected in the rest of France."

The broadcast followed an announcement by the French Havas News Agency Tuesday that Vichy's anti-Jewish laws had been made stricter to conform with the Nazis' racial policies.

Price Hearing May Provide Test Of OPA Rules

Justice Matthew F. McGuire yesterday set December 22 for a hearing on charges of the Office of Price Administration that the department store, Hecht Co., violated price ceiling and other regulations.

A major test of the validity and reasonableness of the OPA's regulations appeared likely in the case, in which the OPA asks temporary and permanent injunctions against the alleged violations. Company officials denied the charges, saying any violations were to be blamed upon the "inhuman" burden placed on business by the 13,423 pages of applicable regulations.

Continued in effect until December 22 was a temporary restraining order granted Tuesday before the Hecht Co. had offered its defense.

First set for today, the hearing was postponed at the request of the Hecht counsel, Charles A. Horsky, who said he needed time to study the "great body of facts" related to the numerous charges made by the OPA.

Rail Collision Injures 3 Soldiers, 2 Others in Ohio

Eaton, Ohio, Dec. 10 (AP).—A double-header passenger train carrying troops bumped into the locomotive of a side-tracked Pennsylvania freight train late today near Camden, Ohio, injuring at least five persons, three of them soldiers.

The passenger train, with 20 coaches, was moving slowly as it took a siding to permit another train bound in the opposite direction to pass, Sheriff Malcolm Clear reported. However, the sheriff said, the train crew was unable to stop the passenger train before it hit the freight already standing there.

Sheriff Clear reported the lead locomotive and freight engine badly damaged.

Army Intercedes, Flying Tiger Ace Escapes Draft

Los Angeles, Dec. 10 (INS).—The Army today took steps to save a first-class fighting pilot, with 14 Jap planes to his credit, from being inducted as a buck private.

The pilot, Robert T. Smith, 24, was one of the Army Air Corps officers who took advantage of the offer to quit the United States forces and join the "Flying Tigers," who fought the Japs for China.

As a "Flying Tiger," Smith knocked down 14 enemy planes When the Tigers were disbanded, Smith and 40 of his fellows came home to rest awhile.

The rest period made him a civilian again, subject to the draft. He was called for induction today, but Maj. Richard W. Smith at the induction station said the red tape would be cut to permit Pilot Smith to rejoin the Air Corps.

TO HELP YOU OBEY THE 35 M.P.H. LAW!

$1.00 Installed for you if you wish for a small charge

The New B.F. Goodrich Speed Warden*

Reminds You When You Reach 35 m.p.h.
Saves Rubber, Gives You More Miles From Your Gas

EASILY INSTALLED . . . The Speed Warden fits on your accelerator and is set at desired cruising speed...30 or 35 miles. It reminds you not to "step on it" in starting...gets you off to even starts without grinding off precious rubber and without wasting your gasoline.

NO SPEEDOMETER WATCHING . . . At your set speed, the base of the Speed Warden comes in contact with the floor board, as shown. This reminds you when you reach the limit and, incidentally, provides a steady rest for your foot while cruising at that speed.

NOT ORDINARY GOVERNOR . . . The Speed Warden doesn't lock speed. If you need full engine power for hill climbing or emergencies, you exert extra foot pressure. The accelerator goes down as far as you wish... comes up when you release the extra foot pressure.

THE Office of Defense Transportation has spoken. From now on speeds of over 35 M.P.H. are against the interest of America, and, therefore, against the law. And now, when you need it most, the B. F. Goodrich Company offers another great contribution to the war effort, this new Speed Warden to remind you when you reach 35 . . . to help you save your tires . . . to prevent gas-consuming "jack-rabbit" starts so you can get more miles from your gasoline.

Easily installed, in a few minutes, this timely device fits on your accelerator and is set at your desired speed. You drive up to that speed like you do now. Then, it warns you with extra pressure against your foot. But, it's not an ordinary governor. It doesn't lock your speed. You have full engine power for hill climbing or emergencies. Get this guardian against unconsciously breaking the law . . . on your car. You'll save the small price of $1.00 (plus installation charge) very quickly with the extra miles you get from your gasoline.

FLEET OWNERS—Here's a safe way to help your drivers keep within the new speed limit and protect your equipment without the expense and the danger of ordinary governors.

WHAT THE NEW WARTIME SPEED LAW IS AND MEANS!

The new 35 M.P.H. speed limit was ordered by the Office of Defense Transportation. It is now Federal law under the Second War Powers Act. State Legislatures are passing supplementary laws to assure nation-wide enforcement. In addition to drastic municipal and state penalties, the Federal Government has reserved the right to prosecute violators. This can mean loss of your gasoline ration book. It can mean heavy fines, even severe prison sentences for violators.

IT'S A WISE CHILD THAT KNOWS WHAT DAD WANTS FOR CHRISTMAS

Manhattan White Shirts

"Children certainly pick up little things they hear," said Mrs. Jones to her neighbor. "Just last week they heard their Dad mention how well his Manhattan shirts fit him, the smartness and comfort of the collar. I chimed in with, 'yes, and they launder so well, too.' And then the conversation changed to other things. But did my little ones forget! Not so you could notice it. The other day they went downtown with their aunt to see the 'Animated Comics' toy window at The Hecht Co. Then they said they wanted to buy a gift for Dad. Well, you've probably guessed it by now. They bought him two Manhattan Shirts, a pair of pajamas, two ties and some handkerchiefs . . . all made by Manhattan, to be sure. And the little smarties charged it to my Charga-Plate account. Their Dad is going to be mighty pleased this Christmas with Manhattan gifts."

Byrd Urges NYA, FSA Be Liquidated

Claims Extravagance, Waste in Handling; Charges Topheavy Number of Supervisors

By Richard G. Hassock
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chairman Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, of the joint economy committee, after hearing how much the Farm Security and National Youth Administrations were costing, proposed yesterday that they be liquidated.

Senator Byrd said budget officials told the Joint Committee on Nonessential Expenditures that the Government was losing $1,600,000 yearly on resettlement projects under the FSA, while approximately 116 million dollars of loans to farmers would be a total loss.

The committee, in closed session, heard that 12,520 NYA supervisors and clerical workers were required for the training of 53,603 persons for war industry jobs.

"I think both of these agencies ought to be liquidated," Byrd told reporters. "The essential activities of the NYA ought to be transferred to the Department of Education, which is conducting a similar training program, and the FSA activities transferred to the Farm Credit Administration."

[The Washington Post, in a front-page editorial last February 12, calling for conversion of the Government to furthering the war effort said:

["The National Youth Administration is absolutely superfluous. Transfer the youth defense training feature to the United States Office of Education, doing the same thing . . ."—Editor's note.]

The FSA was created in 1937 as a successor to the Resettlement Administration to enable farm families on or near relief to become self-supporting. Its program provided for small loans largely financed through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; a plan whereby tenant families could receive a farm purchase loan, and completion of 164 homestead projects for low-income farm and city families.

Senator Byrd said he understood that FSA had made 875,747 rural rehabilitation loans totaling $687,381,974 of which 17 per cent had been charged off as "dead loss."

Byrd said the committee was informed that FSA had sold a number of its resettlement projects at an average price representing only about one-third of original cost. The $2,646,000 Arthurdale, W. Va., project, which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt opened several years ago, was being sold for $175,000, at a loss of $2,471,000, he said.

Budget Bureau officials testified that 152 resettlement projects still required $600,000 in FSA overhead, Byrd said, and there was a one-million-dollar annual loss in their operation. Its employes numbered 15,000 and direct appropriations for 1943 amounted to $46,536,739, with additional authorization to borrow $97,500,000 from RFC.

The NYA was established in 1935, within the Works Progress Administration, which is being liquidated by order of President Roosevelt. It was separated from WPA in 1939 and placed in the FSA. Its purpose was to provide a work program for unemployed persons between the ages of 17 and 24 who were no longer in school, as well as for others, to continue their education.

"The number of clerical assistants in NYA is too high, with one supervisor for every four students," Byrd said. "With 55,000 training places, including about 16,000 which have been discontinued but could be reopened, they have more places to train than they have average number of students."

Wards to Obey WLB if Told To by President

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 10.—For the second time, Montgomery Ward & Co. referred its labor dispute to President Roosevelt today, this time agreeing to sign a C. I. O. Union contract—without a duress clause—if it is ordered to do so by the President "as Commander in Chief in time of war."

Sewell Avery, president of the big mail order house, in a letter addressed to the War Labor Board in Washington said Ward's rejected the latest WLB order, but that it would sign if the President directs.

Principal Objection

The company has objected principally to a maintenance of union membership clause in the collective bargaining contract which the WLB on November 5 ordered Montgomery Ward to sign.

That order, affecting all the company's Chicago employes, numbering about 6,800, was denounced by Montgomery Ward, which also said then it would comply only if the President, as Commander in Chief, ordered it.

President Roosevelt so ordered, but when it came time to sign the agreement the company insisted on the right to incorporate a clause saying it was signing "under duress." The C. I. O. United Wholesale, Retail and Department Store Employes protested against the duress clause and a closed hearing was called in Washington.

Statement Banned

After the hearing Tuesday, the WLB ordered that Montgomery Ward could not incorporate the duress clause into the agreement or any statement that the board's November 5 order was illegal and unsound.

However, the WLB directive said the company could include a clause saying the board's terms were included "after protest" phraseology which company officials rejected at the hearing as "wholly inadequate."

Avery announced he had sent the following letter to the WLB:

"We have the National War Labor Board's order of December 8. Ward's rejects this order of the board for the reasons submitted at the hearing on December 8. If the President of the United States, as Commander in Chief in time of war, directs that Ward's accept the board's ruling, which we earnestly believe is wholly inadequate in telling the whole truth, we will respectfully comply."

In Washington, WLB officials said it would have no comment until the company's letter is received.

660,000 Are Frozen To Jobs in Detroit

Order Issued in Move to Assure Adequate Labor Supply in Vital War Industries in Area

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Dec. 10.—With the acquiescence of labor and management, the War Manpower Commission today announced an employment stabilization plan that in effect freezes some 660,000 war-essential workers in the Detroit area in their jobs.

Asserting that "unnecessary labor turnover hinders war production," the plan, effective immediately, stipulates that workers, even some engaged in such occupations as agriculture, food processing and communications services, must obtain clearances from former employers before leaving one job for another.

The program will be implemented by agreement on the part of employers not to hire or solicit workers from other essential industries within the area unless the applicant presents a certificate of release from his most recent employer or from the review unit of the United States Employment Service.

Certain conditions are outlined under which employes may move from one job to another. These include instances where a worker is competent to perform higher skilled work than his current employer is able or willing to provide and where the worker is employed at wages or conditions substantially less favorable than those prevailing in the community for the kind of work performed.

"Full-time employment" is defined as 40 hours a week or the hours and periods of time specified in existing union contracts.

Refusal by employers to provide clearance certificates may be appealed by the workers to the Employment Service review unit. Appeal from the latter body may be taken to the District War Manpower Committee.

Employers are given five days in which to provide higher skilled work or full-time employment for a worker seeking a release certificate. During the five-day period the worker must remain on his original job.

The plan applies in some form to virtually every worker in the Detroit area, covering not only the metropolitan area but outlying sections in adjoining counties in which are located such installations as the big Willow Run bomber plant, the Detroit (Chrysler) tank arsenal and the United States (Hudson) Naval Arsenal.

It was drafted by the District War Manpower Committee, composed of representatives of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) and of the American Federation of Labor's city, county and State organizations, and officials of the manufacturers' committee of the Automotive Council for War Production, the Michigan Manufacturers' Association and of the Automotive Parts and Equipment Manufacturers Association.

Creator of Looney Tunes Here To Seek Role in War Effort

After 45 years' absence, Leon Schlesinger, creator of the animated Merrie Melodies and Loony Tunes, returned to a loony city to find out what's happened to the little businessman as the situation concerns Bugs Bunny and 45 of his technicians.

More briefly Schlesinger wants to do some technical animated work for the armed services such as Disney is doing, but what has he been given to do?

"'Not one foot!" said Schlesinger.

So he came back here, after 45 years' absence, and expected to get a suite at the Mayflower. Cozily established later in a small room there, the Merrie Melody and Loony Tune manipulator asserted:

That 45 technicians have left his company and that as a small businessman, he wants to do something to keep in business. Before the war began he put Bugs Bunny in an "Any Bonds Today" animated short absolutely free and on August 25, 1942, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau wrote him a personal letter of thanks. Later, Bugs Bunny received a warrant as an honorary sergeant in the Marine Corps.

Another animated concern is getting all the Government work and "I am the only one who has given the Government something for nothing," said Schlesinger, "I want to help in the war effort, too."

High School Students Open Annual Debates at G. W. Today

Two hundred students representing more than 25 schools from the District and nearby States will meet today and tomorrow for George Washington University's tenth annual debate conference for senior high school students.

The conference is held each year to give high school debaters in this region the opportunity to discuss the subject selected for high school debates. This year the subject is: "Should a Federal World Government Be Established?"

Following a discussion this morning by Dr. Esther C. Brunauer of the American Association of University Women, who will present the affirmative side, and Dr. Philip Marshall Brown, who will discuss the negative side, delegates are to meet in small groups to talk over various phases of the problem.

Dr. Warren Reed West, professor of political science at the university, will deliver a welcome address at 10:45 this morning. The discussion will start at the conclusion of his brief talk.

The university will entertain the high school delegates and faculty representatives at a luncheon tomorrow at 12:15. Following the luncheon they will hear a speech by Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser, professor of European history and dean of university students, on "World Affairs."

Byrd Committee Starts Probe Of Pay Hikes to U. S. Workers

The Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures yesterday was revealed to have launched an investigation of Government employes who have received pay raises through reclassification of their positions.

The disclosure was made by the committee chairman, Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, who charged that preliminary studies have shown that a "vast and tremendous number" of Government workers have been reclassified, with the result that they have been given annual salary increases of from $1000 to $2000 "and more."

Byrd stated that these increases have been granted "very recently" and that a "selected" group of employes seemed to have been favored.

A full record of these wage increases which, he said, were accomplished "under the guise" of reclassification, will be put into the Congressional Record with names of all employes and their salaries, Byrd declared.

(Persons who have observed closely recent Federal employment trends reported that the turnover among employes has been so great that it has been necessary to reclassify many employes to fill vacancies at higher grades. The number of employes reclassified for this purpose was said to have been very large.)

Byrd said he recognized that many employes received no pay raises and that many are entitled to higher salaries.

In the meantime, the Civil Service Commission released figures on Federal employment indicating that Senator Byrd has more accurate and "up-to-date" information on the size of Uncle Sam's payroll than President Roosevelt.

2,606,000 on Payroll

At his press conference Tuesday, the President said the Government had about 2.5 million civilian employes. Byrd's contention that the President's subordinates have not given him the "true facts" was based on Labor Department figures showing 2,606,000 workers to have been on the Federal payroll September 1, including legislative employes.

Byrd's contention that the Federal payroll has been increasing at the rate of about 100,000 a month was borne out by the commission's statement. The September total, the commission said, was 2,549,474, an increase of 4.03 per cent, or 98.715 from the August total.

At that rate of increase, Byrd observed, the Federal payroll today should stand at approximately 2,800,000 employes. Several weeks ago the Senator predicted that by the end of the year there would be nearly three million persons in the Federal service.

Employe Distribution

The Government has become so large, observed Byrd, that he doubted if "anyone knows precisely how many employes we have."

In its report on civilian employment in the executive branch, the commission pointed out that "essential war agencies and departments" accounted for 89,000 of the September gain. The net Federal employment gain in the Washington metropolitan area was approximately 7500, with the balance of the increase being made in positions outside the District.

The War Department alone, the commission reported, accounted for 5941 of the total gain in Washington. The department reported 63,862 Washington employes in September. The remainder of the increase was divided between these agencies as follows:

1,078,306 in War Dept.

Office for Emergency Management (Alien Property Custodian, War Production Board, War Shipping Administration), 413; Office of Censorship, 74; Office of Price Administration, 54; Office of Strategic Services, 47; Board of Economic Warfare, 173; Navy Department, 742.

Total employment, in Washington and the field, for the principal war agencies was given as follows:

War Department, 1,078,306; Navy Department, 518,663; Maritime Commission, 6,256; Office of Censorship, 11,824; Office of Price Administration, 29,256; Selective Service System, 27,326; War Production Board, 19,561.

"In non-war agencies, some apparently large increases resulted from various reasons," the commission reported. "The Federal Security Agency total reflected a 54.06 per cent increase due to the fact that 13,419 supervisory employes paid from project funds of the National Youth Administration were included for the first time," the commission observed. "An increase of 24.08 per cent in the National Housing Agency is attributable to the inclusion of about 2400 management and construction employes not previously reported by the Federal Housing Authority."

The Federal payroll in Washington was reported at $48,591,176, in the field, $366,003,468.

U. S. Silver Policy Faces 'Showdown' In Next Congress

By the United Press

Strong signs developed in the House last night that a new and intensified effort will be made in the next Congress to throw out the Administration's entire silver purchase program.

Review of the "whole question" of the Treasury's silver policy was promised by Representative Andrew L. Somers (Democrat), New York, chairman of the House Coinage Committee, who said he would call a committee meeting for that purpose early in the next session.

Somers charged that large amounts of silver are lying idle in vaults at a time when it could be used as a substitute for strategic war materials, particularly copper.

Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, called for early action to halt the "outrageous" silver program, which he said had become a "national scandal."

N. Carolina Begins Liquor Rationing At a Quart a Week

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 10 (AP).—Rationing of liquor began in North Carolina today under a coupon system similar to Federal rationing of other commodities.

Consumers may buy one quart before December 15 and two quarts in the period December 15-31. Two quarts may be bought January 1-15 and two more January 15-31. After February 1 the ration will be 1 pint a week.

North Carolina has a local option law, under which 25 counties have voted for legalization of liquor sales. The stores are operated by county alcoholic beverage control boards under the supervision of a State board. The other 75 counties are legally dry.

Chairman Carl Williamson of the State board said a decrease in available supplies necessitated the rationing.

Polio Virus Extremely Powerful

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 10.—Discovery that the unidentified thing which causes infantile paralysis is so powerful that three-quadrillionths of a gram gives a mouse a fatal case was reported today in Science, the journal of American scientists.

This amount is almost infinitely small. It is estimated as actually only about 180 molecules. This infectious material was obtained in an attempt to isolate the cause of infantile paralysis, which is believed to be a virus.

The experiments were done by Jacques Bourdillon and Dan H. Moore of Columbia University.

Whether they have succeeded in isolating the cause, these scientists do not know. But they think they are very close to the real virus. Their experiments indicate that the infectious substance may be long, thread-shaped molecules.

Big Guns Duels Across Channel Are Resumed

London (Friday), Dec. 11 (AP).—Big guns on both sides of the English Channel opened up early today for the second exchange of fire since nightfall.

The gunfire, beginning again at 1:30 a. m. after a 3 hour quiet, shook the coastal region.

The British big guns on the Channel coast opened up with a barrage at 8:45 p. m. last night and were answered by German guns based over a wide area along the French coast in their first duel in nearly a month.

The exchange was continuous for 75 minutes during which the Germans lobbed a number of shells into the southeast coast area, where a shellfire alarm was sounded.

Army Will Teach All Bomber Crews To Handle Guns

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Having recently stepped up the fire power of its bombing planes, the Army moved yesterday to increase the fire power of their crews.

All members of bombing crews—mechanics, radiomen, navigators and bombardiers—also will be trained aerial gunners able to man a turret immediately if anything should happen to the regular gunners, the War Department decreed.

To accomplish this, the Department said a new gunnery school, the largest in history, has been opened at Laredo, Tex., three months ahead of schedule. Another school will open soon at Kingman, Ariz.

At these schools all those in the bombing branch of the Army will receive a special five-week course which will turn them out as expert aerial gunners.

Henderson Resigns WPB Supply Post; Weiner Successor

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The resignation of Leon Henderson as director of the Office of Civilian Supply of the War Production Board was announced yesterday by his chief, Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, who appointed, on Henderson's recommendation, Joseph L. Weiner as his successor.

Price Administrator Henderson gave as his reasons for resigning, "pressure of work which has first claim on my energies, and for personal reasons."

Henderson also told Nelson in his letter that he presumed he could continue as a member of the War Production Board, since the order establishing WPB named him as administrator of OPA as a member.

In a letter dated yesterday, Nelson accepted the resignation "with greater regret than I can express, because I understand fully all of the reasons which prompt this action."

Wanted by Fleischmann!
1,000,000 Men to Try Just One Pint of a Remarkable New Whiskey!
Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!

TASTE! BODY! AROMA!
These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey—and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!

• Why is Fleischmann now able to offer a popular whiskey that in body, flavor, and full golden smoothness equals the world's finest and most limited brands? Here is why. Because we believe that 8 out of every 10 men who try Fleischmann's PREFERRED will keep on buying it. This will mean big sales. Big sales will mean big economies. These economies will justify our trying to popularize such a superb whiskey.

We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. We selected the finest grains, and backed them up with the world's most delicate skill.

The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, one of the world's most remarkable whiskies. Velvety! Creamy! Full! Delicious! Try just one pint of this golden whiskey! Taste it! Enjoy every delicious drop! You'll be glad you did!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST "MANHATTAN"? We say so! Take 1 dash of Angostura Bitters, ¼ oz. sweet vermouth, and 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!

FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream—to ½ level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED Blended Whiskey. The straight whiskies in this product are 4 years or more old; 35% straight whiskies, 65% neutral spirits distilled from grain. 90 Proof. Copyright, 1942. The Fleischmann Distilling Corporation Peekskill, N. Y.

Norris Predicts Bitter Contest in U.S.

Veteran Senator Says Fight Must Be Waged On All Preferring Money, Power to Real Peace

Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, who leaves Capitol Hill on January 2 after 40 years of service in Congress, told an extraordinary gathering of statesmen, jurists and diplomats last night that a "bitter contest" lies ahead in the United States before the way can be cleared for a just and permanent peace.

That contest, he said, would have to be waged against those Americans who are more interested in money and power than they are in a real peace.

The Nebraskan, once described by President Roosevelt as the "gentle knight of American progressive ideals," singled out for attack the former president of the National Manufacturers Association, William P. Witherow, who said that he didn't think the United States was fighting to provide a quart of milk for every Hottentot baby or to build a TVA on the Danube.

On Money Front

"How blind!" cried Norris. "He wants to fight the war where he will make more money. If that be the result, we will have fought this war in vain.

"If we can't get men of extremes to combine their interest in a common effort, then we'd better surrender tonight to Hitler and Japan."

Senator Norris, who will go down in history as the "father of the TVA," accused Witherow of casting a slur upon "one of the grandest things ever attempted."

"The man who wants to make money in this war," he said, "or the man who seeks to gain power from it, is the enemy of the real peace we must make if it is to last."

The occasion for Norris' speech—a speech delivered with all the fire the 81-year-old statesman showed in the Senate—was a farewell dinner at the Mayflower Hotel, arranged by Senator Guffy (Democrat) of Pennsylvania.

Vice President Wallace described Norris as "one of the far-visioned social planners of his time." He said he belonged to "that small group of wise public men who clearly see the future and are willing to do something about it."

Wallace expressed the hope that Norris would go neither to the Tennesse Valley, to "see his dream taking reality," nor to his Nebraska prairies.

"We don't want him to go," said Wallace. "The progressive cause needs him. Never have the liberals of this Nation so needed his sage advice; his broad, earthy outlook on national and international affairs.

Liberals Need Him

"After every great war it is easy for the forces of narrow, selfish greed to entrench themselves and thus lay the groundwork for a never-ending succession of wars. With George Norris' help and counsel the liberals of this Nation can do their part in the hard, practical political job of making the world more secure for the common man of all the nations."

Archibald MacLeish, the Librarian of Congress, spoke as a representative of that generation of writers and journalists that lost its brothers in one war only to risk its son in another.

"We have emerged now from the years of confusion—the years of forgetfulness and self-indulgence and irresponsibility and confusion," said MacLeish. "We have recaptured the ancient American faith in our faith in ourselves . . ."

And for this strength, he said, he and others of his generation were deeply indebted to Senator Norris.

Associate Justice Hugo L. Black, who presided at the dinner, said it was not George Norris who was defeated at the polls in November, but the people of Nebraska. Gov. M. M. Neely of West Virginia expressed much the same sentiment, and he listed Norris among America's all-time great, bracketing his name with Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln, William Jennings Bryan, Woodrow Wilson, "Fighting Bob" La Follette and President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader of the Senate, expressed the hope that Senator Norris, despite his argument that "everybody writes a book," would write one telling of his 40 years on Capitol Hill.

President's Guest

Earlier yesterday Senator Norris had been President Roosevelt's luncheon guest at the White House. Those at the dinner last night were:

Vice President Wallace, and Senators Alben W. Barkley, Prentiss Brown, Carl A. Hatch, Lister Hill, James E. Murray, Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Claude Pepper, Harry S. Truman, Robert F. Wagner, Scott W. Lucas, James M. Mead, George L. Radcliffe, Pat McCarran, Theodore F. Green, Guy M. Gillette, Homer T. Bone, Joseph F. Guffey, George D. Aiken, Harold H. Burton, Clyde M. Reed, Charles W. Tobey and Robert M. La Follette, jr.; Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate, and Leslie L. Biffle, secretary to the majority.

Speaker Sam Rayburn and Representative John W. McCormack.

Supreme Court Justices Hugo Lafayette Black, Stanley Forman Reed, Felix Frankfurter, William Orville Douglas, Robert H. Jackson and James Francis Byrnes; Sherman Minton, Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, Chicago.

Admiral William D. Leahy, Admiral Ernest J. King, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, Attorney General Francis Biddle, Secretary to the President Marvin H. McIntyre, Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Governor Herbert H. Lehman, Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long, Governor M. M. Neely, Librarian of Congress Archibald MacLeish, John F. Robertson, R. H. Bailey jr., Charles Michelson, Edwin Pauley, William M. Jeffers, David E. Lilienthal, Sculptor Jo Davidson.

Walter Locke, Dayton; J. David Stern, Charles G. Ross, Tom Reynolds, Arthur Krock, Herbert Bayard Swope, Gerald Johnson, Kenneth Crawford, Walter Lippmann, Ralph Beaver Strassburger, John R. Beal, Jack Bell, J. E. Lawrence.

William Green, Thomas Kennedy, Edward Keating.

Without Ball

3 Men Held For Jury In Slayings

Three men were held for grand jury action on murder charges at coroner's hearings yesterday.

The defendants, all committed to jail without bail, were Robert (Peanuts) Ball, 37, of a Thomas Circle rooming house, a compositor at the Daily News; Leon W. Edwards, Negro, 23, under indictment for robbery, and Master Grant, Negro, 28, no fixed address.

Ball was held in the fist-fight slaying of Albert W. Bamberger, 54, a linotype operator at the Times-Herald. The latter died of cerebral hemorrhage, Tuesday, after he was struck and knocked down by Ball in the 1300 block H Street Northwest.

Edwards was charged with the holdup-shooting of Harry Kline, 47-year-old Northeast groceryman, October 11. Seized at Harrisburg, Pa., in November, Edwards was identified as the bandit who shot Kline during a holdup attempt. He denied the charge.

The third defendant, Grant, was said to have shot and killed John Scott, Negro, 28, of 11 P Street Northeast, last Sunday morning during an argument following a party. Grant himself was wounded in the leg but had recovered enough to appear at the inquest. Scott was shot in the abdomen.

Army Officer Reported Facing Sedition Charge

Seattle, Dec. 10 (AP).—Arrest of an unidentified Army officer at Fort Lewis was reported tonight by the Post-Intelligencer in an investigation at the fort "into what is reported to have been an organized attempt to vilify President Roosevelt."

"The officer," the paper said, "a young man not long out of college and with a radical political background, is said to be facing charges of sedition, punishable by from 10 to 20 years in an Army disciplinary barracks."

Milton Pleads Guilty to Gas Coupon Sales

Alvin Milton, president of the Quality Service Angle gas station, 22 Florida Avenue Northwest, pleaded guilty in District Court yesterday to four counts of a seven-count indictment charging him with illegal possession and sale of ration coupons representing more than 100,000 gallons of gasoline.

Described as constituting "one of the most serious" black markets in gasoline—the first uncovered here—the violations carry a maximum penalty of four years in jail or fines totaling $40,000 or both.

Arraigned before Justice James M. Proctor, Milton admitted illegal possession of a total of 22,831 coupons, good for more than 65,000 gallons of gasoline. Most of them were of the "S" denomination—for trucks and buses.

Milton also pleaded guilty to illegally selling 48,846 gallons of gasoline without collecting coupons for them.

Returned November 23, the indictment also listed three counts charging illegal possession of 500 "inventory coupons," which could have been exchanged for as many as 50,000 gallons, although Milton's station had a capacity of only 3300 gallons. The defendant was not arraigned on these counts.

LaGuardia to Spend 60th Birthday at Work

New York, Dec. 10 (INS).—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, New York's peppery "little flower," turns 60 tomorrow—but there'll be no celebrating at City Hall because his honor plans to spend the day working behind his big glass-topped desk.

The only time out he'll take from poring over great stacks of reports and correspondence will be to puff at a big black cigar and sip his usual even blacker coffee.

President of Cuba Lauds Good-Neighbor Policy

President Fulgencio Batista of Cuba told Congress yesterday that the "good neighbor" policy had "brought new hope to those of us of the new world who cherish the ideal of justice."

The President declared also that "from the moment the Atlantic Charter was proclaimed, a brighter perspective dawned for our nations."

"The responsibility of those of us who govern the United Nations at this critical time in the history of the world," he said, "is truly grave, for we cannot limit ourselves to leading our people to victory, because this task would be sterile and ineffective if in constructing the political system of the future we should not profit by the lessons of experience and if we were not to undertake the reconstruction of the world on the basis of the most absolute justice."

He pledged his country's aid "to the limit of her strength" in the fight for victory and for the reconstruction to follow.

Emphasizing how his country feels regarding the prosecution of the war, he stated:

"Cuba occupies her place of honor at the side of her constant ally in this grave struggle. She wishes to contribute to the limit of her strength in the reconstruction of the world in which the sons of those who suffered the ignominy of yesterday and of those who fell in the struggle to achieve liberty, may live without the suffering and anguish of today."

General Batista told Congress that it was an extraordinary privilege for him to "voice the ever-present gratitude of my country for the noble declaration made in this august hall by the Congress of the United States in proclaiming on that unforgettable April 19, 1898, that 'the people of Cuba are, and of right ought to be free and independent.'"

After his speech, Batista held a reception for members of Congress.

Receive Son's Posthumous Navy Cross

George H. Mead, member of the War Labor Board, and Mrs. Mead yesterday received from Secretary Knox a Navy Cross awarded posthumously to their son, Lieut. George H. Mead, jr., U. S. Marine Corps, for gallantry in action on Guadalcanal Island.

The ceremony was held in the secretary's office with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Bard and Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Marine Corps commandant, attending. Also present were Lieutenant Mead's brother, Lieut. H. T. Mead, Army Air Corps, and his wife and sisters, Katharine and Marianna Mead.

According to the citation accompanying the medal, Lieutenant Mead, "with courageous disregard for his own personal safety, proceeded alone into the depths of the jungle, searched out the hidden offender and shot him with a .45-caliber pistol. Although he lost his life in the daring accomplishment of this task, he enabled his platoon to resume and complete its mission without further loss of life."

Lieut. Mead was born August 3, 1917, at Dayton, Ohio, and was appointed a second lieutenant, Marine Corps Reserve, after completing an officer candidate course at Quantico January 31, 1942. His parents live at the Hay-Adams House.

Railway timetables in Quebec contain explanatory notes in French and English.

Suspect Agrees To Extradition In Slaying

Expressing a desire to attend his wife's funeral in Long Island, Rudolph Nies, 37-year-old machinist agreed yesterday to return voluntarily to Suffolk County, N. Y., where he faces trial for her murder.

Calm and quiet spoken, Nies signed a waiver at police headquarters about noon and immediately was taken into custody by William Hunt, deputy sheriff of Suffolk County, N. Y. Both departed by train for New York an hour later.

Nies landed in Gallinger Hospital for mental observation Tuesday after a fight with Representative William A. Schulte (Democrat) of Indiana. He had entered the House barber shop waving his arms and shouting at two barbers. When Schulte intervened, the man rushed at him only to be floored by one punch from the 220-pound Congressman.

Following his incarceration, word was received here that he was wanted at Islip Terrace, Long Island, his home, for murdering his wife.

Mrs. Emma Nies had been found in the bathroom of her home by neighbors, Tuesday morning. Her chest bore 38 stab wounds.

Anticipating a legal fight over the man's extradition, Detective Sergt. K. H. Davis and New York authorities went before Municipal Court Judge John P. McMahon yesterday morning after Nies agreed to return.

They asked the judge if he would sign an order for his release but McMahon informed them Nies' signature on a waiver would be sufficient.

Envoy Says Reds Will Fight to End

Adm. William H. Standley, American Ambassador to Russia, declared last night that Soviet Russia will fight to the bitter end in the struggle to liberate Europe from the tyranny of Hitler.

In an article written for the forthcoming United States at War issue of the Army and Navy Journal, the Ambassador stated that Russia's great force comes from the country's unity and a willingness to sacrifice everything for victory.

Daish Will Makes Two Major Bequests

Bequests of $10,000 to the Washington Animal Rescue League and $5000 to the Washington College of Law were made under the will of the late Mrs. W. Grace Markel Daish, according to a petition for probate filed in District Court yesterday by her attorney, Richard Washington.

Mrs. Daish died December 1. Her will listed three pieces of real estate.

Fight for Philippines Continues, Axis Reveals

London, Dec. 10 (INS).—The Japanese still have not completely won the Philippines, a Japanese naval headquarters announcement quoted by the German radio admitted today.

Heavy fighting is still going on there, the announcement said, and fresh Japanese troops have been landed in an effort to overcome the grimly battling American and Filipino troops on some islands.

First Midyear Graduation

Chestertown, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—Twenty-four Washington College seniors will be graduated at the first midyear commencement in the school's 160-year history on January 30.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Josh Lee May Join Aeronautics Board

Senator Josh Lee of Oklahoma is slated to be appointed to the Civil Aeronautics Board. Several days ago a Cabinet member who is becoming notorious for double-crossing the President, told the Senator: "I'm doing all I can to land that appointment for you, but the White House is against it." To the contrary, the White House is supporting Lee for the job.

. . . Another lame duck, Representative Charles F. McLaughlin of Nebraska, will have offered to him a top job in the Justice Department . . . Several of his colleagues are supporting Senator Brown of Michigan to succeed OPA boss Leon Henderson . . . Several lame ducks are madder than ever at the Administration. They've been promised jobs, but they've been kicked around by $3000 personnel clerks in the departments.

Agriculture's Commodity Credit Corp. will be stripped of its policy-making powers under the reorganization of the department's agencies. It'll function as a banking agency . . . The House yesterday voted $3000 for the inquiry into the Government's personnel policies. Chairman Ramspeck's Civil Service Committee will make the investigation . . . Sweeping personnel changes are in the works at War Manpower Commission . . . Within the next few days the President is expected to announce the appointment of a committee that'll pass on deferments of all Federal workers. War Manpower definitely will stay clear of the employe deferment issue . . . One of the little and useless things that annoy employes: At 4 o'clock daily in some War Production Board offices the shades must be tightly drawn.

If Uncle Sam had gone out and hired 100 tough union organizers he couldn't have done a better job of driving his own employes into unions than he has by his clumsy and insincere handling of the pay bill. This short-sighted demonstration on the part of Congress will leave its mark on the Federal service that'll take years to erase. The Congress, in effect, has told the employes: "There's no use trying to get us to increase your salaries. You're not organized. We listen only to the powerful unions. The organized have votes. We can't offend them. When you're unorganized we don't listen."

Unions in private industry are filing and getting pay raises at the War Labor Board. The Government itself forces the private concerns to pay higher salaries. But the Government won't apply the same yardstick, the same principle, to all its own employes. The base salaries of Federal workers has remained the same while the salaries of private employes have skyrocketed. The Government has laid down the "Little Steel" formula to determine pay raises in private industry. Why can't it apply this same principle to its own employes? That would answer all the squeamish objections about employes getting higher salaries through reclassifications and promotions. Employes who have received the big increases wouldn't be benefited.

The "Little Steel" plan calls for a 15 per cent increase for people who haven't had a raise between January 1, 1939 and May, 1942. That's the approximate rise in the cost of living. The rise is now estimated at 20 per cent and that amount should be given. Senator Byrd and others who forced the overtime pay bill on the Senate Civil Service Committee know full well that its chances of passing are a million to one. And apparently that's why they maneuvered the change. Incidentally, Byrd yesterday revealed that his economy committee will go after employes who have received big salary increases. It would be a blessing if he'd extend a helping hand to the struggling little people in Government who haven't had raises. He'll get his opportunity when the pay bill is called up in the Senate.

Federal employment during September jumped 98,715, to a new all-time high of 2,549,474. However, there were 220,366 placements during the month, a turnover of 125,000 . . . Agriculture line-up: Roy Hendrickson in charge of food distribution. His assistant will be Clarence W. Kitchen. Herbert W. Parisius in charge of food production. His associate will be Cliff Townsend, former Governor of Indiana . . . More than 100 veteran employes who have served at least 25 years will be guests at a luncheon tomorrow at the Mayflower . . . Spring Season

Raytown, Mo.—Clayton W. Erwin was pleased when a long dry spring on his farm started spouting 4,000 gallons of water an hour. He told the water company of his good fortune. "That's the leak we've been hunting for eight months." The main was repaired, Erwin's spring is dry again—and everybody's happy.

Lucky Visit

San Diego, Calif. (A.P.).—James A. Getchell, Marine private from Detroit, Mich., walked into the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. and was handed a $25 war bond and a $5 meal ticket. The bewildered Marine was informed he was the 25-millionth visitor to enter the building.

4-Alarm Fire Ruins Stock Of Shoe Store

$25,000 Damage To Kinney Concern; Blaze Threatens Kahn's, Morton's

A spectacular four-alarm fire swept through the Kinney Shoe Store, 310 Seventh Street Northwest, at 4 p. m. yesterday, destroying $25,000 worth of Christmas stock and doing extensive water and smoke damage to Kann's Department Store and Morton's Clothing Co.

Flames were shooting 50 feet in the air from the rear of the three-story brick structure when firemen arrived on a local alarm at 3:47 p. m. Four other alarms were sounded within 15 minutes.

Firemen had the blaze under control in about 30 minutes, only to have a spark ignite merchandise in Kann's basement after virtually all apparatus had left. A single alarm brought four engine companies back to the scene at 5:08 p. m.

A plumber's blowtorch either carelessly left burning or accidentally overturned is believed to have started the fire.

According to J. A. Tehas, manager of the store, a plumber was working in a rear room when the first floor suddenly filled with smoke and flames. Tehas ushered a dozen customers and three other employes to the street.

Flames Spread Quickly

Fed by highly inflammable paper boxes, the flames quickly spread through the ceilings to the second and third floors and were licking at Kann's department store across an alley in the rear when firemen arrived.

Hampered by lack of space in the 8-foot-wide alley, firefighters fought desperately to keep the fire out of Kann's. The blaze in the basement was not discovered until after the shoe store fire was extinguished.

Water and smoke poured into Kann's through a west-side wall and into Morton's Clothing Co. at 312 Seventh Street Northwest, adjoining the shoe store on the north.

Customers in the packed department store were evacuated quickly by store employes and merchandise was moved to safety. Water poured into Kann's from the fourth floor and ran into the basement. A first-floor cafeteria in the department store was flooded.

Firemen Escape Injury

Five firemen from No. 14 Engine Company narrowly escaped serious injury when a portion of the back wall of the shoe store collapsed. All were struck with falling bricks and mortar but were saved by their helmets.

Pvt. J. J. Witkosky suffered a cut arm when struck by a jagged brick. His helmet was dented as if hit by shrapnel. With him when the wall fell were Sergt. B. G. Carter, H. B. Mikules and W. E. Garges. All were covered with mortar and debris.

Streetcar and automobile traffic was paralyzed on Seventh Street. Automobile traffic was detoured from the entire area. Streetcars were switched over at G Street and at Pennsylvania Avenue.

Extra details of policemen were rushed downtown from outlying precincts to help unsnarl the traffic jam.

Sidewalks were crowded with thousands of people who rushed to the fire from the downtown area.

Commissioner John Russell Young and his new aide, Charles Stofberg, arrived at the scene after the third alarm. Young expressed concern about the safety of customers in the department store, but was quickly assured they had been evacuated.

Damage was not sufficient to close either Kann's or Morton's and they remained open for Thursday night shoppers.

Tehas, manager of the shoe store, saved valuable company records when he fled. Other employes who escaped were Mrs. Paul Rardin, cashier; J. F. Carlisle, assistant manager, and T. J. Allen, a salesman.

Forty pieces of fire apparatus responded to the scene and auxiliary firemen aided the regulars.

Fire at Kresge Co. Causes $3000 Damage

Several hundred shoppers were led from the basement of the S. S. Kresge Co. store, 434 Seventh Street Northwest, when fire broke out in a store room last night.

The fire was confined to the basement, but the $3000 damage estimated included Christmas decorations and toys. Origin of the fire was not immediately determined.

FIREMEN FIGHT BLAZE—Yule stocks were destroyed by a four-alarm fire yesterday in the Kinney Shoe Store, 310 Seventh Street Northwest. Firemen are shown extinguishing the blaze in the rear of the store where flames were shooting 50 feet into the air above at one time. The shoes, it was said, burned fiercely

M St. House Leased by U. S. For Conversion

First house in Washington to be leased to the Government under terms of the HOLC conversion plan to provide housing for warworkers is the nine-room brick residence at 1827 M Street Northwest, which will be transformed at Government expense into three apartments.

A lease for the property was signed yesterday in the office of Harvey D. Jacob, attorney, who acted for the Government. Attending the ceremony were the joint owners, A. Malcolm Duvall, real estate man of 3811 Kanawha Road, Chevy Chase, and Miss Mildred Duvall of the Blackstone Hotel, as well as Joseph D. Anderson, director of the Washington War Housing Center; A. R. Eidemiller, area conversion supervisor of the HOLC; Milton Fisher, regional representative of the National Housing Agency, and Walter A. Crow, notary, who took the acknowledgements.

The lease runs for seven years with a three-year renewal clause, but in no event is it to continue in force for longer than two years after the President officially declares the war is over.

The Government will pay an annual rental for the property, keep up the taxes and all other expenses incidental to its operation and turn the property—improved to the extent of several thousand dollars—back to its owners when the lease expires or within two years following the end of the war—whichever occurs first.

The residence was built in 1870 by W. Clarence Duvall, late father of the present owners, who were born in the dwelling. A third co-owner of the home is Ralph G. Duvall, of New York. Title to the property has never passed from the Duvall family.

Eidemiller said approximately 200 applications for conversion have been filed with the National Housing Agency, 117 of which have been processed and turned over to the HOLC. Of the latter number, 12 are now in the hands of architects and will be ready for approval when conversion plans have been drafted.

Tenants for the converted dwellings will be selected by the War Housing Center.

City News In Brief

Holcombe Elected

Arthur J. Williams, president of the Welfare and Recreational Association, yesterday announced that G. A. Holcombe, of the solicitor's office, Veteran's Bureau Administration, has been elected vice president of the association, in place of C. L. Gable, following the transfer of the latter's office from Washington. Gable is chief of the park operating division of the National Park Service. A. E. Demaray, associate director of the park service, was elected to the association's board of trustees.

Bellegarde to Speak

Prof. Dantes Bellegarde, internationally known lawyer, diplomat and educator from Haiti and former Haitian Minister to this country, will lecture in French on "The French Culture in Haiti" at the Pan American Union this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The noted Haitian is well known in Washington as a result of his diplomatic mission here from 1931 to 1933. Previously he had held similar posts in France and at the Vatican.

Victory Sidelights

Red Cross to Recruit Nurses Toward Army Goal of 30,000

In an effort to meet the Army's 1943 goal of 30,000 nurses, 165 Red Cross chapters throughout the Nation will establish recruiting stations to sign up nurses for the armed forces, Miss Mary Beard director of the American Red Cross nursing service, announced yesterday.

The action follows the request of Surg. Gen. James C. Magee, United States Army, that the American Red Cross assume entire responsibility for recruiting Army nurses.

Although the Red Cross Nursing Service has been the official reserve of the Army Nurse Corps since 1912 and has supplied the majority of nurses to date, a small percentage has been appointed upon direct application to the corps. The new ruling provides that all applications are to be passed on by the Red Cross, regardless of whether they apply to the Army or to the Red Cross, thus leaving the corps officers free for problems of assignment.

Almost 2100 nurses signed up in the Red Cross War Reserve during November, the largest total in history.

A recent ruling of the War Department permits married nurses to remain in service and also allows acceptance of married nurses under 40 who have made adequate provision for their dependents.

School to House Soldiers

The Stuart Junior High School, 400 E Street Northeast, has been selected by school officials and the War Hospital Committee for experimenting in housing soldiers in the public school gymnasia over the weekends, The Post learned yesterday. When the cots will be set up was not announced.

If the plan is successful in the Stuart School, it is planned to extend the sleeping service in other schools.

The Board of Education approved the program at its last meeting. Custodians will direct the business of setting up the cots. The money will be provided by the War Hospitality Committee.

Blackout Traffic Curb

New regulations regarding emergency vehicle passes which will go into effect January 1, 1943, will cut by 50 per cent the number of cars allowed to move in Washington during blackouts, the OCD announced yesterday.

The red stickers, which have been issued to more than 30,000 persons in Washington, will not be valid after December 31, OCD officials said, and new white emergency vehicle passes will be given out.

Emergency vehicle passes, OCD officials announced, will be issued only where there is absolute necessity for an individual and a vehicle to move during the actual duration of an emergency.

'Share-Home-at-Christmas' Arouses Hearty Response Here

By Robert Tate Allan

Post Church Editor

Warworkers and citizens who want to play Christmas Day hosts to them are enthusiastically responding to the "Share Your Home at Christmas" project, sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches' Defense Commission with the Government's cooperation.

Mounting interest in the plan was evidenced last night, when the defense commission met with Government personnel workers at the Federation of Churches' Building, 1751 N Street Northwest, to map further steps in the project.

Joining in the discussion were Grover L. Hartman, director of the Defense Commission; Coleman Jennings, chairman of the defense commission and community chest president; Miss Mary Day, of the committee on Recreational Activities of the War Department, and Miss Ivy Randall, employe counsellor in the chief engineer's office, War Department, and Miss Katherine Powell, active in USO work of the Y. W. C. A.

The discussion on the home-sharing plan was a phase of the annual meeting of the Defense Commission, at which Mr. Jennings presided.

Earlier in the day, Marshall Stalley, chief of the community activities section of the War Department, informed The Post that he was "highly pleased" at the response to the home-sharing plan. The fact that there are 60,000 employes in the War Department alone gives an idea of the magnitude of the task of making a happy holiday for warworkers here, he said.

Names of warworkers wishing to be Christmas Day guests are being cleared through Government personnel departments and the hosts' names, through the Defense Commission. Thousands of share-your-home cards will be distributed at religious services here Sunday.

Traffic Toll Rises to 102 For '42 Here

Mrs. Alice S. Hall, 79, Struck by Bicycle Dec. 2, Succumbs; Rider Faces Inquiry

D. C. traffic deaths this year....102
Deaths this date last year..... 86
District total last year..... 95

Struck by a bicycle on the sidewalk of the Klingle Bridge, December 2, Mrs. Alice Sweetser Hall, 79, of the Kennedy-Warren Apartments, died at Doctors Hospital at 11:57 a. m. yesterday.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald classified her death as a traffic fatality, the 102d this year.

Mrs. Hall, widow of Henry C. Hall, former Interstate Commerce commissioner, was walking south across the bridge on the east side of the street. She was knocked down from behind by a bicycle.

Police said the bicycle was ridden by Harold Faucon, 14, of 3217 Connecticut Avenue Northwest. He told police his foot slipped from a pedal as he neared the woman and he lost control. His front wheel struck her back and he was thrown over the handlebars, he said.

Mrs. Hall was taken to her apartment and was treated by a private physician for concussion. She was removed to the hospital the next day.

A native of New York City, Mrs. Hall came to Washington in 1914. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Oliver Lerch, 3725 S Street Northwest, and a sister, Miss Jeannette A. Sweetser of New York City.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night.

Harold was released to his parents after the mishap and made his statement to Accident Investigation Unit police later. He will appear at a coroner's inquest, the date of which has not been set.

Miss Bertha Harris, 35, of 1407 L Street Northwest suffered a possible skull fracture when struck by a hit-and-run automobile at Eleventh and L Streets Southeast yesterday. Miss Harris, a clerk at the Washington Navy Yard, was removed to Casualty Hospital.

A 5-yard-old boy, Rowland Duvall, 1218 Half Street Southeast, received severe head injuries when he ran into the side of a truck near his home, police said. He was removed to Providence Hospital. Police said the drive of the truck was Eugene S. Thomas, 44, 1017 Second Street Northeast.

Statler Heads 'Camp Out' In Big Hotel

Fourteen rooms without benefit of service or heat to speak of are being used by executives of the Statler Hotel at their incompleted hosterly at Sixteenth and K Streets Northwest.

Curious passersby have wondered for several weeks what the venetian blinds showing in fifth-story windows meant, because although the exterior indicates that work is progressing the hotel still appears far from complete.

Fred Kenny, manager, said that although the Statler was not scheduled to open for more than a month "our executives are camping out here when they get to Washington." There's no other place to stay, he said.

Laborers of every building trade are at work in the hotel from early morning and watchmen are on duty throughout the night, ready to welcome Statler executives and stop any visitor who can't produce the proper credentials.

There is no room service of any sort, no valet service and no laundry facilities. One maid is doing what she can for the visitors.

When the hotel is completed there will be 850 rooms available and a personnel of 750 will care for the guests.

But today the few guests walk up the stairs to their rooms at night and wander through uncarpeted halls.

"They have hot water and electricity and heat of about 50 though," Kenny said, "and at least they have rooms to sleep in."

D. C. Woman's Father Heads College R.O.T.C.

Boston, Dec. 10 (AP).—Capt. Guy E. Davis, who will become the new commanding officer of the Naval R. O. T. C. unit at Holy Cross College, Worcester, reported for service there today, the Navy announced.

Captain Davis, who has a residence at Laconia, N. H., is married and has one daughter, the wife of Lieut. Comdr. Robert Lee Moore, jr., of Washington.

All In a Year

U. S. Acquires Area as Big As 5 States

Since Pearl Harbor the Government has received or placed under condemnation for war purposes more than 19,000 square miles of land—equal to the total area of Connecticut, Massachusetts, Delaware, Rhode Island, the District of Columbia and two-fifths of the State of New Jersey.

Reporting yesterday on this partially overlooked but nonetheless dramatic part of the war effort, Norman M. Littell, assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's lands division, told the luncheon meeting of the Federal Bar Association in the Harrington Hotel:

"After Pearl Harbor, demands for land acquisitions rattled out of the general staffs with the rapidity of machinegun fire.

"Air fields, bombing ranges, tank maneuver grounds, artillery, machinegun and rifle ranges, housing sites, drydocks, naval bases and areas for manufacturing plants for guns, tanks and all the vast miscellany of modern warfare—in fact, all manner of sites from a fraction of an acre for a gun emplacement on a barren stretch of the New England coast to five million acres for a bombing range in Arizona—all were required for the intensive training period which lies behind the invasion of Africa."

Graphically, he related how the time required to negotiate real estate transactions was slashed to a minimum under the stimulus of war. One instance:

"The Stevens Hotel of Chicago, reputed to be the largest in the world with 3000 rooms, was taken between July 8, when a telephoned request was received from the War Department, and 3:30 p. m. on July 9, when proceedings were filed . . . An order was entered to surrender possession on August 1."

Many of the larger hotels in Atlantic City, he said, were in Government hands within 48 hours after the Justice Department had been notified by the Army that it desired them.

Vasilakos Proclaimed 'Man of Year'

Greek Americans yesterday proclaimed Steve Vasilakos, the White House corner peanut vender, as "the Common People's Man of the Year" in a flowery letter reminding him of his war bond sales activity and his proud Spartan blood.

"Your initiative and inspired patriotism in establishing a war effort department right beside your peanut stand for the sale of your share of war bonds . . . has again demonstrated that the Spartan blood that runs through your veins is that of your ancestors who 2500 years ago, under the leadership of Leonidas, defied the barbarian invaders of classic Greece by answering their threats laconically:

"Come and get it!"

To this letter from Michael Loris, chairman, Ahepa War Bond Rally and Dance, to be held Sunday in New York when, it was hoped, Vasilakos might appear to receive encomiums, Vasilakos replied yesterday:

"I am not an educated man. I do not know how to write a letter. Miss Helen Cheaklos, who helps me sell war bonds, helped me write this letter to you.

"I have been selling peanuts at my stand for the past 33 years. Day in and day out people came, bought a bag of peanuts and helped me make a living peacefully. I have never bothered anybody in my life and nobody has stood in my way of making a living. That is what America has meant and means to me.

"If we lose this war I will not be able to sell peanuts at my stand any more. I don't want that to happen to me . . ."

Now he can't attend his peanut stand because his physical heart is ailing. He can't go to New York Sunday for the same reason and he grows very sad thinking about it. To sell peanuts or not, he says, is nothing. It is of getting sick, after 33 years, and when there are bonds to be sold.

Old Interview Wins Hebert Right To Greet Batista

House Speaker Rayburn is not one to let protocol stand between old friends.

In composing the list of House members who were to be the reception committee for President Fulgencio Batista of Cuba at the Capitol yesterday he inserted the name of Representative Hebert, Democrat and first termer from Louisiana, although under a long-standing House rule distinguished visitors are welcomed by majority and minority leaders, etc., etc.

The reason: Eight years ago a newspaper reporter got an exclusive interview with a Cuban army sergeant who had overthrown the Machado regime. Hebert was the reporter, Batista the sergeant.

Yesterday's meeting was their first since then.

Service Ideal Extolled at D. C. Meeting

Citizens' Corps Admits New Members, Hears Speakers at Session

The higher objective of community war work—service to humanity—was extolled as a worthy ideal for the present and a vision of and pattern for the future at exercises last night in the Departmental Auditorium where more than 600 volunteers with more than 500 hours of service to their credit and an unannounced number of others with at least 50 hours were enrolled in the United States Citizens' Service Corps.

"Pray God we may keep that vision!" declared OCD Director James Landis.

Said Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher and editor of The Post: "The OCD does well to honor you, for thereby it honors the ideal of service to humanity."

"You are enrolled," said Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of civilian defense, "in the finest cause in which people may serve."

Mrs. Brooke Speaks

Mrs. Frederick Brooke, chairman of the corps' award committee, expressed the hope that the "example of your service will reach many others."

These tributes embodied the general tone of the meeting—formal recognition of volunteer service, capably and cheerfully performed.

Mrs. Brooke announced the presentation of both certificates and pins emblematic of 500 hours or more service to members of the following organizations, all affiliated with groups not included in the protective services:

Children's Hospital, 3; Home Hospitality Committee, 4; Junior League, 23; War Hospitality Committee, 33; Girl Scouts, 33; Civilian Defense Volunteer Office, 29; American Women's Voluntary Services, 43; Jewish Community Center, 6; Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A., 6; Traveler's Aid Society, 6; Defense Commission of Washington Churches, 18; Civilian Mobilization Division, 72, and the Red Cross, 370.

The greatest number of hours of service to the credit of any individual was 3000 — opposite the name of Mrs. Elida Morris Cooper of the war hospitality committee.

Man 91 Honored

John (Jack) Dunkel, 91, hale and hearty, marched to the rostrum to receive from Mrs. Brooke a certificate and pin presented to him and his 81-year-old wife jointly. Between them they have compiled 500 hours' work in cataloguing music for various defense activities. They reside at 820 North Carolina Avenue Southeast.

Then, just to make it a complete evening, members of the award committee were presented pins in recognition of their services. Besides the chairman, members are Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle and Miss Anita Phipps, who were present, and Frederic A. Delano, Dr. Paul Douglass, Frank R. Jelleff and Dean Howard Thurman.

The oath to members of the service corps was administered by Colonel Bolles, who asked the honorees to arise and be "blessed" and spoke briefly in a congratulatory vein.

OCD Director Landis, who arrived just in time to see the screen erected for a showing of a March of Time release, had to wait until after the picture had been run off to extend his congratulations in a brief address.

The evening's major talk was by Mrs. Meyer, recently returned from Great Britain, who observed that America always has been "much too negligent in recognizing public service," and then discussed the importance of the civilian defense services in the defense of England. That nation, she said, is "convinced that the morale of the home front eventually will win the war."

She warned against any relaxation of our defenses because of our comparative distance from the scene of battle and declared we "are fighting an utterly ruthless enemy who is bound to grow more dangerous as he becomes more desperate."

Invocation of the meeting was offered by the Rev. Walter Brooks, Negro Baptist minister; the Marine Band furnished music; Boy Scouts served as ushers, and uniformed Girl Scouts led the pledge of allegiance and the singing of "America."

Correction

In reporting a traffic accident at Fourteenth and G Streets Northwest Wednesday night, The Post said that Lieut. Francis Krogmann, 34, of 3719 Twelfth Street Northeast, U. S. Army, and his woman companion, Miss Ernestine Hagins, 30, of Arlington, Va., were injured. Lieutenant Krogmann was not accompanied by Miss Hagins. They happened to be crossing the street at the moment.

The Post regrets the error.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Facing Breakdown Unless She Can Get Away From Washington to Visit Family in the West, Woman Asks How to Get Holiday Travel Permit

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Having read your column for some time, I feel that you can help me with my problem, which may seem silly to you, but which means the world to me. My husband and I have been living in Washington for just a year. Since being here, we have had a hard time making friends. Our home was formerly in the West, where we had lived all our lives. My husband's mother visited us here this past summer, and her company was so welcome that we had a hard time letting her leave.

Now, my mother, who is a widow, living in the West, and who has a small independent income, has sent us money to make the trip "back home" this Christmas, to spend a few days with my grandparents. But the problem is this: My husband is a Government employe and no doubt will have to enter the armed service in the very near future. And Government officials have said there is to be no civilian traveling at this time. But if I don't get out of Washington for at least a few days, I will (so my doctor has informed me) have a nervous breakdown.

During the year we have been in Washington I have had two operations and a third is in prospect in a few months. Which means that I can't take a job to keep my mind occupied. So, is there any way of convincing the authorities who are "running the show," that my husband and I must take this trip, for my health's sake? I feel, and my doctor thinks, that the change would "tide me over" until I have regained my strength. Please consider the problem and let me hear from you soon. Sincerely, MRS. J. M.

Woman's Anxiety Lacks Justification

DEAR MRS. J. M.: As is so often the case with those who are physically under par and nervously distressed in consequence, you are getting yourself "all worked up" for hardly any reason. The truth is that the Government has taken no action which would prohibit you personally from taking the train back home to your grandparents at Christmas. Furthermore, the chances are fair that your husband could accompany you. The principal hypothetical obstacle in the way of the trip is the nation-wide difficulty of securing off-hand travel reservations—on train, plane or bus—these days, due to the fact that all transportation facilities are stupendously taxed, by civilian, war worker and troop movements alike. But as the public is gradually accepting its patriotic responsibility to cut out non-essential gallivanting "for the duration," even that difficulty is not insurmountable, by any means. People all over the country are still getting wherever they have to go, in bonafide emergency, under which heading your proposed trip would certainly come.

The second hurdle to clear, in getting off, has to do with your husband's obtaining leave from his office to make the journey, as "health insurance" for his wife. And while the Office of Defense Transportation issued an official order in November to the effect that Government departments shall deny holiday leave to persons whose homes are so far away that they can only be reached by "public carrier"—which is to say by plane, train or bus—still, that order was strictly designed to prevent purely pleasure-bent holiday traffic congestion. It does not purport to be a rigid ruling, "freezing" everybody in his tracks, so to speak.

No Federal Curb On Essential Travel

The fact that your husband may soon be inducted into the army, plus the fact that his wife (and total dependent) is in a precarious state of health and has been advised by her physician to "go back home" to recoup her strength, is sound justification for his petitioning the leave of absence required to make the trip. And I feel sure that any right minded employer would consider it a morale-building obligation on his part to readily grant such permission, as much to help the man "put his house in order" against the day he may be drafted, as to underwrite his productive efficiency in his present civilian war-worker capacity. If your husband's immediate superior can't "see it that way," he is inadequate to his supervisory duties; and the petition should be directly appealed to the next higher authority. But if your husband states his case positively and purposefully, rather than timidly and uncertainly, he probably will gain his point on the first round.

Now, to come back to the question of transportation: It is advisable to look into the matter of train tickets at once, not only to guarantee reservations, but also to enable your husband to say definitely, in speaking with his supervisor, just what day he would expect to depart. From Mr. Edward L. Riecks, assistant general passenger agent for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad office, I learn that desirable reservations on the all-Pullman Capitol Limited to Chicago, for instance, are being spoken for approximately ten days in advance; and that reservations on some trains are already listed as far ahead as January. Reserved seats on reclining-chair day coach trains are much in demand, although generally obtainable if solicited a week or more ahead. And sometimes an emergency-driven last-minute traveler gets the "lucky break" benefit of somebody else's eleventh-hour cancellation.

Railway Official Offers Reassurance

In referring to the ODT order restricting holiday travel, Mr. Riecks explained that the purpose is to "make room on public carriers for boys in the service to get home on furlough," a purpose clearly deserving of public approval and support. As final reassurance to you, I might add that Mr. Riecks, who, of necessity, keeps up to the minute on official sentiment governing wartime travel regulations, feels (as I do) that you should have "absolutely no trouble" arranging your proposed trip back home, either as to leave of absence for your husband or carrier reservations, if you get busy at once, cinching the deal. Incidentally, it occurs to me, as an afterthought, that a written statement of your doctor's conviction might help your husband get leave on the double-quick. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Little Ripples Grow

Girl Scout Mariners have acquired a new name.

When a group of the seagoing Scouts recently visited the Seamen's Church Institute in New York, the sailors were curious about their nautical uniforms.

"Are you WAVES?" asked one. "You look too young."

"We're Girl Scout Mariners," said the girls.

"Aha!" said the sailor—"Ripples!"

Cool the Cookies

Cookies should be completely cold before packing them in your covered cooky jars. To prevent them from sticking together, which often happens with drop cookies especially, use a sheet of waxed paper between the cookie layers.

Lamp Shade Linings

Use white or very light linings in your lamp shades. White reflects light, while dark colors absorb it. Dust the shades frequently with a soft brush; dust will keep out light.

Don't Tell It to Me!

Yes, I've heard them all:

The one about there being plenty of gas and rubber and that the only reason for the rationing is that the Government doesn't want people to get around and find out what's really going on.

The one about this country's going to have to pay for the proposed new Beveridge post-war insurance plan in England out of Lend-Lease funds while the United States bogs down in unemployment and poverty. Also the ones about Britain, or Russia or China or somebody else getting all our food while we starve to death.

The one about some "terrific reverses" or disasters in North Africa, or the Solomons, or elsewhere, being "hushed up" and that "we just don't know the truth about this war."

The one about Roosevelt and Churchill being on the verge of a split over the Darlan matter, or the African front or Colonial rule—or a thousand and one things, and also the one about the secret plans of either England or Russia to make a separate peace with Hitler and "leave us the suckers as usual."

The one about Mrs. Roosevelt's having gone to England to study plans for regimenting all American women into some kind of a vague, totalitarian army.

The one about there being a secret Jap air base and ammunition depot in the Rockies, and the Germans having established a secret seaplane base around Hudson Bay from which to bomb New York.

The one about the Negro maid who insisted on eating with the guests at the dinner party of her employer because Mrs. Roosevelt had told her to, also the scores of others about antics of maids who belonged to "Eleanor Clubs," also all the ones about petty racial controversies on streetcars, in stores or elsewhere, and passed on by pop-eyed women over their tea and sandwiches.

The one about there not being any Jews in the Army and why, also the one about how the Jews are really trying to get an Army of their own as part of a plot to run the whole world.

The one about the big financiers and "smart men" not buying Government bonds because "there's a chance we may lose the war and what good would a bond be then?"

The one about British and American soldiers fighting each other in England, also the ones about how all the British "look down on us and despise us."

All the ones gabby and vindictive Americans tell about their President and others of their leaders to Britishers in this country, who at least have the pride, the patriotism, and the good taste not to denounce their own public men in the presence of people of another nation.

All the "anti" ones that stir up suspicion and bad feeling between us and our Allies, all the horror ones that tell of sufferings and atrocities our fighting men are having to endure, all the defeatist ones that make the war a lost cause and the future ominous and hopeless.

Yes, I've heard them all . . . at tea and cocktail party, from jeweled, perfumed and fur-coated women whose lives apparently are still untouched by the pinch of war . . . at club meetings where women who profess to lead others still seem unable to control their imaginations and their tongues . . . at beauty shops from becurled and beplastered patrons lounging in well fed contentment under dryers . . . at grocery stores from solid looking customers laden with supplies of the latest food rumored to be soon on the priority list . . . on street car and bus from chatty vacuous faced women who strike up conversation with strangers.

I've heard them all, all the idle, preposterous and dangerous tales and comments that a few credulous, blabbing women unthinkingly pass on, to the delight of Dr. Goebbels and of all the fifth columnists assigned to implant such thought in the American mind.

And so to all those who in the future have anything of this nature to tell me, let me say, once and finally, "Please don't—unless you can give me the name, address and telephone number of the person who told you!"

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Too Frequent Feedings Overtax Baby's Digestion

When we consider milk a food, as well as a beverage, we can understand how vitally important it is to include this food, along with all other foods, when we offer the baby his regular meals.

To feed at one hour and offer the milk formula at another is, in essence, to feed eight instead of four times daily. This is a digestive burden for baby.

Mrs. M. B. F. says her mother and sister criticize her methods of feeding her baby. I am inclined to think they have some basis for criticism. "I live at home and my family tells me I overfeed the baby. She is 11 months old and weighs 25 pounds and is 29½ inches tall.

"She wakens at about 7 to 7:30 and has 3 to 4 ounces of orange juice; 3 tablespoons of cereal and a banana, if I am lucky enough to get one. At 10 to 10:30 she has a soft-boiled egg and a strip of bacon. At 11:30 she has eight ounces of milk.

"She takes a nap and then about 3 p. m. she has a can of soup or vegetables or a lamb chop and vegetables. Then another bottle around 4:30 to 5 o'clock. Then her fruit and egg at 6:30 and her last bottle (which she seldom finishes) at about 8 p. m. I don't think she exceeds 24 ounces of milk, including that on her cereal."

Her diet is fine but you are feeding too often. Consider, also, that cereal and banana are the same type of food and give one or the other, or half as much cereal as usual and half a banana.

Give the cereal or banana and 8 ounces of milk at 7 a. m. At midmorning give the fruit juice and the daily allotment of vitamin D (which you failed to mention and which is vitally important).

At 11:30 give the egg or scraped lamb and vegetables along with a milk pudding and as much milk as she will drink.

At 5:30 to 6 offer cottage cheese, or egg custard and some sieved, cooked fruit and the third 8 ounces of milk. There is no harm in offering a part of a cup of warm milk at bedtime, but it is also a good practice to get baby used to going to bed without being fed. Bottles stay in the picture overlong when they are used as bedtime soothers, instead of purveyors of food.

Mrs. A. B. If your baby's stools are loose and greenish and the gain low, I'd consider the baby in need of some additional nourishment in the form of a complementary feeding. The individual things you eat won't upset the baby. Complete emptying of the breasts; lots of fluid and a generous, well-balanced diet you can digest easily, is the secret of a good breast supply.

KID STUFF

By Jeanne Contini

A nice way of keeping the twins in check is with these charming brother and sister suits. They're made of a fine quality heavy cotton closely knit, which is warm and not weighty. Here is a fabric that can go through inumerable washings without losing an iota of shape or color.

We sketched the pattern somewhat larger than life-size for the sake of clarity. It comes in three color combinations with solid trimmings; red, white and navy; beige, henna, and brown; red, gray, and dark green. All are attractive but we are sort of partial to the latter.

You'll notice that the change-about furore has finally caught up with the younger set. Both trousers and skirt are made on the jumper principle and can be worn very successfully with different tops . . . sweaters or skirts in one of the pattern colors or a contrast. The same shop has a good selection of these. The lower half of the outfits are built for vigorous playing and have an elasticized section at the back of the waist bands to save you from eternally sewing the buttons back on.

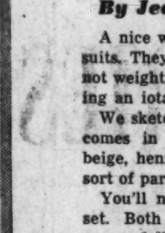
Each of the four pieces are sold separately and cost under $2.00 each. Sizes 2, 4, 6, and 6x (equal to a 7). They're beautifully made and would be a practical and welcome Christmas gift.

For further information please call NAtional 4200, ext. 324, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

We women are finding out that we can drive trucks and buses and handle the machine-shop jobs that used to be earmarked "for men only." But we don't yet know our own strength. We have to look at what the Russian women are doing to see what we could do.



IDA JEAN KAIN

So that I could tell you all about it, the Consulate of the United States of Soviet Russia let me have the latest reports on women workers. In the last year, around 70,000 women have been trained to take over the operation of the railways. Some of the lady engineers over there are already as celebrated as our Casey Jones. They have whole train crews—brakemen, flagmen, conductors—of women.

More than 10,000 women are working the oil fields. Of the industrial workers, 45 per cent are women; of the garment workers, 95 per cent are women. The industrial age limit is from 16 to 45, but during harvest time every female from 14 to 50 who is not already doing vitally important work goes into the field to garner the crops.

Here are two easy conditioners:

1. Stand erect, feet slightly apart, right fist on left side of chest, and left fist at about the same level on right side of back. Certainly, bend your elbows! Ready? Fling both arms up and out, shoulder level, at sides. Return to position. Repeat the exercise to count, 50 times, rythmically.

2. To strengthen the abdominal muscles, assume the "long sitting position" for three minutes a day. Sit down on floor with back pressed flat against wall, legs straight out in front, and simply pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles as you sit there. Then, during the rest of the day, make it a rule to pull up and in with those same muscles. That will do more than anything else to straighten out your posture.

Do Books or Garments Transmit Tuberculosis?

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

It is a natural question and it is sent to me quite frequently by relatives and friends of patients with tuberculosis: they want to know whether articles which the tuberculosis patient has handled are contaminated so that they can transmit the disease.

Dr. Clendening

In general it may be said that there is very little practical danger of this. Books read by consumptives probably are occasionally contaminated by sputum in the form of droplets expelled during coughing or speaking as the book is held close to the face.

They may also be contaminated by licking the thumb or finger when turning the pages. But those who have studied the question agree that most of the germs deposited on the book pages become dry and dead after a short period of time. In one experiment papers were exposed to coughing patients and afterwards dried for one month. They were found to be free of tuberculosis germs and washings from the papers inoculated into guinea pigs did not affect the guinea pigs in a single instance.

In another experiment patients with advanced pulmonary tuberculosis and a great number of germs in the sputum were asked to handle books as carelessly as possible. They coughed on the marked pages, wet their thums with saliva when turning these pages. Scrapings were later derived from these pages, put in a solution and inoculated into guinea pigs and in no instance did any of the guinea pigs become infected with tuberculosis.

In the case of garments the same sort of experiments have been carried out.

In a large sanatorium cultures were made from swabbings of bedside tables, lamps, bed frames and other articles in rooms occupied by tuberculous patients with uniformly negative results. None of the cultures showed a growth of tubercle bacilli. An almost certain way to prevent the contamination of articles in a sickroom occupied by a tuberculous patient is to allow sunlight to enter into the room as much as possible, preferably sunlight that is unfiltered by window glasses.

These experiments should not, however, give rise to a false sense of security and the following precautions are judicious:

1. The best way to ease the mind of the possibility of transmission of tuberculosis by a book is to store or quarantine the book for several weeks until any moisture which has been coughed upon it has completely dried.

2. As far as garments are concerned, the safest way is to expose them to the sun and air before storing them. There is no other method of disinfection that is so effective with the tubercle bacillus as sunlight and drying.

The PRINCESS of GRATZEN

By LOUIS ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM

SYNOPSIS

Mme. Fabre-Lusignan, once a famous actress, lives at the Chateau Philibert in Canada. Her butler, Rudolph, reads in the newspaper that Princess Meridel of Gratzen with her young cousins, Pol Martin and Rosine, have arrived in Quebec to seek their wealthy uncle, Baron de Morpin. Rudolph confesses to Madame that he is the Baron and that he has led his relatives to believe him the owner of Philibert. She insists on continuing the deception and assumes the part of housekeeper. The three young refugees are warmly received but Rosine and Pol Martin are haunted by the memory of Bonhomme Fricot, shot to death by a German soldier in a French village. Madame's nephew, Michel, is in France. His brother, Roger Fabre, of the Canadian Air Force, meets the princess. Walking with him she thinks of a tall young man she had met in Gratzen—Michel.

Chapter IV

"It is so long since I went shopping," said madame, "that those who waited on me, if not supporting tombstones, are being supported by pensions; so I shall take Meridel and the little ones to Montreal and see that they buy the things they need. Right now they are like scarecrows."

"But, madame——"

The old lady ignored Rudolph. It was understood that he was to come to her once each day for orders and plans of operation. Madame did all the talking and Rudolph, for all the attention paid his few timid suggestions, might just as well have talked to the stone statues in the park.

"That young scamp Roger—we shall let him drive down with us. He met the princess last night and kept me up until all hours telling me how wonderful she is, what beautiful hair she has, what mystery is in her eyes. Pouf! I have heard is all so often—about this one and about that and—and about myself. And though I sneered at him, it was good to hear. It is always pleasant to a woman's ears. Even now I could pretend to believe—what are you standing there for, Baron, you imbecile!"

"If madame has no further need of me——"

"There, my friend." She patted Rudolph's shoulder. "You are a good man, a kind man."

"When Meridel learns the truth I am afraid she will despise me. I am only an impostor, a fraud——"

"You are nothing of the kind," said madame indignantly. "And if you are, what then am I? Is it not enough to see these young ones happy, secure at last? To hear their laughter? To know that you have taken fear out of their lives? This morning sunlight is golden and lovely, Rudolph, as it falls on the floors and walls of Philibert, but if it were barred blackly as it might be for her—what then? No, no, you must not reproach yourself—not ever. You must make things right for them. Please see that the car is ready in an hour and tell Roger we shall take him with us."

"Madame——" Rudolph, at the door, hesitated, turned a face of great misery toward the old lady, who had taken out her teeth and now popped them in again.

"What now, my old one?"

"I have a little money saved. I should like you—"

Madame reached for a hair brush, snatched it up, balanced it in her clawlike hand, then said with sudden gentleness, "Forget about that, Rudolph. You must understand that, as baron, you are drawing far more of a salary than you ever did as butler. It is kind of you to offer, but I have more money than I can ever spend and this gives me a great deal of pleasure. Do not try to spoil it, please. Let me have my way. There is so little time left in which I can do as I please."

The picture of Michel grinned mockingly at her from her dressing table as who should say, "Well, old hag, here is one who didn't let you have your way with his life. You would have stuck him in a brokerage office or a biscuit factory and married him off to some dough-faced debutante—but he wasn't having any."

"Insolent pup!"

"I beg pardon, madame."

"Mon Dieu!" Are you still there! Please get out, my man. I have to dress. And tell the little ones to make ready within the hour, that we are going to the great city of Montreal."

"You are so kind, madame. I shall go now."

He found Pol Martin and Rosine in their underwear, sitting with Roger Fabre on the bank of the miniature pool at the foot of the garden where they had been swimming. Roger's long body was burned to a deep nutry brown, a blue eagle was tattooed on his right forearm. The little ones were white and frail looking.

"We'll soon fatten this pair." Roger grinned up at Rudolph. "Between the sun and madame I'll wager you won't know them inside 10 days. Pol Martin is telling me some of their experiences in the blitz."

"——and Bonhomme Fricot would say 'No bullet ever made could hurt a man's soul and no weapons ever forged can match God's weapons. God's the one to settle dictators: just the same, if you should stumble on one, better hit him on the head while you are asking the divine aid.'"

"Very sensible," approved Roger. "A great philosopher, this Bonhomme Fricot."

"His cottage was outside the village," said Rosine. "It was in a little wood and this day Pol Martin and I went there and just before we came to the cottage a plane went over——"

"And we hid." Pol Martin's blue eyes were seeing it all again. "We hid in a coppice and we saw a German come down in a parachute right in the field back of Bonhomme Fricot's cottage and we saw him draw his revolver and go up to the door and kick it open and walk in."

"And there was a shot, then another—crack—crack!" Rosine's voice was shrill. "A cry—and we knew Bonhomme Fricot, that good man, was dead. We waited and presently the German came out. We could see his face now as he walked toward us."

"He passed so near to me that I could almost touch him," said Pol Martin. "He was young like you, Monsieur Roger. We hated them then and when we crept to the cottage window after he had gone and looked in and saw our poor Bonhomme Fricot lying dead on the floor——"

'Then We Ran—'

"We had to run—run quickly—more planes were coming over this time, a bomb set fire to the cottage, and men were parachuting down. All that night we ran when it was safe to do so. Then we met an old peasant with his cart and he started us on the road to Paris and there Meridel found us. It was God who helped her to find us and bring us here."

"Yes," said Roger softly and his eyes were steady on Rudolph's. "It was indeed God who helped."

"And He will take care of Bonhomme Fricot up in Heaven," said Rosine. "And punish the one who killed him. Bonhomme Fricot was bent and his beard was long. He would harm no one."

"It is murder to kill like that," said Pol Martin. "Then to laugh, to smile as this one did after——"

"It is done with now. Finished, my little ones," said Roger. "And it is time you were getting into some clothes, eh, Rudolph?"

"Madame requests that you be ready within the hour—you too, M. Roger—you are all going to Montreal."

"The princess, too?" Roger sat up.

"Yes," said Rudolph. "It is to be a shopping expedition."

Rosine clapped her hands. Pol Martin wanted a pair of red trunks like Roger's. They ran helter-skelter over the smooth lawn and old Florian, clipping the boxwood hedge, stopped and smiled and waved his shears at them, at these little ones who had brought new brightness to the vast house and its sprawling park. Florian had always considered Rudolph as something special and rated his authority above madame's, and these strangers were from Europe, relatives of Rudolph's. It was good to have them. He had cut some of the finest Pernet roses, lovely yellow ones, for the breakfast table, for that girl who looked like a sun goddess. Eh b'en, it was a queer world—kings and queens and duchesses rubbing elbows with the habitant of Sainte Barbe's daughter. Still the sun rose every morning and the lawns always needed tending and the grapes were getting heavy on the vines.

Roger met Meridel as he crossed the yard on his way to his room in madame's suite. She wore a white sleeveless dress today. Her skin was pale gold and he saw tiny freckles on her nose which had an unprincess-like tilt.

"But you are brown—like an Indian! Shall I become like that after I live in Canada a while?"

"Not so brown, I think. You are all gold, princess. Maybe your color will deepen a little. Not too much, I hope. I would not have it change."

She smiled up at him. "You are driving with us to the city. That is nice."

"Indeed it is, though I rather think it is a scheme of madame's to get rid of me a day earlier than I planned to go."

"But you will come back!"

"You may be sure I shall. I'll hurry back—Your Highness."

"Please! I am not much of a Highness any more. Will you not call me Meridel?"

"I may call you Meridel? And you will call me Roger? It is a lovely name, Meridel. Like music."

"I am glad you like it. The toymakers in Gratzen used to make little music boxes that played a tune like Mer-i-del-mer-i-del-mer-i-del—You may hear Pol Martin and Rosine singing it in a rondeau."

"I shall learn it," said Roger. "It will be my song from now on, Meridel."

She colored, pale rose under the golden tan. "You must hurry now. I am eager to go to the city, so that I may the sooner come back here. I want no more of crowds or cities. This place—This is what I love so, the songs of birds and the wind in the trees and the water in the brook. It is the right of everyone upon this earth, princess or peasant—Now it is denied to both impartially."

"Not here, Meridel. Not over here. Freedom is the air we breathe."

"But you know how it is—over there—"

He nodded. "Old wickedness, old sores that have festered, became gangrenous. A tired old world. Yes, I think I know."

"And it is swallowing up so much of the world that is new and fresh."

"Yes." He thought of Michel. "Many of ours. But they go gayly."

"I weep for them."

"Would you weep for me, Meridel, if I——"

"Do not ask me. Go, please. I——I can't bear to think of losing anything more. You are a new friend I have made——"

"You won't lose me easily, never fear. Now I shall hurry. I believe those children are all ready. Au 'voir, Meridel."

She waved to him as he ran swiftly to the house. She looked thoughtfully after him. He was the nephew of Mme. Laurin, Uncle Rudi's housekeeper, yet he was one of the family. It must be all part of this new pleasant world where servant and master were equals, where classes, if there were such, were foolish and void of meaning. Even Baron Rudi had told her that he was known only as Monsieur Morpin. That being a baron only meant they'd ask you to pay in advance at a hotel.

Mrs. Charnas In Tour to Raise Funds

Helps Local Group Collect Money For Los Angeles Tuberculosis Unit

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor

She wouldn't walk a block to see a dazzling movie star. But she would go miles to meet a great thinker or philosopher. Dynamic, unassuming Mrs. Rosa Warner Charnas, national representative of the Los Angeles Tuberculosis Sanatorium, comes from a family that makes glamour—the famous Warner Brothers of Hollywood.

Miss Reynolds

Except that she's unusually fond of her brothers—Harry and Jack Warner—you'd never suspect that she's part of the great movie family. The only time she trades on the name is when she's out fund raising for some charitable organization. If by admitting that she is a Warner, she can collect more money for the cause she will do so, otherwise, she's just Mrs. Charnas.

MRS. ROSA WARNER CHARNAS

The object of her visit to Washington is to aid the local group, the City of Hope Auxiliary, in its campaign to raise funds for the Los Angeles Tuberculosis Sanatorium. She was guest speaker at the group's meeting Tuesday.

"It isn't news that tuberculosis is on the increase," said Mrs. Charnas. "With more and more people going into factories, you can expect an ever rising amount.

Due to war conditions, she recalled that 50 per cent of the children in Holland were afflicted with the disease and 70 per cent in Poland. Also, she pointed out that since Washington, D. C., had the highest percentage of tuberculosis cases of any other city, the residents should be made conscious of existing conditions.

Referring to the patients, she said that 79 per cent of them come from the East but that the Middle West ran a close second.

At present Mrs. Charnas is out to make the Nation Duarte conscious. Duarte is the name of the village in California where the Sanatorium is located. She explained that enlargements were needed for future emergencies.

"In general, people are overlooking all branches of national health agencies," averred Mrs. Charnas. "It is the responsibility of every man and woman to support them, for it means preserving the vitality of the Nation to win the war."

She's a Whiz

A whiz at raising money, she was called away from her war work—Red Cross, Canteen and USO—to help swell the coffers of the sanatorium. People don't refuse good-natured Rosa money. Laughingly she remarked, "Perhaps, they're afraid of me. Or prefer to give me a check rather than be pestered." Nevertheless, I strongly suspect its because she's such a likable person and so sincere in her efforts.

Her interest in the Los Angeles Sanatorium is inherited. It was a project of her parents and is a main interest with her two brothers—Harry and Jack. In fact, the Warner family has equipped fully a modern, up-to-the-minute clinic at headquarters. She keeps an eagle eye on the sanatorium to see that all goes well. Not only does she contribute money, but time. All of her work is voluntary. She even pays her own traveling expenses to work for the sanatorium. You can bet your last bottle of French perfume that Rosa never will stop working hard for other people. Also, that she will never lose her sense of adventure, or her delectable sense of humor.

I couldn't resist asking her if she had ever had a yen to be a movie star. To that parting question she replied: "Once, but I was cured early. I played a Cinderella-type role with George Jessel in one picture. It was in the old days. My husband called me to the theater to see the picture. When I walked in I saw myself on the screen. I looked so terrible that I turned around, walked out without waiting to see more. Never have I wanted to be a movie star again."

Mrs. Mitchell's guest speaker will be Associate Regent Nellie Bitter of Highlandtown Chapter of Baltimore. Mrs. Bitter has specialized in work of Moosehaven for the order and has been a frequent visitor to the home for the aged members which is located 14 miles from Jacksonville, Fla., on Route 17.

Mrs. Mitchell says that inhabitants are now in Moosehaven and each member is requested to bring or send for the Christmas gift shower two gifts suitable for the elderly men and women in the home.

Then members will be initiated in a class to honor the visiting guest speaker.

A buffet supper will be served after the program in the dining room of the club.

Mrs. Jane Davis will be in charge of ritual and Mrs. Helen Grocholsky, past regent of Duluth (Minn.) Chapter, No. 70, will be at the piano.

Miss Mary Jane Small, senior regent, remainds the members that donations for Christmas bags for Central Mission should reach her by December 19. These gifts are for a 10-year-old girl.

Mrs. Meyer Talks Tomorrow Before A. A. U. W. Group

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, who has recently returned from England, will discuss "Social Aspects of the British War Effort" at a club luncheon sponsored by the international relations committee of the American Association of University Women at 1:15 p. m. tomorrow at the clubhouse.

Tomorrow evening the Recent Graduates Group of the club will entertain at a Christmas Dance in honor of the officers of our Scandinavian Allies now on duty in Washington. The clubhouse will be decorated according to Danish and Norwegian Yuletide customs.

The Misses Clara Langmack, Martha Pearson, Oma Grombeck and Adaline Dale, members of the group who are of Scandinavian descent, will act as hostesses.

National Park Alumnae To Meet Monday

The National Park College Alumnae Chapter of Washington will hold its regular monthly meeting Monday at 12:30, at a luncheon in the Furman Studio of the Fairfax Hotel. Following the luncheon, Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell will give a book review. Mrs. William E. Springer is in charge of reservations.

DAR Yule Fete Set Tomorrow

Monticello Chapter, D. A. R., will hold its annual Christmas party for approved schools tomorrow, 2 o'clock, at the chapter house.

Gifts will be brought for children of the schools. Miss Luella Chase, State Chairman of Approved Schools, will be the special guest. Those attending will be Miss Lillian Chenowith, vice president general, and Mrs. Frank Hickey, chairman of calendar of events, D. A. R. The program will consist of songs, in costume, by Mrs. Guy Withers, vice chairman of approved schools; a group of songs by Mrs. Dorothy Schulte, accompanied by Mrs. Charles Haupt; and Christmas music. Mrs. Francis Shore, regent, will preside.

Faculty Women Hold Tea Today

Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin will present a program of song and legend on "Christmas the World Around" at a musicale and tea to be given for the members of the Faculty Women's Club of George Washington University today at 2:30 p. m. at her home, 2601 Thirtieth Street.

Gamma Phis Fete Grand President

Mrs. R. E. Fitzgerald, grand president of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority, arrived in town yesterday from her home in Milwaukee. No sooner had she parked her baggage than she was honored at a luncheon given by the officers of the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Gamma Phi Beta.

Takoma Club Plans Child Day School

Plans for a nursery school for the children of working mothers in the Takoma Park area are going forward under the chairmanship of Mrs. F. L. Lewton, who heads Takoma Park Women's Club's defense committee.

Mrs. Lewton reports that she and her committee were very pleased to hear of the course for voluntary child-care aides which is being given at the Silver Spring Baptist Church, 630 Wayne Avenue, by the University of Maryland. This course is part and parcel of the work of the Child Day Care Committee of the Maryland Council of Civilian Defense. The course is being offered at College Park on Tuesday mornings and on Tuesday afternoons from 1 to 3 at the Silver Spring location. Since a reservoir of trained personnel is a first requirement in setting up day-care centers, Mrs. Lewton says that the need for trainees cannot be overestimated

Some normal school or college training is a prerequisite for enrollment in the class although it is not essential that the applicant be a college graduate. Having begun on December 1, the course will meet on the following dates: December 15, January 5, and January 12. Upon completion of the course, the volunteers will put in 12 hours of observation and 50 hours of practice teaching. Every person enrolled must have a health certificate dated within the last three months. The teaching staff of the course is distinguished by many well-known educators, including Mrs. Rose Alshuler, chairman of the National Committee for the Care of Children; Dr. Arnold Gesell of Yale University and Mrs. Edward Park, State supervisor of child care.

Using this setup as a training place for workers, other subchairmen of Mrs. Lewton's committee are going ahead with other phases of the work. Mrs. A. P. Harrison is in charge of enrollment and she has heard of 30 working mothers in the Takoma Park area who have requested day care for their nursery-age children. Mrs. Harrison, with the help of Mrs. John B. Mertie, is sending out questionnaires to all schools in the region. Another committee under the leadership of Mrs. Frank Nichols and Mrs. Frederick G. Umhau is at work on problems of equipment and operation, while a third group comprised of Mrs. W. C. Youngman, Mrs. F. C. Lincoln, Mrs. Walter Harman and Mrs. Benjamin Abbott are planning for the staff.

Beans Offer Nutritious Goodness in a Variety Of Tempting Dishes

Jack of Beanstalk fame would no doubt be in a quandry now if he entertained the thought of trading his mother's cow for beans. The cow has become important in the situation created by wartime food demands. But the bean too is important and doing its patriotic duty by offering good nutrition at reasonable cost.

It certainly must have been the United States who originated the ditty about beans or peas porridge, hot, cold, and in the pot nine days old. This was a popular New England dish in its main components. And we introduced the baked bean to the world by way of tin cans.

But the day of opening a can of beans and with no effort making a delicious meal is over for the duration. We will have to take up bean cooking again. That will be no hardship for they can be cooked in a variety of ways with not a great deal of effort.

Food Stretcher

Beans can easily be a meat "stretcher." And wise cooks will recognize their merits—a rich source of protein, a source of iron and containing vitamins B1 and G. They are hearty and satisfying and combine well with meat, vegetables and cheese flavors for service in soups, salads, casserole dishes, baked loaves, croquettes and souffles.

You will find suggested ways of preparing beans in the following recipes. These may serve as a basis for other dishes that the cook can create herself:

Sausage and beans are a delicious main dish and a good way to extend the meat allowance. If you want additional color and flavor the sausage links may be browned before they are added to the beans. then the sausage drippings should be combined with the beans for added richness.

SAUSAGE AND BEANS

Pick over 2 cups dried beans and discard bad ones. Wash in cold water. Soak overnight (or 5 or 6 hours) in water to cover. Add 2 tablespoons salt and 1 medium onion, finely sliced. Cover and cook slowly until beans are tender but not broken. About 40 minutes before beans are done, slowly brown sausage links. Add the links and drippings to the beans and finish cooking. If desired browning may be omitted and the sausage links can be added to cook about an hour before the beans are done.

Serve a relish tray of radishes, green onions, or sliced onions, celery and carrot strips.

Savory hot bean dishes are right in tune with the spirit of outdoor sports and will satisfy large-size appetites. So, if you are having the gang in after the big Redskin game on Sunday or want to feed a group of persons who have put an edge on their appetites after a session at ice skating, consider chili. Chili is made in several versions but here are two, one using kidney beans, the other dried lima beans.

CHILI

Melt 1 tablespoon fat in deep pan. Add 1 pound ground beef and cook slowly until slightly browned. Add 1 medium chopped onion, 1 clove garlic, finely chopped (if desired), 1½ cups hot water, 2 teaspoons chili powder, 1 cup strained tomatoes, and salt to taste, and simmer until meat is tender. Just before serving, add 4 cups cooked kidney beans, and cook long enough to heat thoroughly. diced celery and green pepper may also be used if desired.

MEAT AND LIMA CHILI

Soak two-thirds cup dried lima beans in cold water 4 or 5 hours. Cook in same water 20 minutes, add ¼ teaspoon salt, and cook 10 to 20 minutes longer, or until beans are tender.

Heat 1 tablespoon fat, add 1 chopped onion, cook 5 minutes, add 1 pound ground beef, cook until brown, then add 2 cups tomato sauce or strained tomato and ½ teaspoon chili powder. Simmer 20 minutes.

Making one average-size purchase of meat serve for two days is patriotic economy. And one of the best ways I know of stretching the meat supply is by combining dried limas with bits of ham to make a savory loaf. Only ½ cup of ground ham is used in the following recipe yet it boasts abundant food value by virtue of the dried beans.

LIMA AND HAM LOAF

Soak one-third cup dried lima beans in cold water from 4 to 5 hours. Cook in same water 20 minutes, add ½ teaspoon salt and cook 10 to 20 minutes longer, or until beans are tender. Rub limas through a coarse strainer. Add ½ cup ground ham, ¼ cup chili sauce or catsup, 2 beaten eggs, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1 cup cracker crubs and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Shape into a loaf, place in a buttered pan in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) and bake for 30 minutes, basting occasionally with the melted butter. Serve with brown gravy.

Stretching meat is becoming a useful art. A main dish like pictured here, made of dried beans and sausages, gives generously of good nutrition, makes a little meat go a long way and aids the budget

A Purse-String Menu Will Be Aided by Cheese Rings

The purse string foods are the ones that are ringing the bells today. Making pastry "dresses" for dishes is one way to be thrifty and serve attractive, appetizing food at the same time.

The following menu is one that comes in the purse string category. It doesn't include a meat dish, but there's cheese to do its bit. And besides it is all so good that meat will not be missed —at least not much.

Purse String Menu

Cheese Rings with Creamed Peas
Harvard Beets Hot Biscuits
Apple, Celery and Nut Salad

Honey Nut Cookies
Beverage

CHEESE RINGS WITH PEAS

Sift together 2 cups sifted enriched flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Cut or rub in 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening. Add 2/3 to ¾ cup milk, enough to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead for ½ minute. Roll dough out into a long rectangle 8 inches wide and ⅛ inch thick. Cut in halves lengthwise. Spread each portion with grated cheese, using ¾ cup.

Roll jelly-roll fashion, sealing edges well. Cut rolls into 8-inch pieces and form into rings on baking sheet. Pinch ends together. With scissors cut through rings almost to center, in slices about 1 inch thick. Turn each slice slightly on its side. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees, for 10 to 12 minutes. Fill centers of rings with creamed peas. If self-rising flour is used omit baking powder and salt. Yield: six servings.

HONEY NUT COOKIES

Cream ½ cup shortening with ¼ cup brown sugar. Add ¾ cup honey gradually. Add 2 unbeaten eggs, one at a time, beating until thoroughly blended. Sift 2 cups enriched sifted flour with ½ teaspoon salt and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Add to the creamed mixture alternately with 2 tablespoons milk. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla or ½ teaspoon lemon extract or ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind. Add 1 cup chopped nuts. Mix well. Drop by teaspoonsful on greased baking sheet two inches apart. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 15 to 20 minutes. Yield: 75 small cookies.

Meat Pies

Victory kitchens are cooperating with the "Share-the-Meat" campaign by stretching the flavor of meat with enriched bread and enriched flour. Meat and enriched bread for meat loaves, meat and enriched flour to make fluffy golden-crusted biscuit-topped meat pies — these are tasty combinations that make the most of the delicious meat flavors.

Cauliflower Topping

Sour cream with a little lemon juice, chopped parsley, salt and paprika added, makes a fine top coating for boiled cauliflower just as it goes to the table. Heat the sauce mixture and serve at once. Crumbled bacon (cooked) is also very good sprinkled over hot cauliflower.

Baked Squash

Spread halves of acorn or Des Moines squash with equal portions of melted butter and corn sirip and bake until squash is soft. Sprinkle with salt and paprika and serve. Squash requires long, moderate cooking—about 2 hours.

No Grease

Pie pans need not be greased since the shortening in pastry prevents sticking.

Simple Filling

The preschool-age youngster likes his sandwiches made from enriched bread which has been cut paper thin and in small sections. His chubby, little hands cannot grasp the larger ones adults are accustomed to. Sandwich fillings for this age group are best kept simple and nutritious. Finely chopped apple, parsley or grated carrot are excellent.

The Day After

That "day after" turkey can come to the table as a baked turkey sandwich. Place a layer of drop biscuit dough in the bottom of an eight-inch layer pan. On it spread a layer of turkey hash. Add another layer of biscuit dough. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) 45 minutes. Cut and serve with plenty of hot turkey gravy and scarlet cranberry sauce.

Army Splits PianistRuzicka And Dougherty

By Chandler P. Brossard
Post Staff Writer

From Stravinsky to the blues—that is the descent, or rather progress, of Celius Dougherty and Vincenz Ruzicka, famed piano team who will cease entering in that capacity after tonight.

For Ruzicka is laying aside the well thumbed sheets of classical music and the applause-resounding concert halls in exchange for the blare of the 5 a. m. bugle and the khaki finery of the United States Army. Induction is set for Monday.

Final appearance of the team will be in the Library of Congress at 8:30 tonight, with the program to include anything—the inventions of modern composers and classicists—save the musical selections usually associated with marching and drilling.

First Change in 20 Years

Yesterday, interviewed in the quiet drawing room of the Arts Club, 1821 H Street Northwest, the two exhibited no profuse regret at the idea of the change, the first since they have been associated professionally, and otherwise, in about 20 years.

"We hope to continue our playing together even though I go into the Army," Ruzicka, whose partner has yet to receive his final notice of induction. "Perhaps the Army will allow us to give concerts together."

Both natives of Minnesota, Ruzicka and Dougherty met when they were students at the Juilliard Foundation in New York in 1925. Joseph Levin taught the mysteries of the piano to both at the same time. Dougherty specialized in composition.

Debut In 1938

Since graduation from the foundation they have been as one. They made their debut in 1938 with the world premiere presentation of Stravinsky's double concerto. This country, its little jerk-water towns and its skyscraper-lined cities, has been their geographical province.

They have great hopes for their future work and are quite encouraged by the compositions of modern composers for their type of playing. Two-piano literature, they said, has been written by the elite of the past and present but has been disregarded, comparatively. Stimulation of interest in it has been in their repertory for many years.

Ruzicka is a Sunday watercolorist in his leisure moments, while Dougherty works on pieces they might play together.

Locating two perfectly tuned pianos was their work yesterday.

Insurance of Tar From Boys' Town To Buy Memorial

Omaha, Dec. 10 (AP).—A former citizen of Boys' Town who fell in battle at Bataan has made an initial contribution for a war memorial planned at the noted home for boys in honor of its soldier dead.

Msgr. E. J. Flanagan, founder of the home, disclosed today that Bobby Paradise, former Boys' Town citizen killed at Bataan, made the home beneficiary in a $10,000 Sailors' insurance policy.

"Bobby's insurance money will be saved to build a monument to our boys who fall in fighting that the American way of life may be preserved," said Father Flanagan.

$42,100 Fines Against 26 End Lottery Ring Trial

By the Associated Press

Utica, N. Y., Dec. 10.—Government prosecution of a 13-State lottery ring ended today with the fining of six men, raising to $42,100 the amount assessed 26 of the 31 defendants who pleaded guilty to conspiracy charges in connection with the ring's operations.

Six defendants, who like the rest pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy to transport lottery tickets in interstate commerce, were fined $20,800. Louis Cohen, Miami Beach, Fla., was fined $10,000. Three of his brothers have also been fined.

Judge Stephen W. Brennan sentenced five men to the custody of the United States marshal for 24 hours.

Charges against 19 others indicted on similar charges, were dismissed shortly after the trial got under way last week. Initial prosecution of the gambling ring developed last March with more than 100 arrests in three score cities by FBI agents.

Frank Cohen, Albany, was fined $10,000. He was described as "one of the ringleaders" of the ring, which Federal officials estimated had a 10 million dollar annual revenue.

Maxwell P. Kyser, Fort Plain, was fined $500; $100 fines were handed out to John D. Sherman, Rutland, Vt.; Frank C. Whitehouse, Burlington, Vt., and Joseph E. McTague, Kingston.

Held in custody are Matt Fennerty, Stamford, Conn.; Edward A. Hawley, Fred Johnson and James C. Sands, Binghamton, and Fred D. Jones, Corning.

The ring, Federal officials said, had operated since 1924 in New England, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and as far South as North Carolina, selling 25 and 50 cent chances on United States Treasury figures.

National Symphony Will Return Today

In the face of cancellations of tours by several of the principal symphony orchestras in the Nation, Washington's National Symphony Orchestra made news last night by completing a successful tour of cities in New York State and New England with a concert in Norwich, Conn. The orchestra party will return home today, dividing into four groups to avoid congestion on the busy New York to Washington train run.

The orchestra plays in Constitution Hall on Sunday, with its concertmaster, Millard Taylor, as soloist.

Filipino Officer Tells Of Hoaxing Japs

Captain of Cargo Ship Used Bamboo 'Guns' to Keep Foe's Planes at High Altitude

A Filipino ship captain, now an officer of the United States Coast Guard and living here, yesterday told how a fake antiaircraft gun rigged up on his merchant ship brought his vessel through three Japanese air attacks last winter.

Lieut. Comdr. Carmelo L. Manzano, United States Coast Guard Reserve, and formerly a major in the Philippine Army, was in command of a 5000-ton Philippine merchantman when the war broke out. It was taken over by the United States Navy and in February was en route from Java to New Guinea with supplies, alone and unarmed.

"We rigged up a fake gun on the deck, made out of bamboo, painted black and covered with a tarpaulin, hoping it would scare the Japs away," he said." Three times we were bombed by single planes, but each time we sighted one we'd rush our men to the imitation gun, tear off the tarpaulin and act as if we had the real thing.

Hoax Worked for Awhile

"It worked, too, for it fooled the Japs enough to keep them at high altitudes beyond our 'range.' They let their bombs go at us but they were too high for accuracy."

Manzano's ship, with its bamboo gun, however, finally was lost in a "fight" with 17 Jap bombers.

Just before this attack, they picked up the crew of a Catalina bomber which had been shot down by a Jap Zero. The American airmen had only been aboard two hours when the last assault came. Manzano, who is living at 1617 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, awaiting a sea assignment, told about this action.

"Our imitation gun didn't do us much good this time, so we had to sit there and take it—bombs and torpedoes," he said. "As one bomb struck the superstructure, I was hurled from the ship into the water. I was knocked unconscious as soon as she hit but had on my life-jacket and came to floating on the sea, almost an hour later.

"Within 10 minutes I was picked up by one of our lifeboats, but it wasn't as comfortable in the boat as in the water. Planes were machine-gunning all the men and the boats offered better targets. We lost three men from our crew and one of the members of the Catalina."

The crew made shore and 12 of the group that were not wounded set out to seek help. They lived for 12 days on grass and stagnant water, Manzano said, until some natives found them and took them to a Catholic mission on the island. The injured members lived on crackers and water from the lifeboats until rescued by a party from the mission.

The crew was taken to Australia and every uninjured man immediately joined the Australian army. All of the others followed suit as soon as they were out of the hospital, except Manzano.

"Now we are all back in war," he declares. "And if we gave them such a run with an imitation gun, imagine what we can do to them with some real ones."

U. S. Promises To Help Albania Regain Freedom

By the United Press

The United States, in a further bid to undermine Italy's tottering war effort, promised last night that at the proper time it will provide military assistance to Albania's effort to free herself from Italian conquest.

The pledge was made through Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who only 10 days ago called upon Albanians to "shoot on sight" every Italian soldier in that little Adriatic nation.

His statement was inspired by complaints from friends of Albania that the United States, while favoring freedom for countries overrun by Nazi and Fascist armies, never had made its position specific regarding Albania. It said that "the effort of the various guerilla bands operating against the common enemy in Albania is admired and appreciated. The Government and the people of the United States look forward to the day when effective military assistance can be given those brave men to drive the invader from their home."

Drive to Salvage Worn Spark Plugs Starts Next Week

A Nation-wide campaign to salvage worn spark plugs will start next week under the sponsorship of a large spark plug manufacturer and locally with the cooperation of the District Salvage Committee.

Service stations and automotive parts dealers have been asked to save and break down all discarded plugs. When sufficient quantities have been gathered, these will be collected by wholesale distributers and turned over to local salvage committees. Money from the sale to junk dealers will be given to local war agencies and charities.

A test drive conducted in the San Francisco area yielded 882 pounds of steel, 39 pounds of copper, 25 pounds of nickel-alloy and 54 pounds of brass, all strategic metals.

The drive ties in directly with the recent WPB order requiring all motorists to turn in worn-out spark plugs when purchasing new ones.

Morgenthau, Administration Officials Discuss New Tax Legislation and Inflation Controls

Treasury officials disclosed yesterday that key administration officers met with Secretary Morgenthau Wednesday night and discussed plans for new tax legislation and strengthening and extending inflation controls.

The conference held in the Treasury brought together officials concerned with war financing, economic stabilization, price control and rationing. The conferees included Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board; Leon Henderson, price administrator; Ben Cohen, counsel of the Economic Stabilization Board; Guy T. Helvering, Internal Revenue commissioner, Harold Smith, director of the Budget; Daniel W. Bell, Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Assistant Treasury Secretaries John L. Sullivan and Herbert Gaston.

While no decisions were reached, officials said the Treasury's new tax proposals were discussed along with the progress of war bond sales, war expenditures and the general economic situation.

Treasury officials have indicated that they have under consideration an enlarged tax program which would act as a brake on inflation Randolph Paul, the Treasury's general counsel, declared in a speech in New York this week that a program to prevent consumers from spending an additional $15,000,000,000 next year would have to be devised and indicated this program might include compulsory savings in addition to increased taxes.

Secretary Morgenthau had no comment to make on the conference. He recently announced that the Treasury was in touch with Government officials "interested in controlling inflation," but said he would have no specific tax proposals to submit until after the President presents his budget message to Congress.

Plane Led U-Boats to Prey

By the Associated Press

An East Coast Port, Dec. 10.—Close liaison between German submarines and a German plane patrolling in the South Atlantic was reported here for the first time by survivors from a Greek vessel sunk early in November off the South American coast.

Two submarines attacked the ship in the dark of early evening, pouring hundreds of shells into the medium-sized merchantman and killing 16 persons, including five passengers and two gunners.

British survivors among the 32 of miscellaneous nationalities brought to land expressed the opinion that the submarines tried to kill every person aboard, to prevent reports of the incident being made.

"As we pulled away in our lifeboats' said one British army gunner, "they kept shelling the ship, but they turned the machineguns on us. The sea was very rough and the bullets passed over our heads."

This anonymous gunner said they were spotted 24 hours before the attack by a four-engined patrol plane that he and other Britishers aboard identified as a Focke-Wulf.

Vichy, French Japs Accused Of Raising Army in Indo-China

Chungking, Dec. 10 (AP).—A Chinese military spokesman charged today that Japan was building a native army of 150,000 men in French Indo-China with the cooperation of the Vichy French Governor General, Rear Admiral Jean Decoux.

Trained and commanded by Japanese officers, the Indo-China native force might be employed by the enemy in a campaign against China's vital "back door" province, Yunnan, the spokesman indicated.

He said Admiral Decoux, yielding to Japanese pressure, agreed to authorize the conscription of 150,000 natives, and the Japanese were carrying out the project. The French have recruited the Annamites of northern Indo-China for their own forces for many years and found them capable soldiers.

The spokesman admitted that China was unable to launch any effectiv egrand-scale counteroffensive against the Japanese, because of small, insufficient supplies of planes, heavy guns and tanks.

He stressed the importance of reopening the Burma Road, whose southern terminus is in Japanese hands, but added, "local small-scale offensives can always be started by our forces with their available stocks."

Reports from the Chinese interior, he said, were that between 20,000 and 30,000 Japanese troops with heavy armament had arrived at Chinkiang, near Nanking, "but just where they will be employed is difficult to say." Another 1,000 troop reinforcements were reported to have reached the Yangtze port, Shasi, in Hupeh Province, for a third Japanese attempt to take Hohsueh, 20 miles down river.

Nancy Hoyt Curtis Committed to Hospital

Nancy Hoyt Curtis, 40, Washington socialite, was adjudged of unsound mind by a District Court jury yesterday and ordered committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Mrs. Curtis was admitted to Gallinger Hospital for observation November 21 after she was found wandering in the street "in a highly nervous state."

WPB Decree Further Cuts Canned Foods

The War Production Board yesterday prohibited the use of steel and tin next year in the canning of many important food products for civilian consumption.

As a result of the order, officials said, canners must develop substitutes or many popular food products will disappear from grocers' shelves.

No tinplate, terneplate or black pipe may be used for packing for civilian consumption of such common household items as vegetable juice mixtures, spreads, cranberries, orange and grapefruit segments combined, California freestone peaches, prunes, fruits for salad, carrots and peas, sauerkraut and baking powder. Tin and steel, however, may be used in packing these products for Government purposes.

Other products for which metal cans can not be used except for military orders include dewberries, elderberries, gooseberries, red raspberries, strawberries, okra, succotash, mixture of vegetables, lime and lemon juice, fruit nectars, white asparagus, chili, meatloaf, Vienna sausage, lard, sweet syrups, fresh clams, oysters, scallops, crabmeat and shrimp (all packed for refrigerated shipment), and fruit and vegetable juices.

Also eliminated for civilian use was critical metals for packing apples, applesauce, apricots, powdered skim milk, carrots, pumpkin and squash, tomato catsup, figs, orange juice, boned chicken and boned turkey and many other items.

Can packs of many other products for civilian use have been reduced sharply under the 1942 pack.

Canned soups were restricted to 50 per cent, ripe olives to 25 per cent, spinach and green leafy vegetables to 80 per cent, evaporated milk to 90 per cent if packed in 14½-ounce cans, and 80 per cent if packed in 6-ounce cans.

Baby food can be packed in cans in an amount equal to the 1942 pack. One exception to the general curtailment was tomato paste, tomato pulp or pureee and tomato sauce, which may equal 125 per cent of the 1942 pack.

All restrictions were lifted on packing in cans of pineapple, pineapple juice, freestone peaches (except California), soft clams, hard clams, oysters, shrimp and mussels.

Officials said an order probably would be issued in the near future, making it possible to package many of the products in glass containers.

Bond Issues Meet Hard Sledding In 205 Cities

By the Associated Press

Local bond issue proposals fared badly at the hands of war-conscious voters this year.

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that a survey of municipal elections in 205 cities showed that bond issue proposals totaling $15,800,000 were rejected by the voters while those amounting to only seven million dollars were approved.

Nearly two million dollars of those approved were for airport developments at Burlington, Cedar Rapids, Mason City and Waterloo, Iowa; Amarillo, Tex.; Fargo, N. Dak., Oklahoma City and Springfield, Mo.

In all, 36 bond issues amounting to $22,800,000 were voted on in 23 cities. Bond issues fared better in the South than in other areas, the bureau said, Southern voters approving $5,200,000 out of $5,400,000 bond proposals submitted.

Voter interest in municipal proposals such as bond issues, charter amendments and tax levies, the bureau said, was "very low." An average of only 33 per cent of the registered voters balloted on the proposals.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

BETTY BRYANT, chanteuse with an impressive society following, will open in the Shoreham cocktail lounge on Monday afternoon. She'll appear in the lounge every afternoon betwen 4:30 and 6:30, also sing for the supper show in the Blue Room. Betty comes direct from the Cotillion Room of New York's Pierre. This is her second Washington appearance in recent months—last season she had a lengthy engagement in the Mayflower Lounge. Concert Pianist Arden Clar will appear in conjunction with Betty at the afternoon cocktail hour.

THE FATES OF MEN figure importantly in the work of Leo, Mayfair's horoscope caster. For a heavy percentage of his clients are men, and include diplomats, Army and Navy officers of high rank and prominent businessmen. They are more interested in Leo's prognostications on the war, world affairs and commerce than in their own personal affairs. Though, of course, they don't mind getting an advance lowdown on when they'll get married. Or unmarried.

HIRSCH AND HIMBER MEMORIES. Godfrey Hirsch, vibraphonist of the brilliant Dave Roberts Trio at the Neptune Room, is an old friend and associate of Maestro Dick Himber, whose music is Del Rio's current thrill. In fact, he managed the Himber band for four years. From him we learned that Dick's stunts in magic are no mere hobby—he invents, manufactures and markets tricks in magic for the profession.

Admiral Byrd, leading citizen of the South Pole and now silver-haired as Paul McNutt, dropped into Cafe Caprice the other eve, kept the Miles Hallett Band busy playing Pan-American rhythm.

THE STABLES, at Riverside Drive and E Street Northwest, will open tomorrow afternoon at 4 p. m. under the aegis of Jean Richards, one of the cleverest of Washington's restaurant women. There'll be songs by Angie Rodante of the indigo contralto, and baritone Robert Murray, who sung in the stage version of "Green Pastures" and at Radio City Music Hall. Also there'll be a band for dancing and traditional Southern cookery.

Vocalist Ray Robbins of Chuck Foster's Band in the Victory Room, was "discovered" by Susan Hayward, noted actress . . . Maestros Bill Strickland of the Lotus and George Stein of River Bend, have been at their spots so long that they merely don't go with the leases. They're parts of the property.

The Louisiana will inaugurate nightly floor shows on Tuesday, December 15. The new revues promise to be distinctly on the smart side, will be headed and produced by Warren B. Hewitt who was featured in "Artists and Models" and "Fifty Million Frenchmen."

EILEEN GEORGE, who made thousands of friends during the three years she sang in the Anchor Room, has just toddled off to the hospital for a serious operation. She'll be surrounded by a big cloud of good wishes.

BARBARA GRAY, sprightly blonde mistress of ceremonies (she sings, too), heads the weekend floor revue at Kavakos Grill. There'll also be the dancing Craters who have appeared at many prominent Washington spots, and Bob Stanley & Co. a tricky combo of trained dogs and high wire stunts.

DO NOT MISS—POSITIVELY.

The hot canapes are of a deliciousness . . . The roly-poly and screwball carryings-on of Owen and Parker at Paul Young's . . . The crisp and red hot popovers served in the Rose Room of the Burlington. Or the savory rum buns and corn sticks for that matter . . . The pleasure of a serene and delightful dinner at the Broadmoor while Larry Hendrick plays your favorite songs on the electric organ.

Windsors Return For a Weekend At Palm Beach . .

Miami, Fla., Dec. 10 (AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor arrived here today for an unannounced visit to the United States, and planned to go immediately to Palm Beach, Fla., for the week-end.

They were accompanied by Herbert Pulitzer, R. A. F. flying officer now stationed in Nassau, at whose Palm Beach home they will be guests until next Tuesday.

"I have been working pretty hard and came for a little rest," explained the duke, who is Governor of the Bahamas. "The duchess wanted to shop for some Christmas items for the soldiers' canteen at Nassau."

Windsor will come here Tuesday for a conference with Admiral James L. Kauffman, commandant of this naval district, about defense matters.

Ethiopia to Get Lend-Lease Aid

Ethiopia, newest member of the United Nations, yesterday was qualified for lend-lease aid by order of President Roosevelt.

The White House made public a letter from the President to Lend-Lease Administrator E. R. Stettinius, jr., to that effect.

The African kingdom recently was recognized as an official member of the United Nations, the first to join the Allies after being reconquered from Axis occupation. Italian troops were driven out of Ethiopia by the British and Emperor Haile Selassie restored to the throne.

How George Sneezed Himself Into a Better Room

George was a good fellow. At a party he could tell stories with the best of them. But the other night people stayed away from George in droves.

Why?

Well, you see, George was punctuating every sentence with "Ackerchool" He certainly had a bad head cold.

"That (censored) drafty room I live in is the cause of it all," he complained to his host.

"Why don't you move?" replied the friend.

"That's simple to answer—Ackerchool" he sneered and sneezed. "I can't find a decent place to move into."

"I bet you haven't tried using the Post Want Ads. They bring quick results. AND the Post readers are the people who have the kind of rooms you're looking for."

George didn't lose any time in taking his host's advice. Now he lives in a cheerful, comfortable room and—rid of his sneezing—he is as popular as ever again.

If you are looking for a room try the Post Want Ads for quicker results. Call NA. 4200.

Lack of Pumps To Delay Flow Of Oil to East

By Charles Molony
Associated Press Staff Writer

The 35-million-dollar Texas-to-Illinois pipe line, for which 137,000 tons of precious steel were finally allocated so that 300,000 barrels of oil could be moved 550 miles closer to the oil-starved East each day, probably will lie useless for more than a month after its completion next week.

This was disclosed yesterday by Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes, who reported that inability to get pumping equipment made it unlikely that the urgently needed oil could start flowing through the line before February 1 although his schedule called for a start next Tuesday.

Manufacturing Delay

Ickes told a press conference there had been a delay in manufacturing the equipment because "something went wrong in the finishing" at the Bethlehem steel mills.

The petroleum administrator also said he would soon call railroad executives to a meeting to "find out" why tank car shipments of oil to the East were continuing to decline and what could be done to reverse the trend.

He said he told President John J. Pelley of the Association of Railroads yesterday that "the railroads must do a damn sight better than they've been doing." He also instructed oil industry leaders that they must step up the consolidation of terminal facilities and speed the loading and unloading of tank cars to reduce the loss of running time by oil trains.

Ickes' demand that the railroads do a better job was tempered by an admission that he had long known railroad shipments of oil would reach a peak in the fall and had expected a falling off at this season.

Car Movement Off

He reported that tank car movements, in an almost steady decline from the peak daily average of 856,710 barrels of oil for the week ended September 19, had fallen to a daily average of 767,058 barrels for the week ended December 5, a drop of 11,794 barrels from the previous week's average.

Ickes said he had asked War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson to return to the Eastern Oil Service the 2600 tank cars recently diverted to transporting vegetable oil, grapefruit juice, alcohol, wine and other commodities.

Both Ickes and Pelley have said recently that it was doubtful that the 69,000 hard-used tank cars now transporting oil to the East could maintain a daily average delivery of more than 800,000 barrels, although they represent more than 60 per cent of the Nation's tank car pool.

OPA Official Urges End to Antismoke Law

Whitney Leary, District OPA director, asked Congress yesterday to suspend Washington's anti-smoke laws for the duration because so many businessmen and homeowners here have reinstalled coal-burning heating plants at Uncle Sam's request.

The recommendation was made in a letter to Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, in which Leary pointed out that the Government was seeking to encourage the conversion away from oil and gas furnaces—which give off less soot and smoke but which eat up these now precious fuels.

The smoke control statutes have been in force here for more than 10 years. Because of the laws, many residents had installed oil and gas plants in pre-war times.

Lieut. Demorest Dies In Arctic Outpost

Cincinnati, Dec. 10 (AP).—Death, in a far outpost of the Arctic, has ended the career of First Lieut. Max Harrison Demorest, 32, one of the Nation's outstanding authorities on glaciers.

This was disclosed today by his widow, Mrs. Rebecca Humphreys Demorest, 31, who herself played a major role in the research which brought him fame. Mrs. Demorest said she received details of her husband's death from the War Department but that they could not be publicly told.

Chaplain Corps Led by Admiral Asked in Navy

Navy chaplains will have added prestige if two bills just introduced in the House and Senate are passed.

The bills authorize a chaplains' corps in the Navy and give the chief of Navy chaplains the temporary rank of rear admiral. The legislation was introduced in the House by Representative Charles A. Plumley (Republican) of Vermont, a Protestant, and in the Senate by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts, a Catholic.

While the proposed bill does not go as far as had been hoped by churchmen, who have been agitating for creation of a separate Navy chaplaincy bureau, it is a much-needed step in the right direction, according to Dr. S. Arthur Devan, director of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains.

It gives a definite recognition to the place religious ministration should have in the lives of Navy men," said Dr. Devan. "At present the Navy chaplaincy is a minor function of the Navy Bureau of Personnel, much as in pre-World War I days the Army chaplains were tucked away in the Adjutant General's Department.

"The head of the chaplains' division functions merely by administrative order within the Navy, not by law. Th new measure names him by law as chief of chaplains.

Fraternity Honors Manch and Macia, Doolittle Fliers

Two Army lieutenants who flew with General Doolittle in the bombing raid of Tokyo and who are now serving in theaters of war, were awarded the Kappa Sigma Fraternity's men-of-the-year honors last night at the Founder's Day banquet of the organization held in the Mayflower Hotel.

They are Lieuts. John Manch of Hampden Sydney, Va., and J. H. Macia of Tucson, Ariz.

Lowell Thomas, news commentator, made the presentation to Drew Pearson, author of "Washington Merry-Go-Round," receiving for the absent men. Thomas presented the citations after his regular broadcast.

Among those who attended the affair were Senator Warren M. Austin (Republican) of Vermont, Representatives Clarence Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, Luther Johnson (Democrat) and Estes Kefauver (Democrat) of Texas.

U. S. Blasting Ever Nearer Big Jap Bases

By Walter B. Clausen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 10.—Major strongholds in Japan's chain of Pacific islands—the outposts of her military empire—may soon face their first challenge.

As the slow but relentless development of the American offensive in the southwest Pacific moves on, Japan's powerful island bases come near to the blasting blows of the American advance.

Ponape, in the eastern Caroline Islands, is one of these vital possessions. It is one of the largest settlements. It ranks almost in importance with Truk, central powerhouse in Japan's Pacific lifeline, 460 miles to the west, in the middle of the Carolines, and with Palau, some 1200 miles further west. Japan considers Palau its main Pacific rampart for control of the Philippines, 600 miles distant.

Vast Harbors Available

Ponape and Palau are alike in having vast harbors to shelter battle fleets, ringed with high mountains, studded with fortifications, stored with tremendous supplies of war materials and protected by highly developed airdromes.

They differ from the low-lying Atolls, or the Coral Island type, such as the Marshalls, at the eastern end of the Japanese mandated line of fortifications. The Marshalls were the scene of one of the effective early American raids of the war when Admiral Halsey led his task force in devastating blows against Wotje and Jaluit. The Marshalls, however, are just the outpost link.

Ponape, some 800 miles west of the Marshalls, is one of the three main fleet bases of the Japanese in these islands. Most of the naval and air power, sent by Japan into the Solomons, probably came from Ponape and Truk.

Ponape's Importance

It may be that Ponape is the headquarters, or at least an alternate headquarters of Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, Japanese commander in chief in the Pacific, with Truk being a main base.

When the American forces strike at either Ponape, Truk or Palau, then the real offensive against Japan can truly be said to be under way.

Another powerful Japanese base is at Kusalu, or Ualan Island, which is 362 miles southeast of Ponape, and not only has a good harbor protected by high mountains, but has a well developed airdrome.

NIPPON'S MILITARY OUTPOSTS—Map locates Japan and her mandated Pacific island military outposts which may soon face their first challenge by America's growing offensive

Surgeon General's Consultants Open Conference

Seven distinguished medical men, members of the Board of Honorary Consultants to the Surgeon General of the Navy, yesterday opened discussions at the bureau on subjects ranging from medical officer procurement to brain surgery.

Members of the board present were Dr. Donald Church Balfour, director, Mayo Foundation, Rochester, Minn.; Dr. Walter E. Dandy, professor of neurosurgery, Johns Hopkins Medical School; Dr. Frank H. Lahey, of Boston, head of the Procurement and Assignment Service and former president of the American Medical Association; Dr. Oswald L. Lowsley, of New York, and Dr. Willis B. Morse of Salem, Oreg., prominent surgeons; Dr. Wilbur A. Sawyer, of New York, director, international health division, Rockefeller Foundation, and Dr. Meyer Wiener of St. Louis, professor of clinical ophthalmology, Washington University of Medicine.

Dr. George W. Crile, director of the Cleveland Clinic Foundation, also a board member, was absent because of illness.

Gen. Dupont Made Provisional Ruler Of French Colony

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), Dec. 10 (AP).—The appointment of Brigadier General Dupont as provisional governor of French Somaliland was announced in a Vichy dispatch today.

(The broadcast said French Somaliland, "together with Indo-China, is the only colony now left to France." Actually French Indo-China is in Japanese hands.)

Governor Nouailhetas, who is now in Vichy, "cannot return to his (Somaliland) post owing to the interruption of communications and will, therefore, be replaced for the time being by General Dupont, who commands the garrison of the colony," it was said.

French Explosion Kills 8, Injures 14

London, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Eight persons were killed and 14 critically injured in an explosion last night at a large chemical factory at Fontaine-Sur-Rhone, France, and Nazi occupation authorities, suspecting sabotage, have opened an official inquiry, dispatches from Spain reported today.

The London Evening Standard reported that German authorities at Amiens, northern France, sentenced 24 persons to a total of 27 years' hard labor for "subversive activity."

Two Army Cadets Die in Air Crash

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 10 (AP).—Two Army fliers from George Field, Lawrenceville, Ind., were killed today when their craft crashed in the back yard of a Terre Haute residence after grazing a garage.

They were identified by Col. Edwin B. Bobzien, commanding officer of George Field, as:

Air Cadet Milo G. Stevens, 26, of Hale Eddy, N. Y. Stevens' wife lives at Vincennes, Ind.

Air Cadet William Sellers, 26, Ponchatoula, La.

Carnera Snatches Snake Off Actress

Madrid, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—A dispatch from Rome revealed today that Primo Carnera, the Ambling Alp who once was world heavyweight champion, is still good in a clinch.

It said that Carnera, now a movie actor, saved an actress during the filming of a picture involving a snake. The reptile wrapped itself around the actress and was strangling her when Carnera leaped to the rescue and freed her.

Gloria Di Cicco's Furniture Taken by Sheriff to Settle Bills

By the Associated Press

Manhattan, Kans., Dec. 10.—Sheriff C. W. Barnes said today he had attached about $7800 worth of furniture owned by Gloria Vanderbilt di Cicco and her husband to settle unpaid bills incurred when Di Cicco was stationed at Fort Riley.

The furniture will be sold December 21, Barnes stated.

"The Di Ciccos left here about three or four weeks ago," the sheriff added, "and ever since then the people who were left holding the sack have been coming in with these attachments, and there probably will be more."

He didn't know the total of the claims, but said they were for ordinary household expenses.

"They left in one of their two cars, and we nabbed the other one for four or five liens against it. But one of them came back a week later and cleared the car and took it away. Then these other bills started coming in."

The wealthy heiress and her husband rented a house for their stay here.

"It sure surprised everybody," Barnes said. "I just can't understand it. Theey are supposed to have so much money, and yet they would leave a mess like this. Maybe it's just lack of business experience."

The sheriff described the Di Ciccos as average law-abiding citizens, except that the soldier was prone to speeding.

"I stopped him a couple of times to warn him," said Barnes.

No Clock No Excuse

Tulsa, Okla. (AP).—The day after word got around that there was a local shortage of alarm clocks, five "Wake-em-up" bureaus advertised that they were ready, for a small fee, to awaken anyone at any hour of the day or night.

Spiced Drinks To Supplant Yuletide Nogs

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 10.—Holiday spirits as ladled out by sociable friends demand a more rugged taste this season.

Egg nog lapper-uppers may have to drool over the fluffy grog in retrospect. Certainly devotees of the thick-enough-to-spoon cult will be a lost battalion.

For unless you have your own cow, and know where you can raid a chicken coop, and have saved by a quantity of powered sugar—that cup will be more nog that fluff.

Hot Spiced Wines

The Gourmet Society predicts a renewed era of hot spiced wines and punches.

"It's a challenge to ingenuity to try all sorts of experiments and develop new things," a society official said. "People won't follow tradition but will follow what is available."

Half the point of the holiday bowl, he declared, was the ceremony of the mixing. In this war year, use more ceremony and less mixture.

Wartime Hors d'Oeuvres

For accompanying nibbles, the gourmets suggest cakes and cookies of the almost butterless, sugarless variety. They can be cut in fancy shapes and dolled up with confectioners' decorative pellets.

The wine and food society displayed at its Christmas tasting these delicacies as complements to the proper holiday beverage: A pudding with suet base, bursting with citron, raisins and currants and reeking with brandy; a rich chocolate cake sandwiching thick cream between its layers and topped by more cream and fudge icing, and a butter cake with cocoanut thatch.

Luscious, if you can get it.

First Medals For Production Awarded to Six

First medals for the production soldiers of the United States were presented yesterday by President Roosevelt at a White House ceremony.

Six workers received medals and "citations of individual production merit," and four others received certificates of merit for giving their employers valuable suggestions which had improved the war output.

Joseph H. Kautsky, Indianapolis, Ind., an employe of the Link Belt Co., was cited for four technical suggestions: a grinding wheel adaptor; new use of a precision screw adjustment; simplification of the of grinding spindle wheel adaptors, and a new method of testing concentricity of internally ground parts.

Tank Improvement

Clinton R. Hanna, East Pittsburgh, Pa., research department manager for Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., was cited for suggesting a method of increasing the effectiveness of Army tanks.

Edwin Curtis Tracy, Oaklyn, N. J., field engineer for R. C. A. Manufacturing Co., was cited for recommending a new testing device for checking standard flight instruments without removing them from the planes.

Other Awards

Madison E. Butler, Rochester, N. Y., Stromberg-Carlson war worked was cited for a suggestion which cut the testing time of a vital communications instrument. James E. Merrill, Akron, Ohio, research chemist at Goodyear Tire & Rubber co., for suggestion in the development of bullet-seal airplane fuel tanks; and Walter P. Hill, Detroit, Mich. of the Calumet & Hecla Consolidated Copper Co., for work on an ammunition primer also were cited.

Awarded "individual production merit" certificates were George Smolarek, Detroit, Daniel W. Mallett, Rockford, Ill.; Herbert R. James, McKeesport, Pa., machinist, Christy Park Works, National Tube Co., and Stanley Crawford, Camden, N. J. of the R. C. A. Manufacturing Co.

WHITE HOUSE CITES THEM—President Roosevelt yesterday honored 10 production workers who were introduced to him by WPB Chairman Donald Nelson (second from right) with the explanation that each had given his employers a suggestion which either speeds or improves the quality of war output. Each received a medal or certificate of individual production merit

Alexandria Sets Council Hearing On Record Budget

The Alexandria City Council will conduct a public hearing on an all-time record budget proposed for 1943 next Wednesday night at 7:30 in the chambers of the Corporation Court, City Manager Carl Budwesky announced yesterday. Persons interested in the general budget or individual appropriation items are invited to attend and express their views.

The tentative budget calls for appropriations totaling $1,754,644, representing an increase of about $90,000 over the operational figure for the current year. Largest individual item is the sum of $315,000 tentatively allocated for public school operation and maintenance.

City officials have announced that, despite the increase in the tentative total, no increase over the existing tax rate of $2.50 on the $100 property valuation is contemplated.

Following next week's public hearing, the council will take final action on the new budget at its last December meeting.

Cadets Get New Caps

Woodstock, Va., Dec. 10.—Priorities are being felt at Massanutten Military Academy here. The cadets, for the first time since the last World War, have been outfitted in gray overseas caps, replacing the traditional visored fatigue caps which are unobtainable.

Arlington Man Cited for Duty On Convoy

Comdr. Albert C. Murdaugh, 40, of 817 Twenty-sixth Place, Arlington, Va., was one of seven officers awarded the Legion of Merit for distinguished services in convoy operations, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

The Legion of Merit award was created last July and made retroactive to September 8, 1939, for members of the armed forces of the United States, of the Philippine government and of friendly foreign nations who distinguish themselves by "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services."

Others receiving the award were Capt. Marion Y. Cohen, Belmar, N. J.; Capt. John B. Heffernan, Washington, Ind.; Capt. George W. Johnson, Uxbridge, Mass.; Capt. Ralph W. Hungerford, Newport, R. I.; Capt. Edmund T. Wooldridge, Lawrencebury, Ky., and Capt. Paul Heineman, Philadelphia.

Commander Murdaugh, the citation accompanying his award said, "while commanding a United States naval vessel, and also commanding a task unit accompanying a convoy, by bold and skillful handling of his forces February 21-24, 1942, outfought, outmaneuvered, and finally eluded a determined and persistent attack by a concentration estimated to consist of five or six enemy submarines."

Prince Georges Seeks Funds For School in Suitland Area

Nicholas Orem, superintendent of schools for Prince Georges County, Md., yesterday started efforts to obtain Federal funds for construction of a high school for the Suitland, Md., area, site of a large Federal office building.

Superintendent Orem told the Prince Georges county Board of Education Tuesday that he would endeavor to obtain the money for the school under the Lanham Act.

The building would accommodate approximately 450 pupils and would be constructed of nonessential materials, Orem pointed out.

The school board expects to be faced with the need for providing a high school for an additional 250 pupils in the Suitland area when Federal housing projects under construction there are occupied.

Approximately 200 pupils in that area now are transported by school buses to the high schools at Oxon Hill, Surrattsville and Maryland Park, but these schools are overcrowded and additional buses to care for the added pupils probably will be unobtainable, Orem said.

Farmers Complain About 'Gas' Ration

Prince Georges County farmers are complaining that the Office of Defense Transportation has been unreasonable in computing the amount of gasoline they can be allotted under certificates of war necessity.

J. C. Sweeney, in charge of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration office at Upper Marlboro, said approximately 50 county farmers who applied for gasoline for their farm trucks had received allocations of about enough gas to run them 3100 miles a year.

One farmer had asked for fuel to travel 35,000 miles a year and another who asked for 3500 but each received the same 3100-mile allowance.

Approximately 225 other farmers who filed applications for gasoline allotments received only about 70 per cent of their needs, Sweeney said.

"If these farmers attempt to cut their mileage they probably will have to go out of business," he said.

Sweeney said it is possible the 50 farmers did not fill out their application blanks correctly and that all of them intend to file appeals.

New Typewriters Banned for Bureaus

Harold D. Smith, Director of the Bureau of the Budget, yesterday issued instructions making it mandatory for all Federal non-military agencies to obtain typewriters only by "transfer" from other Government agencies.

The typewriter equipment of the Army, Navy, lend-lease and the merchant fleet of the War Shipping Administration is being procured from the public through a purchase campaign being conducted by WPB and Procurement.

Random Paragraphs—Picked Up in Passing—About Persons of More Than Passing Importance

Don't be surprised if Admiral Jean Darlan and Gen. Charles de Gaulle turn up in Washington at the same time, one of these days before long. Rumors gathering currency in the Capital have it that Darlan plans to visit America as soon as the North African campaign is finished, and that De Gaulle's trip here may hit the boards at the same time. If that's the case, friends of both are hoping against hope that a miracle might happen—that the two might be brought together, in more ways than one, at a White House table.

"Of course that can never happen!" shouted a member of the Fighting French delegation yesterday when a guest at the Tixiers' reception for Admiral Georges Thierry d'Argenlieu expressed that hope. Well, stranger things have.

Something new and timely in Christmas greetings has already gone out from the Atlanta, Ga., office of Lawrence Wood Robert, jr. A copy of correspondence between Uncle Santa Claus and Chip reads as follows:

Mr. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr.
Mayflower Hotel,
Washington, D. C.
My dear Chip:

I am in serious trouble. You well know the manpower shortage and the overtaxed postoffice and transportation facilities, and the numerous priorities and rationing of critical materials. All of these directly affect MY business, and I must get relief somewhere. I need and invite your cooperation by earnestly suggesting that you limit your Christmas to those away from home in the armed services and those their loved ones left behind. Further, after this is done, I urge investing any surplus and everything else possible in war bonds to insure VICTORY. I am calling on your friends everywhere to consider doing likewise.

With best wishes for Christmas and the new year, I am,
Ever sincerely.
UNCLE SANTA CLAUS.

The reply is:

Dear Uncle Santa Claus:

Your message makes real sense to me. Whether intended or not, your suggestion if reasonably followed will go a great distance toward halting inflation and will at the same time encourage additional investing in War Bonds for Victory—so vital and necessary at this time. You can count on me to follow your plan 100 per cent. Goodby and good luck for the duration.

CHIP ROBERT.

An additional "office memo" from Chip carries as an N. B., this note:

I'm sure in these tragic days this makes as much sense to you as it does to me, so Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year for 1943.

One person who definitely doesn't underrate the current power of the Japanese fighting forces is Lieut. Gen. Delos Emmons, commanding general of the Hawaiian Department, who is now in Washington for conferences with the General Staff. Like Ambassador Grew, General Emmons has expressed himself as feeling that the war in the Pacific will be long and hard.

There are too many young "Franklins" and "Winstons" in German-occupied Holland, according to a report in a recent issue of the Netherlands News Digest . . . and the Nazi powers-that-be have taken steps to stop the trend. Recognizing the fact that Winston Churchill and Franklin D. Roosevelt are sufficiently annoying within themselves, without having their namesakes running around in Holland, the Nazi Secretary-General of Justice has sent the following circular to Holland's registrars:

"It has happened repeatedly that parents have chosen names for their children to express their political disposition. It is clear that giving such names is not only an undesirable demonstration which might cause German authorites to take measures against the domonstrators, but can occur only with the cooperation of the registrars.

"When the registrar does not succeed in dissuading parents from their intention, he may inscribe only the first of the chosen names. Other names, openly challenging German authorities, such as Franklin or Winston are not allowed."

A recent Camp Livingston communique carries an account of an elderly German who paused at a Berlin news stand each day, read all the headlines carefully, and never purchased a paper. Finally, bursting with curiosity, the newsboy asked him what was the big idea.

"Well," sighed the old man, "I just look at the front page to see who's dead."

"But," explained the newsboy, "that news isn't on page 1. The obituaries are on page 4.

"The one I'm looking for," replied the old man, "will be on page 1."

President of Cuba Feted At Dinner

The President of Cuba, Gen. Fulgencio Batista, on the third day of his Washington visit, was entertained at dinner last evening by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and earlier in the day was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller, who entertained at the 1925 F Street Club.

Invited to meet the distinguished visitor at luncheon were the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso, the American Ambassador to Cuba, Spruille Braden; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smith, Admiral and Mrs. Emory Land, Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. John J. Eugenia Pope Is Engaged

An announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Eugenia Pope of New York and Washington, and George Boll of Sea Island, Ga.

Miss Pope, who is now making her home in New York, is well-known to Washington, where she has served as assistant to the Wage and Hour Administrator; technical aide to John Biggers, research assistant to Harry L. Hopkins and secretary to the United States delegation of the twenty-third session of the International Institute of Statistics, held in Athens, Greece.

Lieut., Mrs. Martin On Wedding Trip To Oklahoma

Lieut. and Mrs. Oscar M. Martin, jr., married on Wednesday evening in the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, left immediately after the wedding reception for Oklahoma City, Okla., the bridegroom's home, and from there will go to Orlando, Fla., where he is stationed.

Before her marriage the bride was Miss K. Elizabeth Yost, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Edward Yost. The candlelight ceremony was held at 8:30 o'clock.

Ivory satin fashioned the bride's gown which had a round neck with an off-the-shoulder yoke of Battenburg lace. The skirt fell into a long train. A Queen Anne hood of lace edged with a tiny ruffle held the long veil of illusion which was caught at the sides with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias with an orchid center.

Mrs. J. Woodrow Thomas, the matron of honor, was in a gown of peacock blue velvet with a bouffant taffeta skirt. She carried Talisman roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Frances Louise Goebel and Miss Beatrice Alice Slade, who wore gowns of rose velvet and taffeta and halos of flowers to hold their short tulle veils. Their flowers were tea roses.

Lieut. Donald R. Hill served as best man and ushers included Lieut. William E. Yost, jr., brother of the bride; Lieut. Mark Herschede, Lieut. Jack Garland Hines, and Lieut. Robert Huff, fellow officers of the bridegroom in overseas duty last year.

Miss Reynolds To Be Bride

Mrs. Eustace Reynolds of this city, formerly of Scarsdale, N. Y., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Patricia Reynolds, to Thomas Day Seymour Bassett.

The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Eustace Reynolds, who was special attorney with the Department of Justice and later with the Office of Price Administration.

She was graduated from Vassar College in 1940 and since has been teaching at the Hartridge School in Plainfield, N. J.

Mr. Bassett is the son of the late Professor Samuel Bassett, formerly president of the American Philological Association and head of the Classical Department of the University of Vermont. He attended the Choate School and was graduated from Yale University in 1935. At present he is on the staff of the National Archives. They will be married on December 26, in St. Johns' Episcopal Church.

Another Era's Grandeur Joins Scrap Heap

'Fighting French' Hero, d'Argenlieu Is Feted

Admiral of Fleet Is Here On Mission From Gen. De Gaulle

By Elizabeth Henney

All went merry as a marriage bell—and it was an illustrious gathering that turned out yesterday afternoon at the Carlton to do honor to a medium-sized, trim, former Carmelite monk, who as admiral of a French fleet sailed into the hell of German gunfire to emerge thrice a hero.

Undoubtedly many of the guests, who included official representatives from all of the United Nations, knew the guest of honor only as Rear Admiral Georges Thierry d'Argenlieu, whose hosts were M. and Mme. Adrien Tixier. M. Tixier is the official representative of Gen. De Gaulle's Fighting French.

Pleasant, smiling, Admiral d'Argenlieu, who greeted guests with a friendly handshake, has a career that would make a Dumas hero pale with envy.

Graduated from the French Naval Academy at Brest, he put the first marks on his record of naval hero as commander of a submarine during World War I. When the lights came on again all over the world after that fracas he turned his thoughts to his first love, philosophy and religion, and in 1920 he entered the Order of the Carmelites. With the same natural bent for leadership he rose shortly to be head of a Carmelite province.

Came another World War and like a fire horse smelling smoke, the admiral had to be back in harness again. He came back to the French navy and served with distinction in the defense of the harbor of Cherbourg.

Captured by the Germans he wasted no time lingering in prison, escaped disguised as a French peasant and crossed the Channel in a sailing skiff, where he joined Gen. De Gaulle in London.

Appointed Pacific Commander of Free French

Next adventure on this amazing man's program, was a mission to Dakar as Gen. De Gaulle's peace emissary. Though he entered the Dakar harbor flying the white flag of truce, those not-so-gentle Nazis blazed away at the ship and in the fray the admiral received wounds that kept him hospitalized for six months.

Up again and spoiling for adventure, he was sent to head the Free French in Central Africa and later appointed by De Gaulle as Pacific commander of the Free French to defend French possessions in the Far East.

Now in Washington for reasons of state, he will be off for London the end of the week to make his report to General De Gaulle.

In spite of factional differences among the French at the moment, all joined to do honor to this man of God who became a man of action when the enemy threatened his homeland.

Receiving at the door of the Carlton Room during the twilight hours yesterday were the host and hostess, the guest of honor and the latter's two personal assistants, Maurice Schwob and Lieutenant de Vesins.

Many Distinguished Guests Attend

Among the distinguished company who presented their greeting and then gathered round the festive table for a spot of refreshment were Field Marshal Sir John Dill, accompanied by several members of the British admiralty; Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle, Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, Admiral Sir Wilfred French, the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Loudon, the Danish Minister and Mme. de Kauffmann, the Indian Agent General and Lady Bajpai, and military and naval attaches from practically every Allied country.

Chief of Press Relations Maj. Gen. Alexander Day Surles and Mrs. Surles stopped in, and others noted included Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Davis, Hans Habe, the well-known author; Capt. Leland P. Lovette, U. S. N.; Mrs. Truxton Beale, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Alling.

Chatting with Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis were the Czecho-Slovakian Minister, Vladimir Hurban, and Mme. Hurban. Minister Hurban will leave today on a mission which will eventually take him to London to consult with his government in exile there.

Page Enoch Arden! Or, Why Come Back?

Warning to missing men! If you've been missing, in action or otherwise, for a full year, and if you are either an officer or an enlisted man, you just better stay missing, pal.

Because, if you suddenly turn up after that time, you're going to find yourself owing the Government a lot of dough.

A recent ruling by the War Department has just been made, whereby an officer or enlisted man, who has been reported missing, or missing in action for 12 whole months, will be declared officially dead.

At that time the six month's gratuity (pay to you) provided by law, will be paid to his dependent or heir.

But, and that's a large one, if the lad turns up alive any time later, his pay account will be reopened and he will be charged with that gratuity (six months pay).

Of course the "officer in charge of the department will be authorized to arrange a monthly basis for this repayment, at his discretion," which means that a kindly officer may be able to remove that money in practically painless fashion.

But, if you've been declared officially dead, it's going to be a lot cheaper to stay that way. Half a year's pay is a lot of spinach.

Benefit Sale To Be Held

Mrs. Robert Lister Macneil will have open house again today at her home in Georgetown with a tea and sale for the benefit of the Scottish Clans Evacuation Plan.

Mrs. Owen J. Roberts will be among those pouring tea and others who will be at the tea table and taking part in selling will be Miss Mary Louisa Clement, Miss Bertha Noyes, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Upshur Moorehead, Mrs. Robert Gardiner and Mrs. Wayne Macpherson.

Articles from the Highland Home Industries will be among the attractions for sale.

Local Landmark Shorn of Last Shred of Glamour

The luxurious past joins the realism of the war present.

A Nazi plane may some day dive screamingly to earth, its fuselage torn to shreds by bullets made from the portable Turkish baths of the Leiter mansion. Or a Jap battleship may lurch to the bottom under the impact of a torpedo made from the steel vault doors that once guarded the precious wares of the Leiter wine cellar. Or an American bomber, fashioned from the metal of the Leiter silver-coated aluminum chandeliers, may pay a visit to Tokyo. And the final fate of the wrought iron fence from the famous Dupont Circle residence lies with the melting furnace.

Yes, the grandeur of another era has joined the scrap heap, and the Leiter mansion, now a Government office, has been shorn of its last shreds of glamour. Like its heir, Tommy Leiter, now a draftee, the estate is joining the war effort.

Miss Louderback To Be Bride In January

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Louderback of Stanley, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Frances Louderback, to Ensign Edward W. Hiserman, U. S. N. R.

Miss Louderback, who is now teaching at Swanson Junior High School in Arlington, attended Virginia Intermont College at Bristol, Va., and is a graduate of Mary Baldwin College in Staunton.

Mr. Hiserman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Hiserman of Charleston, W. Va. He was graduated from Washington and Lee University in the class of 1936 and two years later from the Washington and Lee Law School. He is now on duty in Portsmouth, Va.

The marriage will take place January 9.

Children's Museum Has Holiday Schedule

A schedule of festive events for children during the holiday season has been announced by the directors of the Children's Museum, located in Audubon Park, on Massachusetts Avenue.

Although the museum will be closed on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day, the remaining days of the season have been allotted to a variety of activities.

Highlight of the program will be the Christmas festival on Wednesday, December 23, when an afternoon party at 4 o'clock will center around the traditional tree and Yule log. There will be refreshments and carol singing and the young visitors can view the display of special Christmas exhibits.

On Saturday, December 26, and Monday, December 28, there will showings of sound films and on Tuesday afternoon a reception will be held following the performance of "Pinocchio" at the National Theater. Members of the cast will be honor guests.

Members of the Children's Museum have been invited to spend Wednesday afternoon, December 30, at the D. A. R. Museum. They will be entertained by an exhibit and talk on "Childhood in Early America," and a playlet on "Early American Schools."

December exhibits at the Children's Museum include those on birds wintering in Washington, hand-carved Portuguese dolls, regiments of toy soldiers and old toy banks.

It has been a little less than a year ago that the Children's Museum came into being in Washington. A committee of interested persons formulated the idea and put it into effect on February 22 of this year. The children took over immediately and have set up their own clubs and outlined their preferred activities. Formed into groups they study such things as stamp collecting, toy making, nature, art, sewing, cooking, clay modeling and Spanish.

The museum is open to all children, without charge; but it is entirely dependent for support on contributions and memberships. In war-crowded, stay-at-home Washington, it has proved a boon to many children and their hard-working parents.

Capt. Hamer and Bride At Home In New Jersey

East Orange, N. J., is the temporary residence of Capt. Edward Ryan Hamer, U. S. Army, and his bride, the former Miss Katharine Butler Foster.

Their marriage took place on Saturday in St. Thomas' Episcopal Church at 5 o'clock, with the Rev. H. S. Wilkinson officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy B. Foster of Greenville, S. C., and Capt. Hamer is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Douglas Hamer of McColl, S. C.

Mr. Foster gave his daughter in marriage. She was attired in a blue afternoon frock embroidered with silver and a blue velvet beret hat. Her ivory prayer-book was covered with a spray of orchids. Miss Elizabeth Foster, the bride's maid of honor, wore a two-piece rose-colored dress and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of pink roses and forget-me-knots. H. N. Patterson was best man and ushers were Turner Bunn and Marion S. Hamer.

The bride attended Furman University and has been associated with the Inter-American Defense Board here. Captain Hamer was graduated from the University of North Carolina, George Washington Law School, and was formerly with the United States Treasury Department. He is a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity.

Carolyn Seviour To Be Married Christmas Night

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Carolyn Seviour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Seviour of Silver Spring, Md., to Talmadge Thompson, also of Silver Spring, on Christmas night at 8 o'clock in the Silver Spring Baptist Church.

The Rev. J. Wesley Loftis will officiate at the ceremony, which will be followed by a reception for close friends and relatives at the home of the bride-to-be's parents.

Miss Seviour has selected her sister, Miss Barbara Seviour, for her maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be the Misses Marjorie Reside, Frances Thompson, sister of the bridegroom-elect, both of Silver Spring; Roberta Kells of Mount Rainier, and Doris Ballard of Hyattsville.

Best man will be Merhle Weaver of Kossuth, Pa., and those who will serve as ushers are Mathew Peters of Washington, Buck Gwither of Mechanicsville, Md., and Edward Day of Baltimore.

Miss Seviour is a graduate of Montgomery Blair High School and the University of Maryland. Mr. Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Q. Thompson, is in his junior year in the medical school of the University of Maryland. The couple will make their home with Mr. and Mrs. Seviour.

Comdr. T. B. Clark And Family Home From Hawaii

Traveling from the West Coast in a bullet-ridden car, Lieut. Comdr. Thurston Boothe Clark, U. S. Naval Air Corps, and Mrs. Clark, and their two children, Fairfax and Ludlow, have arrived at their home in Warrenton, Va., for a stay until Commander Clark receives transfer to a new post.

The motor which the Clark family used for the trip East was the same which Commander Clark had in Hawaii and which was hit when the Japs attacked Pearl Harbor.

The Clarks will visit Commander Clark's mother, Mrs. John Gaines, at Warrenton, and Mrs. Clark's mother, Mrs. William Washington, who is spending the winter in Brunswick, Md. They will visit Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Frost at Middleburg this week and bring them news of their son, Lieut. Winston Frost, U. S. N., who has been in Commander Clark's squadron in the Pacific.

New Year Will Be Toasted In "Arsenic" at National

Boris Karloff and Original Cast Here Dec. 28; Longer Hours to Enroll for Guild Plays; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

SPECULATION as to the New Year's week attraction at the National Theater—and the only reason there has been any was because a tentative booking was not officially corroborated by Manager Edmund Plohn until Wednesday—now is put at rest by the announcement that beginning Monday, December 28, the attraction on E Street will be "Arsenic and Old Lace."

BORIS KARLOFF

This might be termed a "return engagement" of the Howard Lindsay-Russel Crouse smash comedy hit, except that everything will be new but the title and the script itself. It is the original Broadway company that is coming to town this trip, headed by Boris Karloff and including Josephine Hull, Joan Adair, John Alexander, Clinton Sundberg, Edgar Stehli and Donald MacDonald. Last time, it was the "second company"—second chronologically only, one imagined from its excellence, and in no other respect—with the late Laura Hope Crews, Effie Shannon, Erich von Stroheim and Jack Whiting in the principal roles.

The Joseph Kesselring three-acter would be a dilly in any hands, but the fact remains that Mr. Karloff and his associates will have to step to surpass the impression left by their predecessors in the same roles on the same stage.

Anyhow, now you know and can plan your New Year revelry accordingly.

Eleventh-hour subscribers to the four remaining plays in the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription season of six, at the National, who wish to take advantage of the opportunity to include "The Russian People" in the four-ply bargain, will find Bess Davis Schreiner's office on the Nationals mezzanine open daily from now until Christmas Eve. Better than that, the office, which always opens at 12 noon, will remain open every weekday until 6 p. m., instead of 5, as heretofore. The helpful Miss Schreiner drops the hint that the best available seat locations are for the second weeks of the two-week runs of all Guild plays in the Capital this season, and that seats remaining for the four plays to come are for the evening performances, priced at $9.35, $7.15 and $4.40.

Drama for the Doughboys

On Sunday afternoon, immediately following the conclusion of her sellout engagement in Ford's Theater, Baltimore, and preceding the one beginning Monday, December 14, in the Forrest Theater, Philadelphia, Katharine Cornell and her admirable company seen at the National last week, will give a special matinee performance of Chekhov's "The Three Sisters" at Fort George G. Meade, Md., for 1000 enlisted men in Theater No. 4, at an admission charge of 15 cents.

Three other dramas with their Broadway casts have given complete performances at Fort Meade during the past year, but all have been on their way out of New York, instead of in. Miss Cornell and her distinguished cast will be transported to Meade in a bus, especially chartered by permission of the War Department, to play in a replica of their own production being constructed by volunteers from the Thirteenth Special Service Unit, the 1322nd Service Unit and the 603rd Engineer Camouflage Battalion. The performance was negotiated by Maj. Thomas C. Ferguson, Post Special Service Officer. During their afternoon's visit the company will be entertained by Col. O. S. Wood, in command of the fort.

This will mark Miss Cornell's first appearance in an Army Camp, but it might be borne in mind that her 35 performances of Shaw's "Candida" late last season netted the sum of $36,817.59 for the Army Emergency Fund and a like amount for the Navy Relief Society.

And since we've gotten into figures, last week's engagement of "The Three Sisters" at the National grossed $28,940, with every seat occupied at every performance and no standing room sold—a record for the house at the $3.30 price scale. The mail order sale in Baltimore amounted to $22,000 before the curtain went up on opening night. Advance sales at the Forrest in Philadelphia are reported as unprecedented. Mme. Litvinoff and your reporter, you may recall, both thought Miss Cornell, her cast and her play deserved it.

A large delegation of Broadway notables, Hollywood play scouts and representatives of other interests are coming to town to attend the premiere of Simonov's "The Russian People" Monday night. Following the first performance, the Theater Guild is hosting at a midnight soiree in the North Room of the Mayflower in honor of the event.

The Gals Are Packing 'Em In

Since it hasn't been mentioned here before—much—it only seems fair to make known that "The Doughgirls" is selling out at the National. Despite the instant popularity into which Joseph Fields' feverish frolic has leaped, Producer Max Gordon has reclaimed his options on the Baltimore and Philadelphia weeks and will not explode his new bombshell on Broadway until Christmas, give or take a day or two one side or the other.

Tonight and tomorrow night, in the Wardman Park Theater, Cue and Curtain, George Washington U.'s, dramatic group, are putting on a little something by George S. Kaufman, director of "Doughgirls," and Moss Hart, called "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Walter Ludwig will be the Sheridan Whiteside, with Mina Brown as Maggie Cutler.

C. U. Presents Calderon Play

By Ernest L. Schier

Reaching back to the seventeenth century, the Speech and Drama department of Catholic University has chosen for its latest offering a little known and rarely seen play which is representative of the highest form of culture attained by the Spanish Renaissance.

Likened, in the program notes, to Shakespeare's "Hamlet," Calderon's "Life Is a Dream" is, no matter what else it may be considered, an interesting play. Even if it only serves to revive interest in what was once an active, flourishing theater.

Calderon's story is sometimes fantastic and sometimes philosophical. It tells of a Polish king who, foreseeing the evil future of his heir, imprisoned his son at birth on a lonely mountain top. When the time comes that he must choose his successor he frees the fiery prince to prove his worth as a ruler.

This first experiment proves the King's convictions and the son is returned, only to be freed again by a rebellion. But, having learned that "life is a dream" and that no one can thwart the Fates, the prince checks his impulses and turns his lust for revenge to love and mercy.

A new group of young actors are taking the place of those former competents whose work has called them away.

In the role of Sigismund, the imprisoned Prince, James Murphy revealed promise of things to come. Seeming more at home than the others, Marion Wolberg brought, in addition to her grace and beauty, a quality of understanding that belies her years. Dick Sykes Basilio, the King, was properly old and worried.

Director Walter Kerr has striven valiantly to give impetus to a slow-moving first act and managed admirably to keep the other two going at a fast clip. The "miracle man," Ralph Brown, has again improvised a magnificent setting.

The play will be presented each night at 8:30, through next Tuesday at the University Theater.

And Where for the Bicarbonate?

ROSALIND RUSSELL

the usually sartorially sumptuous, takes off for a dinner date with Fred MacMurray—cocktails in New York, clams in Philadelphia, apple pie at Virginia Beach and coffee in New Orleans. The meat shortage, no doubt, is what ails the menu. Anyhow, that's the way they are said to do it in "Flight for Freedom," something RKO-Radio is cooking up, with no release date set as yet

HEDDA HOPPER

That Salary Ceiling!

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 10.—Now that our stars are holding private meetings about the new salary limitations, I think they should read what John Ewing, publisher and editor of the Shreveport Times, says. He's a Southern Democrat, and a staunch friend of President Roosevelt. He writes:

MERLE OBERON

"The Federal limitation of $25,000 is probably the greatest piece of political hokum which any political group has ever tried to coax people to swallow. In peacetime, democracy itself was used as a disguise for communism, and in wartime, the very war to save democracy is used as a means to replace it wherever possible with socialism or communism. Few indeed can be so gullible as to believe that the blowers of the $25,000 bubble want it to be temporary. Analyzed to its full depth, it's plain communism, but communism of a type which Joseph Stalin has discarded in Russia. Stalin was smart enough to know that destroying incentive of its citizen destroys the citizen himself, and can only result in national disintegration. It's hokum because it tries to tell the man of low income that lowering the income of someone else will raise his own. It's hokum because it pretends to appeal to and be backed by union labor, where actually the oldest and most soundly American labor union understands its danger to them and opposes it. The A. F. L. has never followed the communist paths so often taken by the C. I. O., which threw its full strength behind the moves to get Earl Browder, Communist Party secretary, released from Federal prison by President Roosevelt—and succeeded. The salary ceiling does not provide Government revenue nor help the man of low income. It does not help win the war. It's simply a step toward establishment of the principle of communism and destruction of the foundation of Americanism which the American people have built during their 166 years of freedom and liberty, and for which they are again fighting."

It was a gallant gesture of Merle Oberon, traveling 6000 miles to Ireland and England to help entertain our soldiers. Yet the Hollywood canteen is only a few miles from her home, and has been skipped entirely by the lady, except for one appearance.

Lois Andrews is really mad now. Her little daughter managed to get hold of her collection of perfume, and dumped the whole batch of sweet smelling stuff into the bathtub.

The Lee J. Cobbs (he's that fine Broadway actor) expect the stork mid-March.

The Rev. Gerald K. Winrod's secretary has been subpenaed again by the Washington grand jury investigating Nazi propaganda. When she testified there before, the prosecutor was overheard warning her in the foyer: "Next time you come back better have a lawyer with you" . . . The ODT is sending inspectors to Sarasota, where the Ringling Circus has its winter quarters, to inspect the 90 cars used by the circus in its tours. The Government wants to rent these cars in the off season. In the meantime John Ringling North, head of the circus, bought the rights to Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" for the elephant ballet next season . . . Gertrude Lawrence will return to England in her starring role in Moss Hart's "Lady in the Dark" in August.

ALFRED LUNT

Governor-elect Tom Dewey won't be able to make any changes in his New York State War Council until next July. The present members of the Council were named by the Legislature to serve until then . . . This column's newest outlets are the Louisville Courier-Journal and the Akron Beacon-Journal . . . Sir Thomas Beecham is expected to take over the Detroit Symphony Orchestra on January 1. George Szell may take over the Chicago Orchestra that day . . . Oskar, the pet black cat of the German battleship Bismarck, now is at a Sailor's Rest in northern Ireland. Oskar survived the sinking not only of the Bismarck but also of the Ark Royal.

Charlie Yates is the theatrical agent who once managed Bob Hope and now manages Bob Evans, the ventriloquist. Great as is his affection for his clients and for the bread and butter which they provide him, Yates has a greater love—for the race track. And it was this diversion which caused a severance of relations between Charlie and Bob Hope. The comic delivered an ultimatum to his agent: "Charlie, you'll have to decide between the horses and me. Now, which way will you go?" . . . "I'm going out to Belmont," said Yates, reaching for his hat. "Which way you goin'?"

Alfred Lunt will deliver "Pericles' Funeral Oration" at the Greek Day program at Town Hall next Monday . . . Capt. Ted Lawson, who lost a leg during the bombing raid over Tokyo, now is walking again, without crutches . . . Marvin McIntyre and David Niles now are handling the Federal patronage in Washington . . . Amon Carter, the Texas publisher, is in England. He went there as a war correspondent for the paper he owns. Carter has no time to send dispatches, but this is how he covers the war for his Texans: He visits all camps and talks with the Texans there. He cables their names and addresses to his editor—who phones their homes to report they're okay.

Ilsa Freud, daughter-in-law of Sigmund Freud, arrived in this country last month after a five-year flight from Germany. She withstood the constant bombardment in France and managed to flee to Africa. And hers was the last vessel out of Casablanca before the American troops arrived there . . . "How did you manage, under such a long, severe strain, to maintain your morale?" Mrs. Freud was asked. "How were you able to keep going?" . . . "I made up my mind, each day, that I personally was fighting Hitler," she explained. "And I didn't want him to triumph."

Maj. Raymond Massey has acquired the American rights to the play and music, "Br'er Rabbit," in which he appeared 20 years ago. Massey will produce it when the war is over, with Ray Bolger playing the title role and Massey playing the role of Mr. Man

Palace Continues Masquerade

The susceptibility of the credulous male to the blandishment of even counterfit youth will continue to demonstrate itself on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater during a second week of "The Major and the Minor," in which Ray Milland and Ginger Rogers comprise the title.

Miss Rogers, driven to desperation by the wolves lurking in the metropolitan jungles, finds it necessary to assume the guise of a 12-year-old in order to reach her Midwestern home on a half-fare ticket. The conductor, however, is less gullible than Major Milland, in whose Pullman stateroom she seeks asylum. Major Milland is headmaster at the junior military academy and has the faulty judgement to take his newly acquired charge to the institution commanded by the father of the sweetly vindictive young thing to whom he is betrothed. Miss Rogers not only successfully disrupts the school's morale, untrusses her benefactor's love affair and plays hob generally, but in the final sequences caps the whole merry business by switching to the opposite extreme and impersonates her own mother—a role briefly theretofore assumed by her real mother, Lela Rogers.

Although Miss Rogers occasionally permits herself to slide a few years over her allotted 12, her dissembling is sufficently authentic to generate a vast amount of fun. Mr. Milland is happily cast and splendid performances also are contributed by Rita Johnson, Robbert Benchley, Diana Lynn, Edward Fielding, Frankie Thomas, jr., and a considerable number of others.

New Stage Bill at the Capitol

A versatile group of performers, topped by Laughmaster Lew Parker, have taken over this week's stage show at the Capitol Theater to fortify the second week of the Hedy Lamarr vehicle, "White Cargo."

Featured entertainer of many a Broadway revue, Chaz Chase, that amazing fellow who consumes lighted cigarettes, matches and anything else in sight, is back again to continue his gastronomic feats, defying all laws of good sense, to say nothing of health. In addition to making dinner of his shirt and tie, Mr. Chase indulges in a burlesque strip-tease and a comedy dance that are certain to amuse.

In the vocal department lovely Sara Ann McCabe warbles a few popular songs of the day and winds up with a medley of Gershwin tunes. Yesterday's opening audience called her back for an effective encore of Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine."

Nils and Nadynne provide a graceful routine of ballroom dances and Lew Parker, versatile master of ceremonies, holds forth with a number of amusing comedy conceits.

The opening "Drum Number" and the closing "American Prayer" pageant are hold-overs from last week's bill.

Supporting Miss Lamarr in the screen version of the well-known stage play are such stellar cinema personsalities as Walter Pigeon, Richard Carlson, Frank Morgan and Bramwell Fletcher.

Obituaries

T.P. Littlepage, D. C. Attorney, Is Dead at 69

Thomas Price Littlepage, 69, prominent attorney who was cited by the Cosmopolitan Club as "the citizen who performed the most outstanding and unselfish service to the city" during 1934, died at 10:25 p. m. yesterday in Emergency Hospital.

In poor health for several years, he was a pneumonia patient in the hospital when a sudden heart attack brought on his death.

Funeral services tentatively have been arranged for Saturday, with interment in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Native of Indiana

A native of Spencer County, Indiana, Mr. Littlepage was senior member of the law firm of Littlepage, Littlepage & Williams, with offices in the Investment Building. He had made his home for a number of years on his farm near Bowie, Md., although continuing his law practice here until the recent past, when ill health made inroads upon his activities.

Mr. Littlepage, long an active worker in civic and charitable pursuits, was president of the Chamber of Commerce before it merged with the Board of Trade, and held membership in the Cosmos and Alfalfa Clubs, once serving the latter organization as president.

In Banking Business

His business interests extended to banking as well as to law, and he was vice president of the Bank of Bowie and a director of Liberty National Bank. He was a member, too, of several Masonic organizations, including Temple-Noyes Lodge.

Mr. Littlepage attended Indiana State Normal at Terre Haute; received the LL. B. and LL. M. degrees from George Washington Law School (then Columbian) in 1904, and immediately began the practice of law here.

He is survived by his wife and five children: Mrs. Willard L. Hart, Mrs. William B. Fletcher and John M. Littlepage of Washington; Thomas P. Littlepage, jr., of the U. S. Navy, and James H. Littlepage, Richmond, Va.

Allemann Rites Set Tomorrow At Takoma Park

Dr. Albert Allemann died yesterday at his home, 705 Garland Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., after a short illness. He was 83.

A native of Soleure, Switzerland, Dr. Alleman was educated in European schools and came to this country in 1884. He specialized in languages and was graduated from George Washington University Medical School in 1904.

He became associated with the Army medical library here as a translator, having qualified in French, German, Spanish and Italian and later was named principal assistant librarian there. He retired in 1932.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ruth W. Allemann; a son, William A. Allemann; two daughters, Mrs. Grace L. Muzzy and Mrs. Helen P. Beyer, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the Takoma Park funeral home, 254 Carroll Street, Takoma Park, D. C. Burial will be in Washington Memorial Cemetery.

L. E. Kirstein, Merchant, Dies

Boston, Dec. 10 (INS).—Louis E. Kirstein, 75, merchant prince and philanthropist, died today at Beth Israel Hospital of pneumonia contracted after he was operated upon recently. He was 75 years old.

Kirstein, who for the past 31 years has been vice president of William Filene's Sons Co. in Boston, was born in Rochester, N. Y., one of the six children of a German immigrant. He was president of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, president of the Board of the West End House and head of the Training School for Jewish Social Workers in New York.

He is survived by his wife, the former Rose Stein of Rochester, N. Y., and three children, Mrs. Mina Curtiss, English instructor at Smith College; Lincoln, author and critic, and George, New York department store executive now doing war work at Washington.

Quartermaster Aide Dies at Conference

Baltimore, Dec. 10 (AP).—Richard Meyer, bakery specialist for the Office of the Quartermaster General in Washington, collapsed and died today while attending a conference in the Office of the Quartermaster General of the Third Service Command.

Meyer, a resident of Ridgewood, N. J., was addressing a conference of bakery officials when, in the middle of a sentence, he collapsed.

Jessie Gordon Dies

Oswego, N. Y., Dec. 10 (AP).—Miss Jessie Fairfield Gordon, internationally known artist and pottery designer, died today. Included in her work are the tiles in the pergola of the Pan-American Building in Washington. Her pottery has been shown at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

Appellation Suited To Japs Barred From Time Film

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—An appellation which would suggest the Japanese were illegitimate has been deleted from a March of Time motion picture feature, "We Are the Marines," by order of the Will Hays office, Time, Inc., disclosed tonight.

Elimination of two other words—hell and damn—also was ordered, Roy E. Larsen, president of Time, said as he announced that an appeal would be taken.

Pointing out that the Hays office ordered somewhat similar deletions from Noel Coward's British picture, "In Which We Serve," Larsen said he believed the previous ruling was "quite different" from the situation in "We Are the Marines."

"We Are the Marines" was an American-made film showing accurately the action and dialogue of United States marines, he said.

The picture portrays the marines on duty in the Philippines when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and other islands.

Notice is hereby given that the jury in the above entitled cause returned its verdict therein on the 8th day of December, 1942, and by said verdict assessed benefits against the following lands or parcels of land in the following amounts: Parcel 132/21, $400.00; Parcel 141/26, $900.00; Parcel 133/21, $4,300.00; Parcel 141/15, $500.00; Parcel 141/18, $250.00; Parcel [illegible], $600.00; Parcel 141/32, $674.60; Parcel 141/35, $415.00; Parcel 141/28, $840.00. SQUARE 4082—Lot 26, $100.00; Lot 25, $100.00. SQUARE 4081—Lot 1, $100.00; Lot 42, $100.00. SQUARE W-4080—Lot 1, $60.00. SQUARE 4046—Lot 20, $30.00; Lot 21, $20.00; Lot 22, $20.00; Lot 23, $10.00; Lot 24, $10.00; Lot 25, $10.00; Lot 10, $10.00; Lot 11, $10.00. SQUARE 4052—Lot 805, $1,092.80; Lot 820, $1,004.30; Lot 821, $1,005.02; Lot 822, $1,003.02; Lot 824, $1,105.50. SQUARE 4048—Lot 36, $20.00; Lot 37, $30.00; Lot 38, $40.00; Lot 39, $50.00; Lot 40, $50.00; Lot 41, $40.00; Lot 42, $40.00; Lot 43, $40.00; Lot 44, $50.00. SQUARE 4059—Lot 14, $100.00; Lot 13, $100.00. Therefore, it is by the Court this 9th day of December, 1942, ordered that objections to said verdict of property owners assessed for benefits (no part of whose land was condemned in this proceeding) be filed in said cause on or before the said 30th day of December, 1942, otherwise said verdict will be finally ratified and confirmed upon the application thereto for by the petitioners in said cause: Provided, however, that a copy of this notice and order be published once in each The Washington Post, the Washington Evening Star, and the Washington Times-Herald, newspapers published in the District of Columbia, at least ten days before the said 30th day of December, 1942. EDWARD C. EICHER, Chief Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By H. B. DERTZBAUGH, Deputy Clerk.

QUIET, SANTA WILL BE BROUGHT INTO THIS ROOM SOON. WHEN HE COMES IN, SHOVE OUT YOUR LIP, MUSSY. YOU, TOO, SHOW YOUR TEETH, MIE. I'LL FROTH AT THE MOUTH, THAT OUGHT TO IMPRESS HIM.
HERR CLAUS, I'M TOLD THAT YOU ARE OF TEUTONIC DESCENT—IN FACT, WERE ONCE KNOWN AS KRIS KRINGLE. AS A TRUE GERMAN, PREACH THE DOCTRINE OF THE NEW ORDER AND YOU CAN BECOME AN IMPORTANT COG IN OUR SET-UP.
I AM NOT A GERMAN, NOR AM I FRENCH, OR AMERICAN OR ANY OTHER NATIONALITY. MY NATIONALITY IS UNIVERSAL—I LIVE IN THE HEARTS OF ALL GOOD MEN.
SAVE THAT PIOUS TALK FOR THE DEMOCRACIES. GET WISE TO YOURSELF, MR. WHISKERS. TIE UP WITH MUSSY, TOO, AND ME AND THE WORLD WILL BE THE OYSTER OF A PRIVILEGED FEW.
NOT INTERESTED AND AS FOR YOU MURDERERS, DELUDE YOURSELVES WITH VISIONS OF GRANDEUR WHILE YOU CAN. YOUR DOWNFALL WILL BE CERTAIN AND SOON—YOU WILL GO THE WAY OF ALL GRASPING TYRANTS. PERISH IN BLOODY DEFEAT....
GOOD FOR YOU, SANTA! GIVE THOSE MANIACS AN EARFUL!

Holiday Week Cuts U. S. Bank Clearings

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—Bank clearings in the week ended Wednesday dropped below those reported last week, which included only five days because of the Thanksgiving Holiday, Dun & Bradstreet said today.

Transactions of 23 leading cities amounted to $7,314,301,000, an increase of 11.4 per cent from $6,568,671,000 in the like period a year ago. Current clearing declined $329,580,000, or 4.3 per cent, compared with the preceding week.

Ickes Wishes Everybody A Warm Christmas

The honey-voiced radio crooners who dream of a white Christmas are getting no sympathy these days from Oil Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

Mindful that both a "white" Christmas and the traditional "Merry" Christmas envisage abundant amounts of snowfall—which bring a heavy drain on scarce fuel oil supplies—Ickes told his press conference today he was forced to modify his Yuletide greetings.

"This time," he said, "I don't wish you a 'Merry' Christmas, but a warm one."

Death of 2 Fliers Under Army Probe

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 10 (INS).—An investigation was ordered tonight into the death of two Army fliers, killed today when their training plane crashed on the outskirts of Terre Haute.

The falling plane sheared off the top of a power line pole and crashed into a garage.

The plane was based at George Field near Lawrenceville, Ill., and Army authorities there withheld identification of the victims pending notification of their next of kin.

Louis E. Kirstein Dies

Boston, Dec. 10 (AP).—Louis E. Kirstein, 75, chairman of the board of William Filene's Sons, one of Boston's largest department stores, and nationally known Jewish philanthropist, died today of pneumonia.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborne

Before a player can become a master he must develop a skillful defensive game, for probably more match points can be won on the defense than anywhere else. Two questions on the most important phase of defense, the opening lead, are presented today; there is also a question on play.

♠ A 7
♣ K Q 10 7 6

The bidding has gone:

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 N.T.	Pass	3 N.T.	Pass
Pass	Pass

What is your opening lead?

2. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♠ 10 9 5 2
♡ 8 7 4
◇ K J 7 3
♣ J 5

The bidding has gone:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

1. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

What is your opening lead?

3. This question concerns your play of today's hand at four spades. You are sitting South, and West opens the heart queen. How do you play to make your contract with an overtrick?

Answers to Quis

1. Many players will open the club king in this situation, even though the suit has been bid by declarer. The club lead is more attractive than the fourth-best heart and probably will be allowed to win. South can decide what card to continue after looking at dummy and his partner's play.

2. South's best lead is the four of hearts, as trump leads often are effective against this type of bidding. A lead from the doubleton club is not advisable, as the jack is too important a card.

3. South takes 11 tricks by keeping the dangerous hand out of the lead. He wins the opening lead in his hand, leads a small trump to dummy's king and finesses the jack on the way back. Although the usual practice is to play for a drop with nine trumps, including the ace-king, declarer must finesse to safeguard his game.

If the trick loses to the queen, West is in and the diamond king is safe. As it is, the jack holds, the ace is cashed and four clubs are run, South throwing off a diamond from the closed hand. He makes four spades with an overtrick, losing only two diamonds.

Note that if declarer goes up with the ace on the second round of trumps, East will get in later with the queen and lead through South's diamond king. The defense then will take three diamond tricks in addition to the spade queen to set the contract one.
